The Cape Cod life you've waited for is here. Now. In Duxbury.

Oceanwoods is selling as fast as it's being built, for a lot of reasons. Cape living, without the battle of the bridge. Quality construction and creative architecture you thought had passed you by. Residents' use of one of the world's great beaches, in one of New England's most beautiful towns.

Choice two-bedroom townhomes and condominiums remain, from 1500 to more than 2000 sq. ft. From $154,000 to $260,000. With a few remaining single-family residences, designed by award-winning architects.

Come enjoy 23 acres of salt air, balconies, ocean view, crickets at night and serenity—only 45 minutes from Boston. But, do it now. So someone else isn't enjoying what you should be.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a rehable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

Community Center renovation hearing set for Sept. 3

The Cohasset Common Commission reviewed plans for the renovation of the Cohasset Community Center's barn, and moved to hold a public hearing on the proposal before granting a certificate of approval.

The Common Commission reviews all such projects to determine if structural alterations of buildings in the historic district will have an impact on the appearance of the common.,

Don Larson, a member of the Community Center Board of Directors, presented the blueprints to the committee at their meeting in the town hall this week. The architect, St. Don and Associates of Marshfield, propose to add a functional cupola to the roof of the barn for ventilation purposes. The barn will be expanded somewhat and a ramp for handicapped persons will be installed.

Larson said the barn is being refurbished for use by the gymnastic program at the Community Center. This will allow the main building to be better utilized, he said. The new gymnastics center will allow the center to offer an extended nursery school program into the afternoon. Right now nursery school can only convene in the morning and make way for the gymnasts at noon.

While all members of the commission expressed satisfaction with the proposed designs, Chairman Gordon Stevens noted that significant structural changes to any building in the area merit a public hearing.

The Commission unanimously voted to schedule a public hearing on the proposal at their next meeting on September 3 at 8 p.m. The purpose for the hearing is to give all interested parties a chance to see the plans.

The Commission also voted unanimously to issue a certificate of approval for a new roof for St. Stephen's Rectory. Rev. Clifford Cutler said the work would begin sometime in the middle of September.

Committee needs name for French Committee

Selectman named three members to a new committee, but have yet to officially name the group.

Judy Keim, Elizabeth Warren and Francoise Nager were appointed Monday night to the committee which will oversee a cultural exchange with our sister town of Souppes-Sur-Loing, France. They would like to have one more member to act as committee chairman.

After Selectman Cliff Mitman protested that the group not be labeled The French Connection, the other members of the board took some time deciding what the title should be. Nothing was appropriate, so they decided that could be the first assignment of this new committee.

Anyone interested in participating in the committee should contact the selectmen's office.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. VII, no. 47 | 383-6731/545-7060 | thursday, august 22, 1985 | 3 sections | 35 cents

Town looks for disposal options

Cohasset will pursue alternative disposal plans rather than resting all hope on participation in the SEMASS trash-to-energy project.

Don DeMichele, chairman of the Area Disposal Study Committee talked recently with George Mallin, president of SEMASS. Based on the amount of refuse tonnage estimated by the proposed participants, Cohasset may not be accepted into the project. Cohasset is currently second on the waiting list but will not know its final status until all tonnage figures are calculated by mid-1987.

The only way Cohasset will be accepted now is if other towns refuse to sign the new SEMASS contract and drop from the program. Mallin told DeMichele two weeks ago that if Fairhaven and Achusnet did not sign the contract, it would leave room for the town of Dighton and perhaps Cohasset.

But DeMichele learned Tuesday that both towns have indicated their support of the revised SEMASS contract, and were expected to sign the document.

Now the only recourse for Cohasset is to wait until all contracts are returned by mid-September to see if any other towns have dropped from the program. In addition, participating towns will have until mid-1987 to determine their final refuse tonnage amounts.

"Mr. Mallin said several towns have indicated reluctance in signing the new single contract," DeMichele said this week. "But no one has backed out yet. So we will have to start looking at other alternatives."

Several months ago, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering required that anti-pollution devices known as acid gas scrubbers be installed before construction begins at the Rochester plant. That added construction cost will be passed onto SEMASS communities in the form of an increased tipping fee. Annually, that will mean an additional $20,000 to $28,000 for a community such as Cohasset which will dump approximately 12 tons per day.

What many communities are opposed to is the new single contract issued by SEMASS to the municipalities. Although the communities will pay higher costs than originally estimated, no town has voted not to sign the new contract.

If all the original participants accept the new contract and their tonnage estimations are not inflated, there is little chance that Cohasset will be accepted into the program.

Because these towns have until 1987 to prepare final tonnage figures, Cohasset won't know for sure if there is room to accomodate our trash. DeMichele said the only alternative is to begin looking at new alternatives for solid waste disposal.

Weymouth is proposing the construction of a disposal facility, but the costs have not been determined. "The proximity is good," DeMichele said, "but I know the fees will be higher than SEMASS and I don't think we are ready to stand up for a higher price."

The state, according to DeMichele, is reluctant to approve development of new landfills. Substantial water protection provisions would make that alternative cost-prohibitive, he added.

According to the latest study, there is approximately nine to 13 years left at the Cedar Street landfill.

"I just don't know what the alternatives will be," he said this week. "We can't sit and wait until 1987 to pursue other alternatives. We are going to have to start now. Without towns backing out of SEMASS, it doesn't seem as if we can get in."

Town meeting appropriated $5000 in April for the design of a transfer station at the landfill. The committee was in the midst of determining what method of transportation from the transfer station to the SEMASS plant would be most cost-efficient. Compactors and bins were being reviewed, in addition to the use of tractor-trailer equipment used to haul the refuse from Cohasset to Braintree or Rochester.

DeMichele still feels resource recovery is the best disposal option available for the town. He is hoping the committee can work quickly to review alternatives other than the SEMASS project.

"We're going to have to pursue all alternatives seriously, and make a decision without delay," he warned.

'Who's going first?' seems to be the question as teens line up along the Border Street bridge.

Parfait owner & taxes: 'They did what they had to do'

Within a few hours, the Strawberry Parfait was opened, busy serving fried clams and hamburgers to its usual Friday supper crowd. It looked the same as every other summer night, but it wasn't the same for owner Carmen Carlucci.

At about 12:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 16, agents from the state Department of Revenue entered his Pleasant Street shop and ordered the doors shut. Carlucci remembers there was little talk, no pleading for a little extra time. "Nothing," he said this week. "They came in and said they were seizing the place for non payment of state taxes, and that was it. I asked if I could go home to Quincy and get the money they needed, and they said no way. The locks were changed, the signs put up in the windows. We were shut down."

That afternoon, after repeated warnings from the state, agents closed the small ice cream-fried food business until "a substantial, serious amount" of employee's withholding taxes and meals taxes were forwarded to the Department of Revenue.

Carlucci drove home and took the entire overdue amount into the state, filled out the proper forms, and was given back the keys to his business property.

A spokesperson in the state office answered affirmatively when asked if they were "making an example" of this smalltown businessman. It was the twenty-second business seized in Massachusetts this year for non payment of state taxes.

"Look, I was guilty. I did not pay the taxes to the state after they kept telling me to," Carlucci stated. "I was wrong and they took my business. No one treated me unfairly. They did what they had to do."

Since 1979, Carlucci has brought this small business from a small ice cream take-out stand to a thriving seafood and sandwich shop. He is also a well-respected and busy caterer.

The only reason he offers as to why he "continued to let the tax payments slide for two years," is that he was "too busy, I kept putting off the bookkeeping," he said.

"With the addition of the catering business, sometimes I'm here from four in the morning 'till 2 a.m. I'm the cook, the food buyer, and the pot washer.

Contract could limit position

The town government structure committee did not gain much insight into a brief survey of Massachusetts towns which have a combined accountant/executive secretary position.

Many towns surveyed by committee members no longer have the combined position, and others have long retreated to separate jobs.

What the committee determined Tuesday night is that selectmen should probably authorize the combination if and when they feel a candidate is qualified for the position. A bylaw could be created which would give selectmen the authority to create the combined position if they feel a candidate is suited to the dual position. Length of the contract could be included in the bylaw, thereby allowing selectmen to separate the position after that specified time.

"Sometimes you won't find the right person for the two positions," member John O'Donnell stated. "A person suited to be an accountant may not be the type of action-person needed to be an executive secretary. One delegates responsibility, the other is a do-er. It should be up to selectmen to determine if a candidate is qualified, and if not, then the positions could be separated."

The government structure committee is reviewing the selectmen's proposal to combine the town accountant's position with the executive secretary. Don Andrew is currently serving in the dual position, although town meeting must vote to approve the measure.

The state House of Representatives just passed a resolution taking the accountant's position from Civil Service. That legislation is expected to be signed next week by the governor.

Once that is completed, town meeting must decide whether to combine the two jobs. Andrew is in an acting capacity until town meeting indicates its

Eagle Scout project

Nicholas Lelecas of Forest Notch received permission from selectmen to proceed with an ambitious project to clean up and repair a portion of Wheelwright Park.

Lelecas told selectmen Monday night it would be completed as his Eagle Scout project. With the help of his troop members, Lelecas will undertake the project before the start of school and into the autumn.

He will make a directory showing major points of interest in the park, mark the trails, find and clear old trails, repair the fireplaces, clear out the picnic areas, clear the area around the skating pond and repair the benches there.

The Boy Scout told selectmen he would need donations from local builders of two-inch wood planks and bolts for the benches he will repair. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he would supply bolts, and he would find builders to donate the wood.

Lelecas said he would need paint, boards, and nails for signs, cement for the fireplaces, and wood chips for the area surrounding the skating pond.

Selectmen praised the project, and noted the tree and park superintendent has indicated his willingness to assist him.

Independence valuation

A second local realtor has valued the Independence Building on North Main Street at $70,000.

Thomas Hamilton of Gallery 360 estimated the real estate value of the former gown museum. The building is now vacant and selectmen have declared it surplus. They requested two opinions of value before the town attempts to sell the property.

Hamilton said that much work will be required to turn the structure into a year-round commercial and downtown business building. The lack of parking and the difficult characteristics of the site created substantial adjustments to the value of the building.

The wood structure sits atop ledge and is located close to the street. There is limited on-street parking, and there is considerable water damage and leaking problems within the building.

A second Cohasset realtor had appraised the building at $60,000.

House approval

The state House of Representatives approved the town's request to remove the town accountant from Civil Service, and authorization to pay Fire Chief Martin Dooley's legal bills.

In separate decisions, the state representatives said the town may remove the accountant from Civil Service. Town meeting had approved the removal, but authorization from the state legislature was necessary.

Town Accountant Don Andrew said the state Senate must now approved town meeting's vote. That was expected to be decided this week, he said. Once that approval is gained, the position will be freed from Civil Service.

After the resignation of former Town Accountant William Signorelli, selectmen hired Andrew in the combined office of Executive Secretary/Town-Accountant. If the Senate approves the removal of the post from Civil Service, another town meeting will be necesary to approve the combination of the two offices.

In its other decision, the state House of Representatives authorized the town to pay the legal fees incurred by the fire chief during an investigative hearing held November, 1983. The chief was cleared of all charges issued against him by the firefighters' union. Town meeting voted in April to pay the chief's $3700 legal bill, but needed the legislature's approval of the payment.

Demolition appealed

The developers of 51 Jerusalem Road have filed suit against the zoning board of appeals and the town's building inspector after that board ruled the half-complete second story addition would have to be demolished.

Distinctive Homes Trust had begun extensive renovations at the home in April when neighbors protested the construction work. Five neighbors appealed a permit issued by the building inspector for the renovation work.

They appealed that permit to the zoning board, while the inspector ordered all work stopped. The developers at that time asked for a special permit to allow the alteration of the non-conforming, single-floor building.

The zoning board ruled the building permit invalid, and also denied the developers' request for a special permit. The board stated the second story would be three feet closer to the the level of the road. The home sits on a steep slope along Jerusalem Road.

The developers' attorney, Walter Sullivan said the board ignored the approvals of several other town boards and failed to show how the addition would make the house more detrimental or dangerous to the neighborhood.

At the time of the work-stop order, the renovations were about 60 percent complete. The zoning board ordered that the second floor be torn from the structure and the house returned to its original proportions.

Early deadline

With the coming of Labor Day comes this reminder. The Mariner will move up its deadline next week to enable efficient production of the Sept. 5 publication along with a chance for workers to celebrate the holiday as much as possible.

Selectmen okay $11,500 fire truck repairs

Selectmen gave the go-ahead to Chief Martin Dooley to have ailing engine four repaired, although there is not enough money in the budget.

The repairs are of an emergency nature, they decided, because the department is currently using a spare engine truck. There is no back-up should that engine break down or is in use at another location.

The cost of replacing a pump and water tank on engine four is about $11,500, according to estimates supplied by the chief. In the past three years, $7,000 has been spent to repair the 11-year engine, according to the chief who added that the truck is "not reliable."

The fire chief has previously appeared before selectmen requesting appropriations for a new engine truck. The current engine is filled with body rust after being exposed to salt water during the 1978 blizzard.

A new truck would cost between $80,000 and $100,000, and would require approval from town meeting. The expected life of a fire-fighting truck is 20 years, according to the chief.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted that purchasing a new truck would take about a year and a half to two years since it requires a vote of town meeting before it is be ordered.

In the meantime, if the spare engine is not functioning, "we will be down without one," the chief said, which requires a request for mutual aid from other towns.

The total appropriation for the apparatus maintenance budget is $5500 and this repair will require about $6000 more, the chief explained. Selectmen said he will need approval from the advisory committee.

But because the repairs are of an emergency nature, selectmen said the chief could authorize the repairs and then request the funds from the advisory committee at their next meeting Aug. 27. Selectmen suggested the chief obtain repair estimates from three companies, although it has been practice to have such work completed at Woodward Spring in Quincy.

There was some discussion as to whether the department's maintenance person could repair the broken pump and leaking tank. Chief Dooley said the extensive repairs require hydraulic equipment that is not available at the station.

The chief said it will take about two weeks to finish the repairs after the parts have been ordered.

In other business Monday night, selectmen discussed the legal interpretation of a section of the harbor bylaws. Because of the vague and ambivalent nature of the language, specifically in section eight of the bylaws, selectmen will request the harbor study committee review the laws. Town counsel will help develop language so the bylaw can be amended.

The discrepancy occurred when Richard Barrow of harbor study committee complained that the harbormaster, under orders from selectmen in 1977, granted two moorings to one corporation. Barrow said corporations are not allowed to obtain Cohasset Harbor moorings, according to local bylaw, and complained that the same corporation is now on the waiting list for two new moorings.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson maintained that although the intent of the 1971 bylaw was to grant individuals, not corporations a mooring, it can be interpreted in various ways. "The bylaw is not very well drafted," he told selectmen. Although most people would interpret the bylaw as prohibiting a corporation from holding a mooring, "it does not say that."

He is also unsure whether the town has compiled all harbor bylaws into one reference. Since 1961, the bylaw amendments have been compiled within one book, but any previous changes were contained only in the annual town reports. He suggested the harbor committee look into back town reports to see if any amendments have been excluded.

Henderson maintained that even if section eight of the harbor bylaws was approved by town meeting in 1971 and the intent was to distinguish between individuals and corporations, it has not been successful.

"Our regulations are not that precise," he warned selectmen. A statement in the bylaw which maintains a mooring will be for "own use only" could be interpreted for "financial reasons and use, and the person may never step foot on the boat," Henderson claimed.

Selectmen requested that town counsel assist the harbor study committee in their review of the bylaws. Amendments must be developed which more precisely describe "for own use only", while prohibiting moorings issued to corporations and the issuance of two moorings to the same person.

Town counsel suggested the bylaw be amended before any corporation be eliminated from the current mooring waiting list.

Harbor committee member Barrow had complained that Bernard Salvador is on the waiting list

License board

The Division of Registration within the Executive Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation, consists of 29 licensing boards which license professionals such as accountants, barbers, chiropractors, funeral directors, electricians, engineers, optometrists, pharmacists and real estate brokers.

The Division in many cases can resolve consumer complaints and thus save the time and expense of consumers seeking a remedy in small claims court," said Division of Registration Director James F. French. "The efficient handling of the licensing and complaint process insures that the people of the Commonwealth are served by competent licensed professionals."

Strawberry Parfait owner says state did its job

Whatever has to be done, I do it. When I got home, the last thing I wanted to do was the bookkeeping.

"But, I knew I had to do it. It hung over my head constantly," he continued. "I just kept letting it slide."

Busy cooking now from within the small, clean kitchen at Strawberry Parfait, Carlucci will offer no excuses. "I was wrong," he said firmly this week. When you go into a retail business, you are expected to behave in a responsible manner. Paying your state meals tax and withholding tax is just a part of that responsibility, and I failed to live up to that."

In an official statement issued from Revenue Commissioner Ira Jackson, it was noted that several attempts were made to contact Carlucci to retrieve the overdue payments. Carlucci concurrs.

"A business has a twenty-day grace period after the end of the month to send his tax money into the state. I let it slide for several months and they sent an auditor here. He examined my books, took out the tax money and calculated how much I owed them in interest and penalties. Then a new statement was mailed and I had 30 days to respond. I let it slide some more," according to Carlucci. "They put a lien on your property, issue that statement in a financial publication, and now there's a lid on your line of credit. You figure, just with the five percent meal tax, you take in $10 a day. I didn't pay it for two years and it adds up.

A popular businessman in Cohasset, Carlucci is unforgiving of his error. He knows it is a method practiced by many other small businessmen, but he will avoid it in the future. "Instead of putting the tax money aside, I'd mix it in with the rest of the day's money. This is a cash business, and it's real easy to do that. I didn't knowingly misuse the money. As long as I got into the state within that 20 days grace period I was okay. But after all this, you don't have access to your money and you can't bail yourself out. The state was willing to set up a payment plan, where I would give them one-third of what I owed and give them the rest in payments. But I didn't do that.

"Then on May 15 they sent a notice of intent of seizure. From there," he recalled, "I had plenty of time to take care it. But I didn't. Then there were no more notices. The summer was here, and we were really busy and I didn't take care of it. By Friday, there were no negotiations, they just came and I was out until I got up the money."

"I want to apologize to my loyal customers and the businessmen of Cohasset. I was wrong."
Strawberry Parfair owner Carmen Carlucci

Since last week, Carlucci said he has quickly learned to delegate some of the responsibility of the business. He will have a bookkeeper watch over his records while he is busy with cooking, cleaning and scheduling.

"The business has reached the successful point where I can't let things slide and I'll catch up with them later. I can't let things flow along now. With the business growing the way it is, I have learned to pay immediate attention to all the details," he added.

A statement issued by Commissioner Jackson's office outlined the seriousness of last Friday's seizure. "While we regret any inconvenience to the customers and the adverse impact on honest employees made in this operation . . . when it comes to withholding state taxes or inscrupulous business owners ripping off customers or employees by diverting funds intended for the state, there is no recourse but to step in and stop the practice and close the doors until we are certain that back payment is made and there will be changed tax practices in the future," a department spokesperson stated.

Following Friday's seizure, Carlucci said he was flooded with phone calls from his friends and business associates throughout town. The response, he said, was overwhelming and touching.

"I want to apologize to my loyal customers and the businessmen of Cohasset," the owner said. "I have a lot of respect for the fine businessmen in this town and for all my customers. I was wrong."

Committee member Osborne Ingram talked with a selectman from the town of Dover. That community, with a population of 4840, has separated its town treasurer/executive assistant position. A woman was recently hired as the selectmen's executive assistant, a position they consider more responsible than the part-time treasurer's job. That position is being advertised as a 20-hour, $10.50 per hour job, as opposed to the $21,000 annual salary for the selectmen's assistant.

"They leaned to the point of view that it would take a certain individual to do the combination job," Osborn said. One is a watchdog, the other is a do-er. The executive assistant must relate well to people and have good administrative skills. Those are not the qualities needed of a good accountant."

He added that the key to "what selectmen are proposing and what is adopted is good flexibility."

Committee member O'Donnell agreed, saying, "sometimes you won't find the right person for both positions. This is a good test period (having Andrew in the acting position). We can see if it works rather than dreaming about possible conflicts."

O'Donnell surveyed the city of Wakefield which has a population of about 25,000 and a combined executive secretary/town accountant position since 1958.

The executive secretary there feels there is no conflict and with a three or four-person fulltime staff there is adequate coverage in both offices. The only problems arise when meeting schedules conflict, and when duties in both offices demand fulltime attention.

"There is a feeling there the position has worked out," O'Donnell said. "They suggest if we try it, we may avoid a lot of expense and it may work. If we do propose this, selectmen should have the authority to change from time to time, from one person to two. It's not a locked in format in Wakefield."

Member Jean Cotton talked with a selectman from the town of Manchester. That town does not have a combined position, and employs what is termed a clerk to the board of selectmen. "They do not want an executive secretary," she stated. "Selectmen there don't want to give away that much power."

Cotton noted that the town of Hamilton recently completed a study to combine an executive secretary with the accountant's position. She said she would obtain the study for the committee's next meeting.

Member Chartis Langmaid said her observations of Norwell have indicated there is no problem attracting qualified candidates for the combined position. Norwell has shut off applications for the position of town accountant/executive secretary, and have at least three highly-qualified candidates. The salary, $23,000 to $29,000, didn't seem to deter qualified candidates from applying, she noted.

She will report next week on the towns of Abington and Hanover which have the combined positions.

"The situation in Norwell indicates if the opportunity arises to get one person, it is really good to do both," she said. "Norwell is very positive about the combined position, and will probably hire one of those candidates at the higher salary."

Committee chairman John McNabb surveyed Belchertown which has a population of 8337, and does not have a joint position. Representatives of that town indicated that it was not a good idea to combine the jobs because of the specialized technical requirements of the accountant's position, and the time-consuming duties of the executive secretary.

The town of Palmer has a joint position which they feel is working successfully. At least two fulltime assistants are needed to staff the offices, and at certain times duties in one office are put aside in favor of other responsibilities, he said.

Communication between the two arms of government have improved with the dual position - a sort of "guaranteed communication," according to Langmaid.

"They agreed there was some conflict in the roles," McNabb added. "The feeling was that if the person was just a town accountant, she would check every bill and warrant more carefully. Lower priority things would be more carefully reviewed."

"There is probably nothing intrinsically terrible (about the combined position)," McNabb stated. "If you get a person competent with numbers and knows where the numbers go, and as an executive secretary is aware of the administration of the town, then this could probably work."

Member Cotton noted that former accountant William Signorelli "could have done the whole thing," and often acted in the dual capacity when there was a three-man board of selectmen.

"Selectmen could authorize themselves so they may appoint a person to fill both, and at their discretion, fill separate positions if they don't feel the person is competent." McNabb suggested.

Committee members said after a contract is completed, selectmen could decide whether the next candidate is qualified to fill both jobs. Selectmen could propose that a combined position will be created at the discretion of the board.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SCIATICA

Sciatica symptoms: numbness, tingling, sensitivity, and a prickly sensation in the lower back and legs. These painful symptoms are largely due to the fact that the sciatic nerve lies close to the intervertebral disc. It runs from the buttocks, down the leg, to the foot. In the unfortunate circumstance that a disc bulges or gets dislodged from between the vertebrae, it might impinge its close neighbor, the sciatic nerve. In such cases of disc herniation, the patient often feels significant low back pain before the onset of leg symptoms. It is the shooting pain down the leg, however, which usually drives the patient to seek help. Once diagnosed, a chiropractor will seek to correct the position of the disc through vertebral manipulation, thus correcting the condition that led to the pain.

From shooting pains to limb numbness to even nervousness and a host of other considerations, many people are finding an answer through the utilization of a chiropractic exam. Such a procedure is a drugless, knifeless and natural approach to dealing with one's lifestyle and healthstyle. For a total state of well-being which you desire and deserve, call the Cohasset Chiropractic Office, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today for an appointment. Chiropractic care not only restores health, but it builds health. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Vo-tech committee votes pay raises

By Karen Cubie

The South Shore Vocational Technical School Committee voted to give Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton a four percent raise, his aids Warren Anderson and Robert Thayer, a six percent raise, and aid Leonard Cody, a five percent raise at the Aug. 14 meeting.

The committee also approved $1200 for Easton's auto expenses in addition to the $1800 he receives by contract for in-state travel.

"The school budget is approximately $3 million," Hanson representative James McDermott said. "If you hold one man responsible to this committee for everything, and you expect him to be updated, to restrict his [travel expenses] to $1800 is counter productive."

The travel allotment in addition to the raise gives Easton a six percent salary increase. According to Robert Kelley, Jr., the Secretary and Treasurer of the committee, the present rate of inflation is four or five percent.

"We're adjusting his salary with no real increase," representative McDermott said.

An original motion to give all three of Easton's administrative assistants -- Warren Anderson, Robert Thayer, and Leonard Cody -- a six percent salary increase was defeated. The committee voted to give Anderson and Thayer six percent increases, and Cody a five percent increase.

"There should be a distinction between the percentages of the three raises," Cohasset representative David Chittim argued. "If there is a noticeable improvement, it should be noted. I think the whole basis for an evaluation is to determine what kind of reward should be granted."

Whitman representative Lloyd Patriquinn was concerned about the lack of a subcommittee to evaluate the administrative assistants' performances.

"I have never been in a school system where there hasn't been a subcommittee of the school committee to meet with the administrators, and then come with recommendations," he said. "It would be much smoother to present a united front."

Anderson's salary will increase from $38,943 to $41,280, Thayer's increase will be from $32,054 to 33,977, and Cody's increase will be from $33,682 to $35,366.

"There is excellence among administrators as well as among superintendents," Dr. Easton said. "The committee is telling me that I am capable of attaining excellence, but I haven't reached it yet."

The committee heard a letter from Richard Anstead protesting Dr. Easton's refusal to recommend him for re-appointment as a drafting instructor.

"I do not agree with the rationalization of my non-renewal of contract as stated in Dr. Easton's letter (May 30, 1985)," Anstead read. "I suggest his motivation is something other than his written word, and that motivation escapes me."

Anstead claimed he received good evaluations from both Dr. Easton and Warren Anderson in the past.

"Perhaps the most controversial and contradictory issue is my letter of recommendation from Dr. Easton, and the good evaluations from both Easton and Anderson," he continued, "and then Dr. Easton's decision 'supported by his administrators based upon their contacts and involvements.' Should 'teacher-worth' be determined in this manner? Then why is so much time and effort put into the negotiation of an evaluation instrument?

"Certainly, a properly thought out evaluation instrument should be the tool used to determine the worth of a teacher. It should supercede any 'word of mouth' evaluation. Further, I contend that if I were judged on the basis of my evaluations and personnel file, and not by 'word of mouth,' my contract here would have been renewed."

Anstead claimed he was unaware of his $450 a year budget when he began to teach at South Shore VoTech.

"I was under the impression my budget was controlled by the shop instructor because he had substantially more items to replace," Anstead said. "When I learned about the budget he told me he had already spent it. I have been accused of not updating old textbooks. How can I when my budget dollars are being spent without my knowledge?"

Anstead said he was unaware of any complaints about his work.

"All of this was done without my knowledge," he said. "At no time was I called into Dr. Easton's office to be informed of or to discuss these allegations. I was called in to be terminated without any reason."

Dr. Easton refused to comment.

Abington campus principal Robert Thayer will replace Anstead as Drafting Instructor. Thayer had been the Drafting Instructor for 13 years before he became the Abington principal.

"He was a good instructor when he was here before," Committee Chairman Robert Molla commented. "He did a good job."

The committee accepted Thayer's resignation as principal at the meeting.

Other Business

The Committee agreed to renew the lease of up to seven rooms in the Abington campus to the Abington School system for $218,000 per year for the next five years.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

THE CRIMINAL CASE

One should always have a lawyer on a criminal case. A lawyer will make sure that everything that can be said in your favor will be said. It will be in accordance with the rules and laws that govern court procedure and the admission of evidence. Many criminal defendants fail to hire lawyers because they feel that certain information known to them will win their case or significantly help them. However, there may be rules of procedure or evidence of which they have no knowledge or understanding. These rules may make it difficult or impossible to present the information that they were counting on to win the case. A lawyer will also help to ensure that the actions of the police, prosecutor and judge will be scrutinized and held to standards set by law.

If you are unfortunate enough to be criminally charged, always remember not to aggravate the situation with aggressive behavior.

Never waive your rights either as they exist to protect you. The best and safest policy is to contact an attorney who will take all action in your best interests as soon as possible. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

Official opening of Rte. 3A lanes

By Don Merrill

Calling the project an indication of the state's intent to relieve traffic congestion in the area, transportation officials and South Shore legislators gathered at a Rte. 3 rest stop in Weymouth last Wednesday to officially open the superhighway's breakdown lanes to commuter traffic.

Beginning last Thursday, northbound commuters were allowed to use the breakdown lane between Exit 13 in Hanover and Exit 16 in Weymouth from 6 to 10 a.m. The southbound breakdown lane is open for use from 3 to 7 p.m.

The state Department of Public Works (DPW) spent $1.2 million to resurface and widen the five-mile stretch, a project which was approved by federal highway officials in May. The section now features two 11-foot-wide travel lanes, a 12-foot-wide breakdown lane and turnouts every 900 yards in each lane for the safety of motorists with disabled cars.

"The completion of this project indicates the state's interest in getting three lanes for Rte. 3," state Transportation Secretary Frederick Salvucci said.

Salvucci said DPW is beginning to conduct an environmental-impact study of Rte. 3, the first step in highway construction planning. The study will help determine the feasibility of widening the highway to three lanes, possibly as far as Plymouth.

DPW Commissioner Robert Tierney said his department conducted a similar environmental study, which was dropped in 1979 due to concerns about the impact of construction in the North River area between Norwell and Pembroke.

Salvucci added that money was set aside for a widening project at the request of U.S. Rep. Brian Donnelly (D-Dorchester).

"The money is there to complete this (widening) project," he said.

Tierney said the project will extend three lanes "at least to Rte. 14 in Duxbury," and possibly as far as Plymouth. But Tierney declined to specify when construction would begin, saying officials don't know how long the environmental study and subsequent traffic count will take.

"Rte. 3 has seen a 100-percent increase in traffic since it was built," state Rep. Frank M. Hynes (D-Marshfield) said. "It has been impossible for commuters to get to work in reasonable time on a two-

By a split vote, 2-2, selectmen decided not to appoint Edward Lubitz to the Zoning Board of When asked by Selectman Diane Sullivan, Lubitz indicated his willingness to resign from the Personnel Committee to take a seat on the appeals board.

Lubitz is an engineer and attorney and is currently a member of the Personnel Committee. The appeals board is in need of another member, and would like to have an attorney join the board.

When asked by Selectman Sullivan, Lubitz said he would follow the wishes of the selectmen, and would resign from one committee to join the other.

Selectmen Frank England and Cliff Mitman said they were uneasy with transfering a member from one board to another, leaving a vacancy on the first committee.

"I don't like one board stealing a member from another town board. I thought this thing was settled months ago until it was recently brought up again," England said.

England and Mitman voted against the transfer, with Sullivan and Rocco Laugelle supporting the motion. Because it was a split vote, the plan was defeated.

around town

☐A recent swim meet was very successful, and the Cohasset Swim Team would like to thank Clark Chatterton (South Shore Music Circus) for donating some popcorn cups for the team to sell, and Carmen (Strawberry Parfait) for his donation of ice (can't sell a drink without it, and up at the Swim Center it "melts like dew in the hot sun". . .they would lose money if they had to buy all of that ice!)

☐The Meehan children are in the news this week — Bobby, who is six years-old and will be in the first grade at the Osgood School this fall, and his sister Dawn went to College Gate in Hingham where Bobby was Prince Charming in the production of "Cinderella." And, Dawn was a star in her own right, as she earned the special "Star of the Week" for the Swim Team recently.

☐While on the subject of College Gate, we must mention Tim Eisenstadt, who submitted one of his inventions at the invention convention held there. Perhaps we will hear more about Tim's entry at a later date. In the meantime, congratulations on your invention, Tim.

☐Heard from the fundraising committee of the League of Women Voters, and they are a pleased crew of women! Their Silent Auction, Clambake and Square Dance was super successful! So much so that there is already talk of a repeat performance next year. (That shows for sure that everyone had a fabulous time.) The gals want to thank everyone who contributed to the success of the evening, as their support and participation made it a wonderful time for all.

☐The town was buzzing last Friday as the Final Day Cookout took place for the Osgood School Playground program ended for the summer. The Little League field was packed with the kids having grand fun. It has been fun to drive by the Osgood School and watch all of the children at play, especially the day they had the huge blue slide stretched down the hill. Cohasset is lucky to have a fine recreation department, and the counselors to help run it. Hats off to all.

☐Veronica DeVos has another feat to her ever-growing list. She recently participated in a five week "17 Beautyworks" course at Lord and Taylor, South Shore Plaza. It ended in a Graduation Fashion Show in the Young Americans Department at Lord and Taylor — a pretty young lady, especially in the dotted gown that she modeled that day.

Some curious observers at the Osgood Zoomobile.

☐Tom and Jay Jay Healy are having a very busy year. In July they attended daughter Susan's wedding to James Benterou in Pleasanton, California, along with daughters Maureen and Kathleen and her husband Dominic O'Donnell, his brother and sister John and Moreen from Scotland, and Jay Jay's cousin Betty Manee from Cohasset.

Tom's mom and dad celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary August 8 in Homestead, Florida. They are the parents of nine children and have 34 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

In September, their son Bob will marry Miss Patti Heney, daughter of Mike and Cindy Heney of Kingston.

To top the year off, their daughter Kathleen is expecting their first grandchild in November.

☐ A new addition to the Fairoaks Lane neighborhood. Little (sort of) Brenna Elizabeth O'Donnell was born at home Sunday at 4 p.m. The 9 lb. 14 oz. girl was delivered by midwife Betty Clark. She is the fourth child for Donna and Kevin O'Donnell, and will have plenty of love to share with brothers Kevin Jr., 8, and Liam, 3, and sister Marie, 6.

☐ Kathleen Croniger has joined the Real Estate firm, Preferred Properties, Inc. offices located in Norwell. Kathleen a Cohasset resident, is a consistent multi-million dollar broker since entering real estate six years ago.

Prior to her career in real estate, Kathleen volunteered as a driver for the Social Service League Senior Shuttle and was an active board member of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. She and her husband David, are members of the Cohasset Golf Club, Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club and the Cohasset Yacht Club. They have one daughter, Kimberly, of New York City.

☐That "rather large" man that you saw strolling and chatting all over town was Dom DeLuise. What a friendly and nice man. . .

☐The Marshfield Fair is in progress, and a couple of Cohassetites are owners of some horses running in the races. Check the famous racing forms, then ask them if they know any "hot tips." (Chances are they know as much as we do, but it's a fun time for all.)

☐In the midst of the August heat and humidity, think cool by working for the 45th Village Fair, held by all of the churches in December. Five churches are involved with many different groups and tables — See if you can lend a hand. Representatives on the Central Committee are: First Parish, Mrs. Stuart Weier; St. Stephen's, Mrs. Lester Gammons; St. Anthony's, Mrs. John Langel, Mrs. Thomas McGrath and Mrs. John O'Toole; Second Congregational, Mrs. Wayne Sawchuck and Mrs. Joseph Nedrow, and Panagia Greek Orthodox, Mrs. James Barber. The leader of the event is the First Parish Church with Gail Bell as the General Chairman. Mrs. Tim Marsac, Mrs. William Phelps and Mrs. Kenneth Wilcox are her assistants. Surely there are names in there that you recognize. Give one of the gals a call and see what your donation can be. They appreciate any and all help!

That seems to be all of the news from here this week. Keep it coming to me at 383-0560. As I keep saying — Your news is our news!

Cohasset recreation report

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes to be taught by Ms. Laurie Ann Clevland. All classes will be held on Cohasset Common, and will begin Wednesday and Thursday evenings Sept. 11 and 12. Advanced training classes will be held at 6:30 p.m., Wednesdays; beginner, 6 p.m., Thursdays; intermediates, 7 p.m., Thursdays.

The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class.

For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. ABSOLUTELY NO SPIKE COLLARS ALLOWED!!! It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions. For all classes: the fee is $15 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age. To register please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791, between Tuesday, Sept. 3, and Wednesday, Sept. 11.

Golf Lessons

Registrations for beginner and intermediate golf lessons will be accepted by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office, at 383-6791, from Tuesday, Sept. 3 through Monday noon, Sept. 9.

Lessons will be taught by golf professional, Tony Hurst, and will meet Monday and Thursday evenings, for a three week period, (six classes), beginning Monday, Sept. 9, and Thursday, Sept. 12.

The fee for the six, one hour classes will be $15 per person.

Soccer League Registration

Registrations for grades K-9 Recreation Soccer League will be held on Saturday morning, Sept. 7 from 9 a.m.-10:30 a.m., town hall. The fee will be $6 per participant and a 50 percent discount will be offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family.

Soccer League - 1985

League play for both divisions will begin on Saturday, Sept. 21. Team rosters and schedules will be given out that day. However, your team coach will be calling you to tell you where and when to meet on the 21st.

Weather permitting, we will plan for a five game schedule plus two weeks of playoffs. If you are in doubt, due to inclement weather, if your game will be played, you should call the recreation office any Saturday morning at 8 a.m., at 383-6791. In the event of a cancelled game, please follow the schedule as indicated for the next week; make-up games will be played at the end of the regular schedule if time permits.

Grades K through 2 will not be a part of the regular league. Rather, they will meet separately for instructional soccer and scrimmages on Saturday mornings, beginning on Sept. 21. Kindergarten and first grade participants will meet from 8:30-9:30 a.m.; second graders from 9:30-10:30 a.m. (Osgood School Field). All players, except grades K - 2, will be required to purchase a team shirt. Only sneakers or rubber cleats may be worn—shin guards are advised. Players should dress as weather dicates.

Pick on big guys

It was a shock to many people when they found that the Strawberry Parfait was closed down by the state last week. Although the doors were sealed for only a few hours, it was an unexpected turn of events in our small town.

Anyone operating a small, one-man business knows what it's like to keep your head above water. It's nice when the cash starts to flow in, and there's always places for it to go. Improvements to the building, the landscaping, maybe a little something for the home. It's difficult surrendering the cash to the state.

We at the Mariner know what it's like operating and participating in a small business. We have grown by leaps and bounds in the past few years, but it's been a struggle. Showing a nice profit brings a smile to everyone here, and it's hard turning over some of that income to the state bureaucracy.

But as Carmen Carlucci of Stawberry Parfait said simply, that is the responsibility and behavior expected of a businessman, and that is how you must act. If the money is intended to flow back to the state Department of Revenue, there are no excuses for a detour.

"I was wrong," Carlucci stated this week. No excuses. He was fairly penalized for a crime he committed. Unlike most other businessmen, Carlucci had failed to pay his taxes.

We say 'most other businessmen,' because we are well aware there are dozens of other Carmen Carluccis in Massachusetts, perhaps in the South Shore. There are small businessmen everywhere struggling to show a profit, unwilling to see that extra money pushed aside for taxes.

The logical question then, why Strawberry Parfait? Why did the state point the finger at Carlucci and decided to come down on this corner ice cream stand in little Cohasset?

They wanted to set an example. See what the big, bad state Department of Revenue can do when they get angry? If you don't do the right thing, this will happen to you.

Not for one minute does Carlucci feel he was wrongly accused, or treated unfairly. This is simply our beef against the state.

What Carlucci didn't know is how this web of bureaucracy untangled itself long enough to phone the Mariner and the Ledger to let us know of the seizure. "Have a photographer and reporter in town," a spokesperson told the Mariner editor. "We're going to be closing a business for non payment of taxes."

This isn't the New York Times after all, and tying up a photographer while we get a second phone call to give us the location, is something we don't handle with ease. A reporter hung around town, got tired of waiting, and left.

The state came shortly afterward, closed the building and changed the locks. No hungry reporters, not one little photograph.

We're glad. Okay, the state made its point, but without the proud publicity it intended. Photographs say a thousand words, and we're happy they were edited out.

We agree with Carlucci. He was wrong, as so many before him, and so many to come.

The state was correct to close down the business.

But Ira Jackson and his publicity people failed to use us as pawns in their scramble for the limelight. Go pick on the big guys, Jackson. And a word of advice, carry your own camera.

"...Hold it...!"

Our family has come full circle

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon looked up as I came in the door.

"Having nine kids is weird," he greeted me.

"You're telling me?" I responded. "And anyway, whatever happened to 'hello?' "

"No," he said, "I'm serious. Really. Do you remember being the parents of teen-agers in the 60s?"

I shudderd. "Vividly. I assume you have a reason for reminding me."

He nodded. "I'm just trying to remember. Was it Mary Claire who used to say we were money-grubbing tools of a capitalistic society?"

I shook my head. "That was Maureen. Mary Claire said we were ignorant pawns of a war-mongering establishment."

He looked startled. "Maureen? The Yuppie who has a husband, a two career family, a boat, two cars and a dog? And a bigger mortgage at higher rates than we ever dared consider?"

"The very one," I assured him. "And Mary Claire not only doesn't picket or march any more; she has a husband, a career, two sons and a dog. She's so far into the establishment that she's actually a den mother."

The Dragon looked bemused. "When you were a den mother," he reminded me, "she said it was a para military organization and you were encouraging the kids to sell out to the war-mongering establishment."

"Well," I sighed, "they seem to have turned out fine. Okay, so they don't go on marches or chain themselves to federal buildings any more. They all vote, and they all work for candidates whose ideals they support. I guess you'd say they've learned how to get things done responsibly."

I looked at him suspiciously. "Why did you bring all this up?

"You can't tell me you were just sitting around thinking about the sixties."

He shook his head. "No, I was just wondering. It seems that when the tide's coming in, we're going out, and when the tide's going out, we're coming in.

"We spent a decade being told we were prime examples of the far-right stuff, and now all of a sudden we're wild-eyed leftists."

I felt my jaw drop. "Tu?" I asked. "Et moi?"

He nodded solemnly. "That's what Skip said when I questioned his evaluation of "Red Dawn" as the greatest movie ever produced. He says all his friends agreed. They all say it's also the best thing that's ever been on TV."

"Better than Barney Miller?" I gasped.

I lowered myself into a chair and pressed my fingers to my temples. "Where did we go wrong?"

The Dragon patted my shoulder. "That's not all," he told me.

"Our son didn't even try to hide a picture he's carrying in his wallet."

"You mean. . ." I blurted.

"Right," the Dragon sighed. "I didn't want to upset you, but it's better you hear it from me. He has a picture of Sylvester Stallone as 'Rambo.' "

He looked into my eyes earnestly. "Have we changed?" he asked.

I considered the question. "A sag here, a wrinkle there," I admitted. "But basically I think we're still the same wonderful folks we always were, who try to live by some constant ideals, like life should be revered and peace is better than war because it's nicer."

"Then," he asked, "how come we're never on the same wave length as our kids?"

"Probably for the same reason we thought we had discovered the world and our parents didn't know a thing. Then we turned out pretty much like our folks."

The Dragon smiled. "You're probably right. If we visit Skip in the 90s, we'll probably catch him watching 'Mary Tyler Moore' reruns."

Sewer commission must be responsive

Letters

To the Editor:

What the Cohasset Sewer Commission must do is prepare a plan which demonstrates: (a) intent to sewer the entire area agreed to at town meeting June 19, 1984; (b) intent to use conventionally sized collectors (not the undersizing that masquerades as innovation), and (c) recognition of the funding levels that we have repeatedly been told are appropriate (not repeat the funding delusions by which town meetings have been misled).

The plan must provide the information requested by the State, and not avoid complete and responsive answers on the grounds that responsiveness is inappropriate when an appeal is pending.

Cohasset's appeal to the Federal EPA, represented by region I, has been rejected. The "appeal to Washington" will achieve nothing but delay — during which costs increase, funding my erode, and owners of failing systems and their neighbors are left to suffer still longer.

Attendees at the next town meeting must reject bombast and delusion, and demand pragmatic, responsible and competent action.

It will be a sad day when the Court directs the Town to do what it could have done earlier, at less cost, had common sense applied.

Bettinger extends greetings from Malaysia

Greetings from Bintulu:

As I sit here at the Bintulu office of the Cohasset Mariner it has been five weeks since I left, full of dread, armed only with a large bottle of Pepto Bismol. All things considered it hasn't been as bad as I had expected, but to qualify that, I had expected the worse.

The trip over was uneventful. I was impressed with the Hong Kong airport. Here they made us deplane, pass through a security checkpoint, then up a flight of stairs smack in the middle of their duty free shops. After 30 minutes of browsing you are allowed to return to your plane. The last leg of my journey was from Kuching to Bintulu. In Kuching I boarded a twin prop vintage WW II Malaysian Air Services plane where the air conditioning consisted of a bamboo fan tucked in the seat pocket.

The actual town of Bintulu is in a transition period. In the past, Bintulu was little more than a trading post at the mouth of a river. Today with the discovery of offshore oil and gas, Bintulu is a major income source for the state of Sarawak, and all of Malaysia. The rapid growth, due to this oil and gas development, has resulted in severe overcrowding in the business district of the town.

Bintulu consits of three streets. Four if you count the airport runway. Each of the three streets are packed with shops, and the shops are so packed that they are overflowing onto the sidewalks forcing pedestrians to walk in the street. Unfortunately these shops are not full of quaint handicrafts that I can buy as souvenirs. People here can't afford quaint, they are too busy trying to survive. Probably the two things that have had the biggest impact on me are the poverty and lack of sanitation. Behind the brand new modern hotel are sheet metal shacks without running water, and a school yard is bordered by an open sewage trench.

Part of the reason for Bintulu's growth has been the construction of a liquid natural gas (LNG) plant and a crude oil terminal. The construction of these and the fertilizer plant I'm associated with have resulted in many ex-patriots living here. In fact I'm living in a compound originally built to house the engineering staff from the LNG plant. Today there are a lot of Germans, Japanese and Koreans here, all associated with the fertilizer plant. As far as I know there are only four or five Americans here. With the amount of ex-patriots living here the local shopkeepers have found a new market in imported Western or European grocery products. I'm able to start each day with a heaping bowl of Kelloggs Corn Flakes, and thank goodness, they still have old Coke here.

A few things I have to clear up. When I was still in Cohasset, all I knew about Malaysia came from my company provided "Malaysian fact sheet." Unfortunately the fact sheet was based on Peninsular Malaysia, and I am on the island of Borneo which is culturally different. Imagine describing California to someone then sending them to Maine. While it is true that the government is Islamic, only about 30 percent of the people in the state of Sarawak are Moslems. In Peninsular Malaysia they make up 90 percent of the population. Here in Sarawak most of the people are Ebans, formerly known as the Wild Men of Borneo. Women can bare their shoulders, and even wear shorts outside the home, although most of them prefer to wear skirts. Another relief is that prohibition is not in effect here. Heiniken costs about 16 U.S. dollars per case.

They were correct about the bugs. The cockroach count is over 20 and climbing. Now these are not your typical garden variety cockroaches. Our standard is that they must be larger than two inches to even count. We also have two geckos living with us. Geckos are small lizards that live on the walls and are similar to a chameleon. They are good to have as friends since they eat the mosquitoes, and you know when it catches one because it chirps three times.

As a parting note, I'd like to say hello to all of my friends in Cohasset, and wish Bob Jackson good luck in his Flying Scott. I think that years and years ago the Cohasset Flying Scott Fleet visited Malaysia since the Malaysian word for white man is "mat salleh." This is believed to be a mispronunciation of "mad sailor." Don't worry fellow sailors, I'm doing my best not to spoil this image.

Good bye for now. Next month, I'll write to tell you about my visit to an Eban longhouse.

Residents should claim refunds

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane announced today that his office is attempting to return money to several Cohasset residents under the state's unclaimed money law.

Treasurer Crane noted that this money has been reported to the Treasury by insurance companies doing business within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Included in the proceeds are unpaid life insurance benefits, unpaid benefits on health and liability insurance policies, pension checks and customer overpayments. Cohasset residents who are included in the state's unclaimed money list are: James C. Adams, George Andrews, J.W. Berkeley, James McKenzie and Roger W. Rancore.

Under Massachusetts' unclaimed money law (M.G.L.C. 200A), accounts which have been dormant for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned and must be reported to the Treasury. The Treasury Department then tries to locate the rightful owner of legal heirs to return the money.

More than 1,000 accounts range between $100-$500; 239 accounts between $500-$1,000; 132 accounts between $1,000-$5,000; nine accounts between $5,000-$10,000 and five accounts more than $10,000. The remaining accounts are less than $100. Last spring Treasurer Crane released the names of 36,000 Massachusetts residents who were owed more than $13 million, most of this resulting from unclaimed savings accounts.

Persons who believe they may have a valid claim should call the Treasurer's Office at (617) 367-7780 or TOLL FREE 1-800-632-8027.

A memorable visit

To the Editor:

The following are excerpts from a letter sent to the Cohasset AFS Chapter President Jo-Ann Rossi from Cindi Pike, who was the chaperone for the July Bus Stop. Thirty-nine students from around the world spent four days here on the first leg of their journeys home.

"I want to extend my sincere gratitude and appreciation to you for all you did for me and the kids on AFS Bus #67.

"I realize now how important the first bus stop is to the kids after they have said goodbye to their year families and friends. The warmth and understanding given to them by the people in Cohasset have touched us deeply. I smile as I remember that first time the kids and I met as a group the next morning after our arrival. They came up to me with wonder in their voices, "Cindi, this place is beautiful!" I was pleased to see they shared my same thoughts. But perhaps what left the deepest impression of Cohasset was the families we stayed with. I was told by former bus trip chaperones that it would be hard to make sure the kids spent time with the families. As I recall I had to fight with them to get them on the bus that Saturday morning when we left! No one wanted to say good-bye! During our ride they came up to me with pictures, notes and farewell gifts their host families had given them. I really, truly believe that four days is long enough to develop a sincere love between people. Thank you for making us feel so special.

"The AFS bus trip is a very important part of the whole AFS experience and I hope you realize what an important role you and your Cohasset committee have played in the lives of 39 foreign students.

Bike vandalized

To the Editor:

Yesterday afternoon (Aug. 2) a much-used, slightly rusty child's bicycle was taken from the rack at the Swim Center. It was vandalized — front wheel reversed, spokes broken, mud-guards smashed, chain and pedalling mechanism buckled. It was then tossed over the fence into someone's back yard.

Our seven year-old daughter, whose much-loved bicycle it was, wept.

Yours sincerely,
Sarah and Dick deLima

Many thanks

To The Editor:

On Saturday, Aug. 11, the League of Women Voters in Cohasset held a very successful Lobster Bake/Silent Auction. Many exciting items were donated from various merchants.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone involved: Bob Pattison, Rocco Laugelle, Jeanne Replogle, Fleming's, Cohasset Tennis Club, Cohasset Hardware, Suburban T.V., Hugo's, Hair Imports, Kimball's By the Sea, Reflections, Bowman & Co., The Bread Shop, Hingham Car Wash, East Weymouth Savings Bank, Sea 'N Cheese, Elena Sestito, The Red Balloon, J. Bildner's, The Perfect Start, The Carousel, 3A Antiques, The Country House Antiques, Green Gage Plum, The Lilac House, Johnny Appleseed's, Central Market, Harbor Liquors, In-Stitches, The Linen Chest, Cohasset Clay House, and last but not least, The Cohasset Mariner.

Thanks once again for your support.

A great chief

To The Editor:

For the first time in our lives we were glad to find ourselves lost while on an extended get-away weekend. Our fortune was to find Fire Chief Martin Dooley in the fire house, not only to give us explicit directions, but also to act as a good will ambassador for the the lovely town of Cohasset. He directed us to local points of interest in Cohasset and invited us to dine out with himself and his delightful wife.

Our thanks to Chief Dooley and his wife Joyce for helping to make our mini vacation a bit more special.

It is a reassurance to know that we can count on a member of the Fire Department when we travel.

Thank you again, Chief Dooley, and congratulations, Cohasset.

incerely,
Mr. and Mrs. K.B. Victor, III

Selectmen discuss harbor bylaw changes

for two moorings. Both moorings will be used under a corporate title owned by Salvador. Barrow noted that corporations are supposed to be prohibited from harbor moorings and requested they be eliminated from the long waiting list.

In other action, selectmen discussed the development of a citizens' committee to oversee the cleanup of Little Harbor.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said representatives of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and the Department of Water Pollution Control recently met at the home of Daryl Roberts of Beach Street. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and a person from Senator William Golden's office attended, along with Selectman Sullivan. Roberts had repeatedly asked for assistance to help eliminate a disturbing pollution problem in Little Harbor near his home.

Sullivan said the town will apply for two state grants, one which will maintain proper pollution controls, while a 12-18-month study is being conducted to provide permanent repairs to the water. The state will provide 70 percent of the funding for that longterm study, she added.

Although many sources of the pollution problem were discussed, Selectman Sullivan said copper sulphate was one of the possible causes of the stagnant water and putrid smell.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle has repeatedly asked that officials test the septic system runoff in the neighborhood, which he said could be the cause of the pollution.

Sullivan said the application for funding should be made immediately, and suggested that town counsel forward the name of a liason between the town and state departments. She also recommended a citizens' committee be appointed to oversee the study's progress. Sullivan said this committee could be similar to the Straits Pond Management Committee which includes several neighbors and other residents.

A recommendation on the formation and membership of the Little Harbor Study Committee will be made at the selectmen's meeting in two weeks.

Breakdown lanes open to relieve traffic congestion

By Don Merrill

Calling the project an indication of the state's intent to relieve traffic congestion in the area, transportation officials and South Shore legislators gathered at a Rte. 3 rest stop in Weymouth last Wednesday to officially open the superhighway's breakdown lanes to commuter traffic.

Beginning last Thursday, northbound commuters were allowed to use the breakdown lane between Exit 13 in Hanover and Exit 16 in Weymouth from 6 to 10 a.m. The southbound breakdown lane is open for use from 3 to 7 p.m.

The state Department of Public Works (DPW) spent $1.2 million to resurface and widen the five-mile stretch, a project which was approved by federal highway officials in May. The section now features two 11-foot-wide travel lanes, a 12-foot-wide breakdown lane and turnouts every 900 yards in each lane for the safety of motorists with disabled cars.

"The completion of this project indicates the state's interest in getting three lanes for Rte. 3," state Transportation Secretary Frederick Salvucci said.

Salvucci said DPW is beginning to conduct an environmental-impact study of Rte. 3, the first step in highway construction planning. The study will help determine the feasibility of widening the highway to three lanes, possibly as far as Plymouth.

DPW Commissioner Robert Tierney said his department conducted a similar environmental study, which was dropped in 1979 due to concerns about the impact of construction in the North River area between Norwell and Pembroke.

Salvucci added that money was set aside for a widening project at the request of U.S. Rep. Brian Donnelly (D-Dorchester).

"The money is there to complete this (widening) project," he said.

Tierney said the project will extend three lanes "at least to Rte. 14 in Duxbury," and possibly as far as Plymouth. But Tierney declined to specify when construction would begin, saying officials don't know how long the environmental study and subsequent traffic count will take.

"Rte. 3 has seen a 100-percent increase in traffic since it was built," state Rep. Frank M. Hynes (D-Marshfield) said. "It has been impossible for commuters to get to work in reasonable time on a two-lane highway."

Nearly 1,100 vehicles passed the rest stop while Hynes and the others spoke during the 25-minute news conference — adding up to more than 50,000 cars a day in one direction.

"In the past, too many of my constituents have been ticketed for driving in the breakdown lane," said state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset). "It's taken us a long time to get to this point."

Salvucci credited Deputy Transportation Secretary Alan McKinnon, a former state senator from Marshfield, with the original proposal to use Rte. 3's breakdown lanes during rush hour.

The South Shore legislative caucus agreed last year that the breakdown lanes had to be opened as a temporary measure, according to state Sen. Edward P. Kirby (R-Whitman).

"The transportation focus is now on the South Shore — traveling on the South Shore will be a more comfortable experience with this attention," Kirby said.

Kirby and Salvucci both said commuter rail is a necessary part of the solution to traffic problems on the South Shore.

"The Central Artery project, commuter rail and MBTA Red Line improvements are all part of the governor's strategy to improve transportation here," Salvucci said.

Opening breakdown lanes on Rte. 3 "is one small step which indicates our commitment to solving transportation problems," he added.

Coaching positions available

The South Shore League welcomes your application if you are experienced in coaching high school age athletic activities. The League operates a coaching resource center for individuals who reside in the greater South Shore community and who may be interested in a part-time employment opportunity in coaching inter-scholastic athletics.

One application to this center affords the applicant immediate visibility in the league's 12 school systems. The information is regularly reviewed by each school's athletic director. This data is kept on file for approximately one year, at which time it is updated. Resumes should be current and complete with references and phone numbers.

Member schools of the South Shore League are: Abington, Cohasset, Duxbury, East Bridgewater, Hanover, Hull, Middleboro, Norwell, Rockland, Sandwich, Scituate and Whitman-Hanson.

Applications are currently being accepted for: Fall Season — Tentative Employment dates: Mid-August 1985 to Thanksgiving 1985; Sports: football, field hockey, boys soccer, girls soccer, cross country and golf.

Apply in writing citing personal data, background, experience and reference to Leon Liatsos, Director of Athletics: Hull High School, 180 Main Street, Hull, 02045.

Call Mr. Liatsos at 925-3000, extension 26, if further information is desired.

The Scrambler is coming.

The Scrambler will turn your dish into a $2,000 mistake.

They didn't believe it in California. They doubted reports that the most popular cable pay channels would scramble their signals. Instead, they listened to the dish antenna salesman. "It'll never happen," he said. Boy, was he wrong.

Last month, California dish owners turned to HBO and it was gone.

Now Showtime, Cinemax, and the other pay channels are set to scramble too. Before you know it, The Scrambler will be here.

Let's face it, if you've got a dish and The Scrambler comes, what have you got? On the other hand, if you've got American Cablesystems and The Scrambler comes, you've still got top quality programs and excellent service. And no $2,000 dinosaur sitting in your yard.

So, whether you own a dish or not, American Cablesystems of Cohasset is here to help you. To get all the information you need, call us at 383-0604 now. Quick. Before The Scrambler gets here.

It happened in California, it can happen to you.

A summer's day at Wompatuck State Park

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

On a searing hot August afternoon, four young bikers sat on benches in the Wompatuck State Park Visiting Center foyer and stared at a stuffed Great Horned Owl inside a large glass case.

A bearded man in T shirt and khaki shorts leaned on that case. He introduced himself as Jerry Flaherty, nature interpretor for the Department of Environmental Management's Forest and Parks.

Flaherty wiped the sweat off his brow and said, "Today's bicycle hike theme is Wildlife. I want to excite people about wildlife. First we talk and then we ride."

He said birds are easier to spot than mammals during the day. Most mammals prowl at night. He asked that the bikers ride quietly and look carefully for signs of animals, such as scat, tracks, kills, dens, holes and gnawings.

He said to also expect the unexpected and eyed the imperial owl. "Did you know that the Great Horned Owl, the feathered tiger, is probably the most vicious predator in New England?" he asked.

The bikers, Ted Austin (14), Maureen Cham (13), Seth Hardy (12) and his brother Nathaniel (10) all of Hingham, smiled. They were veterans of Flaherty's summer interpretive programs, which run July through August, and knew they were about to hear an adventure concerning a live Great Horned Owl.

"One day I was bird watching with a friend. I was using my imitation of a Screech Owl to bring in song birds. As you know, song birds will come in to check on the location of their enemies," he said.

"In fact, they are known to attack and sometimes kill owls out during the day. Well, we could just make out a pond through a clearing in the trees. Through that clearing swooped a Great Horned Owl. Behind the owl was a pack of (Blue) Jays."

The owl perched just a few feet away on an overhead branch of a tree, Flaherty exclaimed. He described the bird of prey's magnificent stature, its imposing beak and talons. He said the bird paused for a moment then flew back through the clearing. An owl in flight makes virtually no sound, for its soft feathers have little wind resistance.

"Sometimes we do get lucky," he repeated.

Flaherty then referred to a chart of common New England mammals and pointed to its colored ink drawing of a beaver.

He explained that the park's beavers had been recently trapped by DEM Natural Resource Officers and released in Western Massachusetts at the state-owned Quabbin Reservoir.

The beavers had been moved to the huge, state reservation, because of their dam building on the Arron River. The Arron River runs through the park and into the Cohasset Reservoir.

Flaherty said that the beavers' industry would have eventually led to the flooding of nearby fields, roads and backyards.

The nature interpretor motioned to the visiting center's door. In less than a minute, the bikers were riding down the park's main road, Union Street, toward the bike path. Heat that radiated from the blacktop enveloped the bikers in a wavy haze.

The bikers took a sharp left, sped through a parking lot and disappeared into the shadowy path. Flaherty rode beside them. He asked them to be quiet and cupped his ear.

As they made their way on the winding path to the Cohasset Reservoir, Towhees and Chickadees serenaded them. Deer flies chased them. They weaved around the sun beams created by the tree boughs and squirted each other with water from plastic bike canteens.

A turn in the path ended at the reservoir, which was made by flooding about 100 acres of land seven or eight years ago. The reservoir has a 300-acre watershed, Flaherty said.

"See that small island over there?" he asked. "Six park employees and I tried to erect a 25-foot telephone pole on that island today. We want to put an Osprey platform on it."

He said that if the tall platform attracted a nesting pair of these large fish hawks, his students would be able to observe them.

Osprey are raptors (birds of prey), with wing spans that exceed five feet, brown backs, white chests and black beaks. They were plentiful, especially along the coast of North America, until the 1950's.

A general pesticide that went into widespread use after World War II found its way into the flesh of the fish the Osprey ate. DDT (Dichlorodiphenyltrichloroethane) stopped the bird's ability to create the calcium needed to keep eggshells strong. The eggs were crushed under the weight of the parent birds. The osprey were heading for extinction.

DDT was eventually banned from use, Flaherty said. Since then, the world's population of Osprey has been growing steadily.

"A pair had lingered at the reservoir for several years, but had never used a smaller platform we had on the island. They were probably transients spending the season, before migrating down through Central America in the fall to winter in South America," Flaherty said.

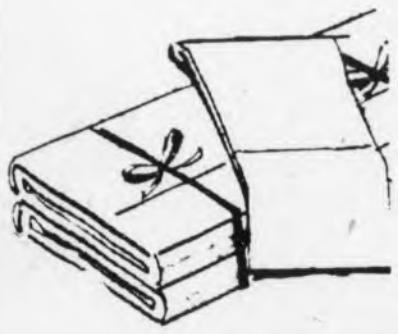
"We haven't sighted Osprey at the reservoir this year."

Flaherty said he consulted with Gilbert and Josephine Fernandez of Westport, Mass., Osprey experts with Manomet Bird Observatory, on how the platform should be constructed.

"They told me to put a four-foot by four-foot platform on a stand that is at least 20 feet high. Place a perch in the southern corner. Put the platform in an isolated place," he said.

"They are world famous Osprey specialists, who have spent the last 30 years assisting these birds on the Westport River and throughout New England. But, I guess even the best advice on nesting platforms won't guarantee Osprey will nest."

The bikers turned back toward "civilization." They road swiftly through Red Maple swamp into climax forests of American Beech and Oak and White Pine and Eastern Hemlock.



If they hadn't been in such a hurry, they may have sensed that the woods were coming alive. Hundreds of nocturnal animals, such as skunk, bat, weasel, fox, raccoon and owl, were waking from a long day's sleep.

Walking Tour of Harbor

A century ago Cohasset Harbor was the home port for nearly 50 large fishing schooners owned and sailed by Cohasset fishing families. By the end of the 19th century the schooner fleets were gone from the town, ending two centuries of the "Age of Sail" in this small New England coastal village.

Some of the old wharves once numerous along the edges of Cohasset's harbor and some of the buildings still exist, and along the older roads sea captains' homes grace the sides of the streets.

Sunday, September 22, the Cohasset Historical Society will present its third annual walking tour of the harbor, once known as "Ship Cove." The walk will meet at the Society's Maritime Museum at Cohasset Center, will progress down Elm Street, the original name for which was "Ship Cove Lane," and then along Border Street to Bates' Wharf (the oldest extant stone wharf at the Cove) and will end at Government Island, site of the construction of the present Minot's Ledge Lighthouse.

Elm Street is lined with early homes of sea captains and Border Street is the site of remaining stone wharves named for three of the seafaring families of Cohasset: Lawrence, Bates and Tower. Government Island was the shore station facility for Minot's Ledge Light until it was automated in 1947 and it was there that the off-duty lighthouse keepers and their families resided.

Today a small historical park honors the engineering feat accomplished in 1855-60 when the granite lighthouse was constructed at the site before being taken block by block to its location some 2½ miles at sea.

Time of the walking tour will be 3 p.m. A small donation will be requested of those attending. Tour guides and speakers will include David Wadsworth, Historical Society Curator, and Charles Fink, Chairman of the town's Harbor Committee. Plan now to join the Historical Society in this interesting and informative event which will describe the town's long seafaring tradition.

Also on the Historical Society's agenda is a fall yard sale, scheduled to be held Saturday, September 28, from 9 a.m., to 2 p.m. at the Society's headquarters house, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

Sixty Plus trip

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club members are offered a three day "Green Mountain Getaway," Sept. 20-22, by P&B Tours. The trip will stop at the Bromley Sun Lodge in Peru, Vermont.

A deluxe motorcoach will afford travelers a view of the New England countryside in early autumn along the Connecticut River valley. The first stop will be in Lebanon, New Hampshire, for lunch at Lander's Restaurant.

Next stop will be Plymouth, Vermont, known as Calvin Coolidge country.

Accommodations include two nights, two breakfasts and two dinners, at the Sun Lodge in southern Vermont.

On the return trip, there will be a stop at Green Mountain Getaway, at Allen Brothers Farm, or the Red Barn Gift Shop in Bellows Falls.

Price for double occupancy is $219; and single person, $244.

Make reservations at once! Make checks to Sixty Plus Club and send to Connie Silipo, 29 Wheeler Park, Scituate, MA 02066.

MEETING

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club, Board of Directors, will meet Tuesday, Sept. 3, to make plans for the coming social calendar.

Fifty club members had a most enjoyable picnic at the Donovan's.

Thursday, Sept. 19, is the luncheon date. A program will be announced later.

Thursday, Oct. 19, will be the annual fair. Mark your calendar for that date.

Kung Fu open house

The Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset will be holding a gala first anniversary celebration at its Rte. 3A location on Sunday Sept. 9 at 1:30 p.m.

The ceremony will include a traditional Chinese Lion Dance as well as kung fu demonstrations by members of the student body, featuring Praying Mantis forms and an array of Chinese kung fu weapons.

There will be free refreshments and an open house afterwards. The public is invited to attend. For further information please call 383-6822.

Celtics camp

The Boston Celtics Free Agent and Rookie Camp will be held again this year starting Saturday, Aug. 24, through Wed., Aug. 28, at the Marshfield High School Gym at 7 p.m. each night. Watch the Celtics in action and help support the Marshfield High Athletic Boosters Club. Admission is $1 per person.

Weddings and engagements . . .

Keverian-Dillon

Dr. and Mrs. Jack Keverian of Everett have announced the engagement of their daughter, Lisann Keverian, to Douglas Michael Dillon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Dillon, of Cohasset.

Miss Keverian and her fiance both hold engineering degrees from Tufts University. She is a graduate of the Hun School, Princeton, New Jersey, and is employed at General Electric Company, Aircraft Division, Lynn. Mr. Dillon is a graduate of Cohasset High School and is employed at Raytheon Corporation, Equipment Division, Marlborough.

Miss Keverian's father is a professor of materials engineering at Drexel University and was General Manager of Kennecott Refining Corporation, Baltimore, Maryland; President, Maryland State Chamber of Commerce and Director of Union Trust Bancorp, Baltimore, Maryland. Her mother was a founder of the Orange Community Arts Council, Pepper Pike, Ohio, and the Baltimore County Arts Commission, Baltimore County, Maryland.

Lisann Keverian

Mr. Dillon's father is Director of Compensation for the Raytheon Corporation, Lexington. His mother is Vice President of the South Shore Genealogical Society, Regent General of the Myles Standish Society and Board of Assistants of Massachusetts Mayflower Society.

The Dillons are descendents of Myles Standish, the first governor of the Colonies.

The future bridegroom is the grandson of Mrs. Arthur Graves Sampson. The late Mr. Sampson coached football at Columbia, Harvard, and Tufts Universities. He was a sportswriter for the Boston Herald and author of several books, including "Lou Little's Football" and "Ted Williams."

Miss Keverian is the niece of the Honorable George Keverian, Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Mr. and Mrs. David Casey

Casey-Zitron

A trip to Cape Cod followed the July wedding of Anne Elizabeth Zitron and David Thomas Casey, both of New York. They were married at a ceremony on the grounds of Estherwood on the Hudson at Dobbs Ferry, New York, with a reception followinig in the historical mansion.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Benjamin C. Zitron and Mrs. Sherri Zitron, both of New York City. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Margaret W. Casey, now in Cohasset, and the late Mr. Edward McDermott Casey of Westwood and Scituate.

They were attended by Anne's sister, Jennifer, and David's cousin, Shawn Lyons, and by Mr. Zitron's children, Alison and Barnett. The bride, a graduate of Bard College, '83, is studying for her Ph.D. in Molecular Biology at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine at Yeshiva University. The bridegroom, a graduate of Bard College, '78, with a B.S. in Music, plays jazz sax and does custom carpeting and restoration of Hudson Valley mansions.

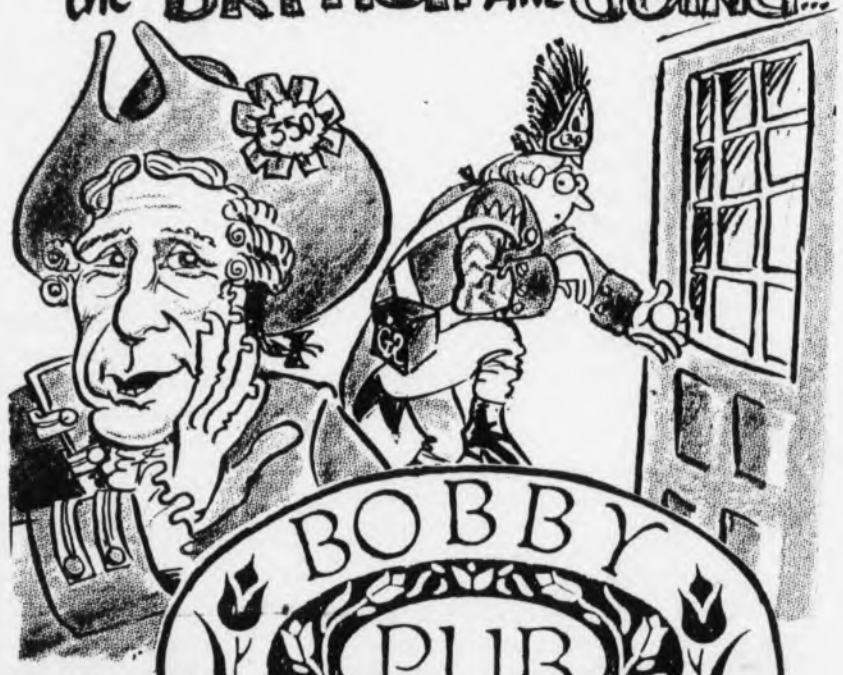
We just landed a number of big ones.

It takes more than a great menu to make a great restaurant.

It takes talented people to bring it all together.

We've got it all.

We've brought back most of the original items from our menu that won all sorts of awards 30 years ago (some things you just can't improve).



And in the past few months we've brought on board the kind of seafood restaurant people we need to help guarantee you catch some of the finest seafood and steaks to ever land on a menu.

Come and enjoy the light fantastic.

Second Congregational Church

Back to work - One thing that always helps me to return to the work of ministering to people is to catch up on information about who has been ill or has experienced bereavement. As always, I rely on phone calls and notes for much of that information. Not only when the minister has just returned from vacation, but at any time you know of someone who needs pastoral services, please telephone me at 383-6697. The new phone answering machine is a helpful tool, though everyone hates talking to a tape recorder. If you leave a message on it, I will try to return your call as soon as possible.

In the family - Eileen Howorth is a patient at South Shore Hospital. Eleanor MacAlister, a summer visitor who attended services during July, is recuperating after a recent fall. Our deep sympathy is extended to the family of Charles Rose on their recent bereavement.

Youth Group - The Junior High Youth group and Chaperones recently enjoyed a wonderful day of biking and swimming on Martha's Vineyard. Again we thank all who supported us this past year and ask that you continue to do so as we grow bigger and more active in the future.

Christmas Fair - The Boutique Group continues to meet on Monday nights at 7:30 . We also have sewing and knitting to be done at home. We need bars of soap (large or small travel kind) and pieces of wood. Call Carol at 383-1812. We are also looking for knitters to knit some simple slipper socks and golf cover mitts. We have the yarn and the directions. We need someone with a heavy duty sewing machine to do some stiching.

Flea market/craft fair

The Beechwood Congregational Church will hold a flea market/craft fair August 24 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Rain or shine. Dealer space is available for $8. Call 383-0070.

Update on Judy Gilman fundraiser

Judy Gilman, editor of the Hingham Mariner will be moved from South Shore Hospital to a therapeutic medical facility in Boston this week.

She was seriously injured in a one-car accident on Route 228 June 12.

Judy's spirits continue to soar and her verbal skills continue to improve.

The Mariner is happy to announce the formation of a five-member Hingham resident committee to plan a fundraiser in October. This fundraiser will benefit the Judy Gilman Medical Account.

Named to the committee are Larry Stein, former Hingham Light Board chairman, Hilary McCarthy, former reporter for the Hingham Journal, Tom Wallace, Don Thompson of the Hingham Community Center and Hingham Harbor Development Chairman Nick Kokinos. Also, ex-officio members are members of the Mariner staff and Moira McCarthy-Stanford of Scituate, a personal friend of Judy.

The committee was due to meet for the first time Wednesday, Aug. 21. The Mariner greatly appreciates the efforts of these residents who will plan the fundraiser.

Checks can be made payable to the Judy Gilman Fund, care of the Hingham Institution for Savings, 55 Main St., Hingham, Mass. 02043.

Results of Studds' constituent questionnaire

Congressman Gerry Studds (D-MA) has released the results of his most recent constituent questionnaire which shows that four out of every five of the nearly 6,400 residents of the 10th Congressional District who responded believe urgent action is needed to reduce the federal budget deficit.

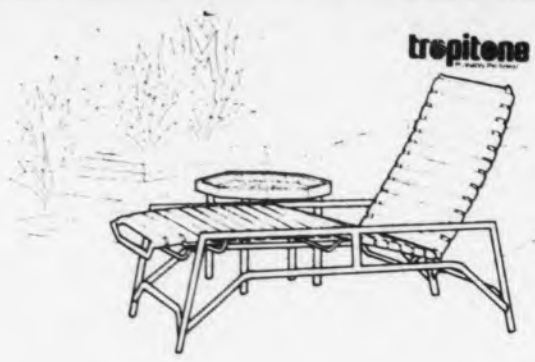
In a statement released by his Washington office, Congressman Studds said that the survey results "demonstrate that the people of the 10th Congressional District see the federal deficit for what it is — a threat of unprecedented and dangerous magnitude. The $142 billion Americans will pay as interest payments on the national debt this year is worse than a tax," Studds said. "It is a waste; it buys nothing, and it sags our ability to deal with the needs of our nation."

Nearly three out of every four (74 percent) of those responding to the questionnaire supported cuts in military spending to reduce the deficit — an action, Studds said, Congress failed to take in the FY 1986 Budget Resolution it passed last week. Studds, who voted against the Resolution, explained that he did so, in large part, "because of the House negotiators' acceptance of the Senate's plan to increase military spending by $10 billion over the original House-passed budget, and by more than $40 billion over the next two years. "It is clear," Studds continued, "that there is a widely shared belief within the public that military spending is too high, and that the Pentagon should bear its fair share of the burden of reducing the federal deficit."

While nearly half of those responding also supported making further cuts in non-military spending, there was little consensus among the respondents as to what programs should be further reduced. "When asked whether they agreed with the Administration's proposed plans to eliminate or phase out funding for Amtrak, Revenue Sharing, the Small Business Administration, the Economic Development Administration, the Job Corps, Sewer Construction Grants, or Coastal Zone Management," Studds said, "a majority in each instance replied 'no.' There was overwhelming opposition (80 percent), as well, to eliminating the annual cost of living increase now required by law for those who receive Social Security benefits."

Only one-third of those responding said they would favor an increase in taxes for the purpose of reducing the deficit.

The question on the federal deficit was one of 10 included in a questionnaire mailed in June to every home in the 10th Congressional District, which includes the South Shore of Boston, the Greater New Bedford area, and Cape Cod and the Islands. As of Aug. 2, a total of 6,391 residents had completed and returned the questionnaires — many with detailed comments — to Studds' Washington office.



Other survey results showed that three out of every five (60 percent) of those responding to the questionnaire felt Congress should enact some form of legislation this year to simplify the tax code by eliminating most deductions and exemptions and by reducing the number of personal income tax brackets to three. While the majority believe that tax credits and deductions should be retained for state income and property taxes (74 percent); contributions to charity (71 percent); and the mortgage interest on principal residences (85 percent), only 26 percent felt interest payments on a second home should continue to be tax deductible.

In response to other questions, 69 percent felt Congress should not provide military assistance to those fighting in opposition to the government of Nicaragua. Less than one out of five (19 percent) support the President's request for $3.6 billion for the proposed Strategic Defense Initiative ("Star Wars"), although the majority (51 percent) — favored the provision of some funds for research. The majority of respondents (56 pecent) were also in favor of increasing tariffs imposed on foreign goods in order to protect American companies and workers from foreign imports.

Cohasset resident tells of Hawthorne's words

By Priscilla Daniels of Beach Street

The giant oaks in the yard to the left of my sitting room window, have enormous deep green leaves, and give cool shade to my favorite chair. Their massive protectors do not hinder my view of the water scene thirty feet in front of me. It is here that I love to sew, to think, to reflect, to write and to read.

Today I am reading and I am carried away by the beauty of Hawthorne's words, entered in his Journal of September, 1842, about the bank of the Assabet River as he experienced it at the foot of Nashawtuc Hill:

" the bank is almost on a level with the water; and here the quiet congregation of trees stand with their feet in the flood and fringed with foliage down to its very surface. Vines here and there twine themselves about birches, aspens, or elder trees, and their clusters (though scanty and infrequent this season) over the water, so that I can reach them from my boat. I scarcely remember a scene of more complete and lovely seclusion than the passage of the river through this wood. I have never elsewhere had such an opportunity to observe how much more beautiful reflection is than what we call reality. The sky, and the clustering foliage on either hand, and the effect of sunlight as it found its way through the shade, giving lightsome hues in contrast with the quiet depth of the prevailing tints - all these seemed unsurpassingly beautiful when beheld in upper air. But, in gazing downward, there they were, the same, even to the minutest particular, yet arrayed in ideal beauty, which satisfied the spirit incomparably more than the actual scene. I am half convinced that the reflection is indeed the reality - the real thing which Nature imperfectly images to our grosser sense."

Do I believe this? Is reflection reality? I wonder . . . I pause to think about what I have read.

Suddenly, unexpectedly, I am disturbed by an intense whirring sound, which invades the stillness and my concentration, jolting me into conscientiousness. I look up from my book. A plane, flying low, and doing tricks in the sky above the roof, hovers over the house, filling the air with its sinister noise.

At the water's edge, near the shallow salt marshes, unruffled by the unwelcome air-machine, stands a yellow-billed Great White Egret, pehaps forty or more inches tall, with long black legs. Erect, unmoved, elegant, he listens for only a moment, utters a gutteral croak, then dips his graceful head into the mauve water rippling gently at his feet. He is fishing for his lunch, stalking crabs, eels, and baby flounders. He ignores the unwanted plane which zooms off finally, away from our area. Then, without warning, the heron spreads his wings, flaps them five or six times, and glides without effort to the opposite bank; once settled in the mud, he continues his fishing for a few minutes and takes off again. He joins the gulls in the sky above. Two bathers who are splashing in one of the bay's hidden pools, look up to watch the spectacle of great birds and gulls. In an instant, the magnificent fisher is gone; he has disappeared behind a clump of cedar trees - on an island in Little Harbor.

My view of this island, from my window, is directly west. Now, with the tide neither high nor low, the island itself appears to be long and narrow, stretching from north to south, its surface covered with bright verdant grasses and light beige and cinnamon-colored rocks, some smoothly rounded by rushes of tidal changes. Clumps of cedars, perhaps only ten trees in number, grow seemingly from the rocks. Most of the rocks are on the north side; the grassy area which reaches for, and nearly touches the mainland, is on the south side.

Just now I see two canoeists approach the island, disappear behind its rocks, and reappear almost instantaneously at the other end behind the grassy mass — two rushing travelers enroute to nowhere in particular, but no doubt, enjoying the clear, early afternoon air.

There are times when I see girls and boys jumping off the rocks into the deep pools surrounding the island. At other times, snorklers search for lobsters in its shallows, and clams on the sandbars at low tide. Sometimes picnickers invade its shores, but not now. Today the island is deserted, except for the gulls circling above.

I keep looking for the lone fisher - that one bright massive egret who disappeared behind the island's cedar trees; I keep waiting for him to reappear, to flap his wings for me, once more - to invade my moment. But he is gone. He is part of the past, part of my memory, a unique, moving, splendid experience never to be repeated, never to occur in exactly the same way.

I think about the book I had been reading, about Hawthorne, about his words. And I realize, truly, how very precious is the moment, the real moment in time.

A lonely gull braves the pounding surf atop the safety of a large rock.

PATCHES — by Lois Martin

A new experience is in the cards

The least number of cards you could get was six. I'd made up my mind going across the bridge that I'd play four. No way. No wimps allowed.

I got the six for $3, wincing at the stack you could buy for $18. Then I got the paper intermission game with three on it and invested in the final one of the night for the big money. All told, I was into the South Humarock's Civic Association Wednesday night bingo game for $4.50.

The mimeographed announcement of the once-a-week games, sponsored by the SHCA, had arrived the week before. The building's across the bridge and I'd been meaning to go last summer. Never did. So mindful of my inadequacy in the game I sallied forth with several young people, one generation below me.

It was a cat-on-a-hot-tin-roof night, steamy, breezeless. In the clubhouse the fan was propped on a chair center of the room where it would do the most good for the caller. That was, from what I could see, the most charity the caller would get all night. It's not so much a thankless job as a dangerous one. The people, particularly the women at the games, do not suffer well any caller who doesn't please them.

I sat near Mary and Edna. Being close to the starting time, I'd missed getting the side of the table where you can watch the caller as he turns his little machine. There was a backup board hanging from the ceiling on which called numbers were posted.

No sooner seated and introduced than my first error was obvious. No beans, or whatever you call them. "B 9."

Edna had a large stash of all kinds of bingo equipment in her bag. She loaned me her dish of green plastic "beans." "O 73."

It was clear, especially to the savvy bingo players, that a novice was among them. "O 68."

Scrambling between numbers I covered my free space with Edna's green plastic beans, tallying their assortment of cards in the meanwhile. My younger companions joined Mary, Edna and me and were loaned more of Edna's equipment.

"Double bingo with a wild card," he said. "Cover everything ending in 4." I did that without knowing why. The game was moving along rapidly. Edna hollered at the caller now and then to slow down. The woman behind her, with the $18 assortment of cards, said she could listen without slowing down the game. "I 23."

Mary's up from Florida visiting her daughter on Holly Hill and she, Mary, not the daughter, ordinarily plays a lot at Assumption Church. At any rate, she plays a lot.

"Postage Stamp." That threw me into a tizzy until my cohorts pointed out that you could get four in any corner and win.

Edna plays a lot at St. Agatha's in Milton and a church from there somewhere in Wollaston.

My son whispered to me not to holler "bingo" unless I could stake my life on having the right numbers. He was right, of course. Bad enough to be an obvious novice. It would be an embarrassment from which I would not well recover if I blatted about winning and didn't really. Another problem I knew would surface — I never win anything. I was going to have to concentrate on being cool like the other winners if I ever saw five in a row.

But we seldom did plain old bingo.

"Hat Pin." That's when you've got four in a corner, see, and then the rest of the card filled in the slanted point. They nearly lynched the caller until he wisely changed his ruling to allow the hat pin to come to or form any point on the card.

"Four corners."

Intermission. I had smelled the coffee brewing aromatically. No one in our group had won but we were fully motivated. They had the good doughnuts for refreshments as well as a cool drink. The caller got a well-earned break and it looked like Peggy was going to be the big winner of the evening.

The intermission player won $25 which was competed upon with the paper games of three in a section. For that Edna and Mary, and we borrowed more of Edna's, had a big fat round magic marker thing, brand named "DaboInk."

Back into the game we briefly played a plain old five in a row. So busy was I, so absorbed, in all matters of the room rather than with my six cards, I didn't notice I had five diagonally lined up.

"You've got it," said Mary. "Hold up your hand." Had it not been for Mary I'd never have won that $3 since I split the games winnings with people more vigilant. Had I been watching my diagonals at the right moment, I'd have earned back my full investment and more.

"G 58."

"First the '7' and then the 'Z'.

Clearly into hardball bingo I was saved by the overseeing of women who might as well have written the game. No longer did they veil their checking of my card. We tacitly agreed I needed checking.

"Letter T." Either way.

It was a little after 10 p.m. The crowd was ready for the wrap up games for the big money. The person who got the inside square first would get something like $22; the outside square, at least double and the final, full cover would win $60.

It was apparent my red circles made with Edna's blotcher were almost all over one of my cards. In fact, I was missing only B 25.

"B 24."

My crowd and I held our breaths.

"B 27."

Great Scott, the tension, the drama. "Are you nervous?" they wanted to know. "I never win anything," I was saying just as the woman, probably Peggy, hollered "Bingo."

It was a fine evening. We returned all of Edna's equipment, along with our thanks and hope to see one another again. Mary put away her magnetic plastic chip gatherer and headed out the door.

I, with $3 return on the investment, headed home, knowing Mary and Edna should have won but knowing, as well, they are winners and so was that evening with the South Humarock Civic Association Summer Bingo. It is clearly worth a return trip.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

I don't think the world would go 'round without our volunteer workers. Each August for the past 21 years, the hundred families of the small parish of Trinity Church in Marshfield makes a supreme effort to provide quality food in their Country Kitchen. For the 10 days of the Marshfield Fair from 6 a.m. till 8:30 at night, a shift of 40 church members provides three meals each day under their big tent. Back at the church, Jane Melvin starts at 5:30 a.m. baking the 30 homemade pies to be served that day. Salads and homemade dressings, deli-type sandwiches, veggies from the garden, homemade beans and, if you can imagine such a thing, 300 pies — all the product of volunteers. During the breakfast hour,on special days,Margaret Johnson and Doris Ewart prepare their omelet and egg dishes. Organizing the runners, callers, set-up crews, schedulers and take-down crews are Nancy Howes, Petie Burnap and Donna Frugoli, they themselves so well organized, they even have jobs such as the onion-chopping, delegated to certain members. Here is a dish any volunteer would welcome, for tightly covered, it will bake in a casserole for three hours while you're off helping in your favorite cause.

SHERRIED BEEF

2 lb. lean stewing beef.
2 T. Lipton's onion soup mix (dry)
1/4 c. sherry
Freshly ground pepper, smidge of garlic, seasoned salt

Place in covered casserole in the order given.

Also contributing to summer's many pleasures are the volunteers who make possible the summer lecture series at the Winslow House in Marshfield. Bob English, president of the Society, greeted guests at their last meeting and the antique rooms were filled with wild flower arrangements that were stunning and in the kitchen refreshments so prettily offered on large straw trays, were being prepared by that day's committee. Troy Creehan of Plimoth Plantation delighted everyone with her portrayal of housewife Elizabeth Hopkins, a role she plays in the 1620 village recreated in Plymouth. Dressed in the woolens of that era, her vivid description of a typical day in the lfie of a Puritan housewife, led the audience to a glimpse of a world that began at dawn for the two-hours of preparation for breakfast, to the evening meal, interspersed with such duties as preparing a wonderful oil for an earache by burying eels in a clay pot under six feet of dung for six weeks. So, not only do you learn a great deal at the lecture series, but it you're lucky, refreshments will include a taste treat by hostesses such as Janet Ingram. The recipe passed along to Janet has the following name — why, nobody seems to know.

GOOLAGONGS

1 lb. loaf of firm, white bread
1 c. each smooth peanut butter, peanut oil, packaged Italian seasoned bread crumbs

Trim crusts and cut each slice into four or five strips. Spread on cookie sheets and dry by baking at 180 degrees for one hour, until crisp.

Meanwhile, blend peanut butter and oil with whisk. Dip each baked strip into this mixture. Lay on paper towel for half an hour. Roll in bread crumbs. Keep crisp in covered tin.

Such a supreme effort is required to prepare for the Cranberry Fair at the Farm in Scituate that the Scituate Garden Club only schedules it for alternate years — this is one of those years! Held on the grounds of the Arthur Crosbie's antique Cape, garden "clubbers" flock to wander through their lovely yard and buy a myriad of handmade floral arrangements, plants, boutique offerings and foods. Luncheon that is served by the pool takes hours of preparation and in late September when tables laden with the handiwork of club members, will tempt us all, it's to be hoped that we'll be able to sample and purchase recipes such as this offered at their Tasting Table.

HARVEST SOUP

½ lb. Italian sweet and hot sausage, casing removed
2 c. celery, diced into ½" slices
2 lb. zucchini, cut in ½" slices
1 c. chopped onion
2 cans tomatoes (28 oz. each), or approximately 2 lb. fresh tomatoes
2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. each oregano, basil, Italian seasoning and sugar
2 green peppers cut in ½" slices
1/4 tsp. garlic powder

Brown sausage. Drain fat. Add celery. Cook 10 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and simmer for 20 minutes. Add green peppers and simmer for 10 minutes covered. Makes one gallon.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Is the Boston Globe fair?

As I reported last week, John Lakian lost decisively when he sued the Boston Globe for libel. But that will hardly convince the Globe's critics that our dominant metropolitan daily is not biased, bigoted, unfair, slanted, leftist and irresponsible. Or, as one of the sizable sullen minority that hates everything the Globe is and stands for once quipped: "How do you recognize a Globe reader in a men's room? Answer: The Globe reader washes his hands before doing other things."

Bathroom wit aside, the rap against the Globe is approximately this: It is an old-boy network with a left-wind bias. It pushes its plans and its polities by slanting its news, protecting its ideological friends, and discrediting its idealogical enemies. Thus, even if the Walter Robinson piece about John Lakian was substantially true, it was biased simply because it would never have been written about a liberal "friend" of the Globe such as Ted Kennedy, John Kerry or Mike Dukakis. The climate at the Globe, according to the rap, is such that reporters do not dig deeply when it comes to liberal politicians.

What is the truth? Is the Globe as grossly biased as many conservatives and business people assert, or are its critics merely right-wing Yahoos in need of explaining away their own political unsuccess? In short, is the Globe fair? The answer in my view is "no," and to explain, a little history is in order.

Twenty years ago, when Tom Winship succeeded his father Lawrence as editor, the Globe sought to rise above its former "timidly liberal" reputation. It sought to take strong and if necessary unpopular stands on issues of the day. This was to take place on the editorial pages, not on the news pages. Reporters were not permitted to write commentary nor commentators to report the news.

Tom Winship's Globe shortly won the first of several Pulitzer Prizes, and those fond of calling the Globe the "house organ of the Kennedys," would do well to remember that the Pulitzer was won for exposing and opposing the planned appointment of an underqualified Kennedy family functionary (F.X. Morrissey) to the judiciary.

Another rap against the Globe is that it has been wholly owned (by the Taylor family) and largely run (by Winship pere and fils, Crocker Snow pere and fils, etc.) by Yankee aristocrats, the inbred products of private schools and Harvard, who have little sympathy for or understanding of the man in the street.

The part about the man in the street gets to the heart of things. In a way it is half true and half false, for between 1965 and 1975, there were two main groups "in the street" in Boston — blacks and those who hated blacks. On that score, publisher Davis Taylor of Dover and editor Thomas Winship of Lincoln were, like Cardinal Cushing of South Boston and Cardinal Medeiros of Fall River, with Boston's blacks all the way. Much of the popular resentment of the Globe can thus be traced to its support of school desegregation in Boston, of fair and low income housing in the suburbs, and of a variety of other issues in support of the great black proletariat that had migrated to Boston from the South between 1955 and 1970.

In my view the Globe's correct and principled stand for black civil rights led to what was probably its greatest journalistic blunder under Winship, and eventually to a pattern of journalistic blunders that seriously compromise today's Globe. In 1967 when Kevin White ran against Louise Day Hicks for mayor of Boston, he stood for racial moderation and she stood for racial paranoia. White was elected with the Globe's support, and to his everlasting credit, he remained a racial moderate during his 16 years in office, which included Boston's hideous busing crisis.

However, it became obvious to most close observers of Boston in the early seventies that White also presided over a wasteful, corrupt, politicized and incompetent administration. By the time White stepped down in 1984, several major departments were in court receivership and several major political apparatchiks were under indictment. But because it admired White's racial moderation, the Globe took until 1982 to see what Barney Frank, Joseph Timilty and many, many others were well aware of by 1972. On account of their racial issue, the Globe looked the other way where Kevin White was concerned. It shirked its journalistic duty to probe deeply — as, for example, it was to probe John Lakian in 1982. The result was that Kevin White began to conclude he could do what he pleased in Boston. By 1981 the city was near bankruptcy.

I go into the Kevin White story because it is the first instance of which I am aware of the Globe's "holding its fire" on a friend — a behavior of which I am aware of numerous subsequent examples. Here are a few.

Ray Shamie (ideological adversary) attended a John Birch Society meeting in the 1970s. The Globe probed deeply into this when he ran for the U.S. Senate in 1984. Yet the Globe supports and protects half a dozen socialist members of the Massachusetts House and Senate. Two present or former members of socialist organizations, George Bachrach and Thomas Gallagher, are running for Tip O'Neill's congressional seat. The Globe does not probe.

Ray Shamie's 1984 opponent John Kerry (ideological friend) has left a trail of broken promises, changed addresses, disgruntled supporters, short-term jobs and a divorce in his frenetic pursuit of ambition. The Globe has not probed. Former. Sen. Paul Tsongas is alleged to have desecreted the American flag during an anti-War demonstration early in his career. The Globe did not probe.

Former House Speaker Thomas McGee, whom the Globe despises, has a history of alcoholism, which the Globe has often mentioned. Sen. President William Bulger, whom the Globe doesn't like very much, but fears, has a similar history (he has not been a drinker for many years); to the best of my knowledge the Globe has never mentioned this.

Another recovered alcoholic the Globe despises is Boston City Councillor James Kelley. The Globe chose to bring out Kelly's alcoholic past, along with its associated record of arrests, four days before the 1981 City Council election. Also running in that election was David Scondras, a homosexual and well to the left of the Globe, but admired by the Globe. Scondras quietly circulated his sexual preference in the gay community, but the Globe kept him in the closet, which as a city-wide candidate is what he wanted. Yet in 1983, when he was running as a district candidate in the Fenway, Globe obligingly disclosed his homosexuality in announcing his candidacy.

It can be quite a spectacle when two friends of the Globe run against each other. That's what happened in 1974 when Francis Sargent and Michael Dukakis, both liberals, faced off for governor. That was the election when Dukakis made his famous "lead pipe cinch" guarantee against new taxes. Parenthetically he had conditioned his guarantee on a 1975 deficit of up to $100 million dollars. Two weeks before the election, Sargent, Dukakis and (as it was reported to me by Dukakis' campaign manager Joseph Grandmaison) the Globe learned that the deficit would likely balloon to half a billion dollars as it did. So for very different reasons all three parties — Sargent because as governor he owned the deficit, Dukakis because he had made his silly pledge, and the Globe for reasons that are journalistically inexplicable — sat on the information during the final two weeks of the election.

That's enough "war stories" for now — although I could go on. What emerges it seems to me is, to borrow Walter Robinson's term about John Lakian, a "pattern of discrepancies" between the way the Globe treats its friends and the way it treats its opponents. I don't believe this pattern is apparent to those Globe people who are responsible for it. They are all articulate and honest and nice and have every intention of being fair.

But they get tied in and "networked" with those public figures who agree with them ideologically (and sometimes also with those who don't agree with them, but do understand the Globe's influence and therefore throw the Globe a few ideological bones.) I remember sitting in a 1980 meeting with a group of mostly liberal activists when one (now a state representative) said, "I'll get [editorial writer] Kirk Scharfenberg to do a sympathetic piece for us." He picked up the phone, there was a short conversation and, presto, that Saturday the caller's words emerged almost unaltered on the Globe's op-ed page.

In short, I think the Globe does have a serious problem. I'm not convinced the Lakian story would have seen the light of day had he established himself as an ideological and social friend of the right people on Morrissey Boulevard. Maybe the piece would have run anyhow, but I wonder, and the fact that one wonders bespeaks peril in a one and one-half party state with a one and one-half newspaper capital city.

Police, Fire Depts. renovation head planning list

The Board of Selectmen held a meeting last Wednesday night to discuss longterm projects and plans. Topping the list were renovations of the police and fire departments and evaluating procedures for town personnel.

The blueprints for the renovations of the fire and police departments have been drawn by architect Benjamin Blake. The plans include a central dispatch room and facilities for female police and fire personnel. The police department has made temporary facilities for its female personnel at this time. The fire departments needs an additional stall to provide adequate shelter for its vehicles.

The board also resolved to sit down with the personnel committee and the labor counsel sometime this fall to discuss philosophy. Step pay raises, evaluation forms and upgraded pay scales will be on the agenda for that meeting. Selectmen Maryjane McArthur suggested evaluation forms be used to determine job performance of town personnel.

The selectmen also planned to meet with the advisory committee to discuss budget processing and timing. Budget sheets are not distributed to town departments until November and are due back by December 15. As a result, there is undue pressure on department heads to devise a budget. What they often ask is not enough to cover the expenses of operating a department for a year. Selectmen will meet with the advisory committee Sept. 4.

Board members also discussed the possibility of distributing a new and more understandable town warrant for town meeting. The new warrant would include a glossary of financial terms so that citizens of the town will gain a better understanding of proceedings.

Selectman McArthur assailed the state of Cohasset Harbor. "It is not right that people have to wait eight to ten years to get a mooring," she said. More space may be provided by the installation of finger floats. Selectmen also noted the Harbor Committee is not aggresive enough in charging adequate mooring fees. Current revenues from the fees do not cover the costs of operating the harbor. "If boat owners want to use it, they should be willing to pay for the use of it," said McArthur.

In other business, William H. Palmiter was appointed to the Conservation Commission. The board also appointed Mary Jane McGrath and Joanne Shepherd to the Straits Pond Committee.

Real Estate

The Cape Cod life you've waited for is here. Now. In Duxbury.

Oceanwoods is selling as fast as it's being built, for a lot of reasons. Cape living, without the battle of the bridge. Quality construction and creative architecture you thought had passed you by. Residents' use of one of the world's great beaches, in one of New England's most beautiful towns.

Choice two-bedroom townhomes and condominiums remain, from 1500 to more than 2000 sq. ft. From $154,000 to $260,000. With a few remaining single-family residences, designed by award-winning architects.

Come enjoy 23 acres of salt air, balconies, ocean view, crickets at night and serenity—only 45 minutes from Boston. But, do it now. So someone else isn't enjoying what you should be.

oceanwoods

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

SAAB
The most intelligent car ever built

Need for substitute teachers grows throughout the area

By Don Merrill

Despite a recent round of pay increases in area school districts, substitute teachers will become increasingly difficult to find to teach classes on a spot basis.

That's because a severe shortage of permanent teachers looms in the future, area school superintendents say.

School officials look to recent college graduates and former fulltime teachers to fill the classroom void left when a 'regular' teacher is taken ill. But with declining enrollments and salaries that are frequently much higher in the private sector, young people aren't as attracted to public education as in the past.

That means fewer graduates contemplating a career in teaching, and indirectly, fewer people available on a day-to-day basis as substitutes.

Hanover Schools Supt. Robert P. Fox also says the advancement of women in all career fields has created part of the shortage.

"Teaching used to be one of the only careers open to women," he said in a recent interview. "Now that women are being accepted in nearly all fields, not as many enter the teaching field."

Fox and Pembroke Supt. Paul A. Squarcia both said covering classes where a teacher is absent is not yet a severe problem; no class has gone without a teacher, even if circumstances force principals to use other permanent teachers throughout the day to cover a class.

"We're getting along now, but the handwriting is clearly on the wall," Fox said. "We as educators must begin to address the problem now."

The number of college graduates who receive education degrees is sharply down, Squarcia said. Bridgewater State College now graduates about 100 elementary-education majors each year, down from nearly 500 ten years ago, he said.

"Only one student in the entire state-college system graduated with a degree in math education this year," he added.

The teaching profession was shaken early in the 1980s with the advent of Proposition 2 1/2-mandated cutbacks. Squarcia said 57 teachers in Silver Lake Regional schools, which include students in grades seven through 12 from Pembroke, Halifax, Kingston and Plympton, were lost with the cutbacks in 1981. Most were, and remain, unavailable for work as substitutes, he said.

"Even when we began restoring some of the positions, they weren't available (to come back as fulltime teachers)," Squarcia said.

Fox said teachers can find plenty of work at competitive salaries if they are willing to relocate to the south or west to find work. "The military, civil service and state and federal governments kept their salaries up to the cost of living, and those in education did not," he said.

Subsitutes are typically people at both ends of a career in education — some use the experience after college to land a permanent, tenure-track position, while others see it as a way to remain active after retiring from a fulltime teaching career.

"We're getting along now, but the handwriting is clearly on the wall."

Kathy Cashin of Pembroke got into education by spending three years as a substitute in elementary grades. Though not a tenured teacher, Cashin now works full time as a tutor in Chapter One classes.

She graduated from college in 1968 with a degree in education, but became involved with raising her family before going into teaching. Being a substitute gave her needed flexibility when she reentered the workforce, she said.

"When I started, I didn't want a fulltime job because my children were still young," she said. "I knew they might get sick, and I couldn't be home in that event with a permanent job."

Cashin said she's ready to get into the tenure track now that her children are all in school. "It was nice not to be obligated to work five days a week, but I'm ready to do the job (of teaching a class) myself," she said.

Mary Kelly of Marshfield, who is a substitute at Hanover Junior High School, spent 17 years teaching sixth-grade students in Shelton, Connecticut before she and her husband moved to the area to retire.

She missed being in a classroom after moving to the South Shore, she says. "It's really a fun job. Being around kids helps to keep you young."

Hanover's junior high is the only local school Kelly has worked in, she said. "I never applied to be a substitute here. A friend of mine told administrators in Hanover that I was available to work, and they called me to ask if I'd be a substitute."

Her association with Hanover schools means a two- or three-day work week on average, although she was a substitute for two months last year for sixth-grade teacher Rosemary Mee.

A love of teaching brought Kelly back into the classroom. She added she would probably still be a permanent teacher if she still lived in Connecticut.

Cashin and Kelly are examples of the type of people administrators can consistently count on, the superintendents said. They're people who understand the work through experience, or who are looking to start a career in the field.

The reason is simple: although many substitute-teaching jobs begin and end on the same day, administrators sometimes don't know if the regular teacher will be out for a lengthy period of time. They have fewer worries with subs who already know how to draw up lesson plans, mark papers and grade students.

Pay for substitute teachers ranges from $30 up to $50 in some districts, Fox said. Most districts include pay escalation for substitutes who work in the same classrooom for more than two or three weeks.

In Hanover, a substitute who holds a state teacher's certificate will receive $37 a day, but the pay goes up to $42 a day if he or she teaches a class for more than 10 consecutive days.

"After that point, we expect a certified teacher to do all functions that the permanent teacher would do with the class," Fox said.

Hanover pays "qualified" substitutes — college graduates without a teaching certificate — $32 and $37 a day. In Pembroke, all substitutes receive $38 for short-term and $42 for long-term work, Squarcia said.

Despite recent pay increases for subs, Fox said the salary still isn't high enough to avoid future shortages. "Not many want to work for $160 or $170 a week," he observed.

Low salaries are pervasive throughout public education, he said. Fox said the salaries of administrators is also low when compared to other fields.

"No executive in private industry who is responsible for $50 million in plant and a $7-million annual budget makes $45,000 a year, the average superintendent's salary," he said. "They make at least twice — if not three times — that amount."

Fox said extra money may help attract college graduates into teaching careers, but the same won't necessarily hold true for substitutes.

"Some people say we should 'buy' subs away from other districts with higher pay, but it doesn't work that way," he said. "Boston and Quincy each pay $50 a day, but it's not buying them better-qualified or more dependable people."

The trials and traumas of the first day at school

By Sheila Carney Hopkins

The first day of school is one that lives in everyone's memory as a turning point, a day of moving from the protection of home and mom to the outside world, a day when babyhood is left behind for the long years of being a student. For the parent sending his first child to school, the day has even more significance, for this is the day the world gets to view his handiwork and he gets some idea of how his child measures up in comparison to others.

The advent of almost universal preschool attendance has softened the impact of the first day of formal schooling somewhat. Kindergarten teachers in the area estimate that over 90 percent of the children in their classes have attended at least one year of preschool. Many have attended two years and some have even spent three years in nursery school before setting foot in a kindergarten room.

However, for most parents, no matter how long their child has been in preschool, the first day of kindergarten is the event. Before that, it was play. Now, it's the real thing.

Said Jane Redmond, "Maybe it's the school bus. Or maybe it's the fact that before, I chose the program and now my son is in a system that dictates what school he attends and when, but sending him off to kindergarten was more traumatic than I expected."

Or as Barb Allen put it, "She was getting on the bus for kindergarten and I was seeing her graduating from college, getting married and moving away. My baby was gone."

For parents sending their first child off, the experience holds even more meaning, more importance. Everything is unknown and everything seems to be a major decision. The normal uncertainties that come from dealing with a new situation are magnified by the fact that a school system can be particularly intimidating. For most parents, the only previous experience they have had with schools has been as students themselves. They view themselves as sending their first born off to spend the next thirteen or so years within a system over which they have no control. And for people who have rarely been away from their child for more than a few hours at a time, the prospect is frightening.

Learning through the orientation program conducted by the school and talking to more experienced parents that the schools are actually more responsive than originally thought calms many parents' fears.

The Haigh family now occupies the former schoolhouse on Whiting Street in Hanover.

"It never dawned on me that I could ask for a specific teacher for my child as some of the more experienced parents had," said Joan Little, whose oldest child started kindergarten last year.

Finding out that she could call the teacher at any time and not have to wait for scheduled conferences eased another parent's mind. "I just want to keep involved and continue to be the one who makes the major decisions concerning her life."

How their oldest child fares in school is an indication to many parents of how well they themselves have served as parents. Is he polite enough? Dressed well enough? Social enough? Do the children like him? Do the teachers like him? School is the first time many parents have to see their child in comparison to many others his own age and they fear that somehow he, and by inference, they, may not measure up.

Because so much emotion is tied up in sending the first child to school, every decision is important from determining whether the child is mature enough to start his year to buying appropriate clothes.

For some parents, whether their child should wait another year before starting school is an agonizing decision. In Marshfield, all children who are five by Dec. 31 are eligible for kingergarten. But in practice, very, very few who are not five by Sept. 1 actually start that year. Having those with late birthdays wait a year has become so widespread in town that one preschool has started a class specifically geared to "older 4-year-olds" - those old enough for kindergarten but not attending for one reason or another.

One mother said that deciding not to send her oldest child to kindergarten this year was the major topic of discussion in her household for months. "We had always assumed that if he was old enough, of course he would go. Frankly, I was a little insulted when people began asking if we were going to hold him back. It somehow implied that he wasn't smart enough. But when we found out that he would be 16 months younger than some of the other kids, it didn't seem fair to put him in that situation. We want him to be 'one of the guys,' not a mascot."

Even deciding what clothes to buy can be the center of discussion. "In my day, girls wore dresses and boys wore 'good' pants. No more. Now I have to find clothes that fit my idea of school clothes but don't appear overdressed to my child. And he's only five! What am I going to do when he's twelve?" wondered Janet O'Brien.

But for all the worry and preparation, another "first day of school" will come and pass with only a few tears here and there. And another set of first time school parents will have survived another milestone in the life of their child.

Computers in the classroom - an increasing necessity

By Sue Asci

As a tool for learning, a writing assistant or a programming challenge, the number of students electing computer studies in the public schools is increasing to a point that it has become a small number that does not take computers.

The formal computer program exists in grades 6-12. At the high school level it is an elective program.

"Nearly all students take computers," said Dr. Paul McDonald, assistant superintendent of Marshfield public schools.

Computers first came into the school program nearly seven years ago.

"We just had two classes, 30 to 35 youngsters involved, and one half-time teacher," said McDonald. "Today we're discussing maybe 450 students and three full-time teachers."

At the high school, the introductory course begins in tenth grade. It is an introduction to computer applications and also touches on what word processing is like. At the eleventh and twelfth grades, students can choose among three programming languages including: Basic, Cobol, and Pascal. They may also take word processing.

At the junior high school, all students, for one period per semester, receive an introduction to computers involving some of its history and common applications.

Sixth grade students receive two periods of introduction to computers per quarter.

"They primarily learn applying the computer to their basic studies," said McDonald, noting the students use the computers for some calculating and word processing.

For the first time this year the English department at the junior high school, particularly the seventh grade level, will be using computers in word processing to help students with their writing skills.

The computer program is part of the business department. The school system is considering appointing someone to run it as a separate department.

Students at the high school work in three laboratories. Two are free-standing labs containing Apple and TRS 80 computers. The third lab has terminals connected to the main computer the school system shares with the town.

The junior high school has one lab and each English classroom has two Apple computers. The Furnace Brook School has one lab.

There is a tutorial program available at the elementary levels.

"This program is for students having academic difficulties. There are four Title I computers per school," said McDonald.

The basic product from the personal computers and the computers tied in with the town's system is the same. The difference is the amount of information which can be stored. This varying capacity for memory affects the type of program that can be developed.

"We're not pretending to say we're turning out computer science majors. If you took our courses and go on to college, you'd probably take the introductory courses anyway," said McDonald. "But it has an advantage because more and more colleges require students to work with a computer. It can be quite an awesome task if you've never touched a computer."

McDonald sees the study of computers as important for a learning tool.

"For many people it's a non-threatening way to learn. It's difficult for some if they are called up in front of the classroom and don't know the answer," said McDonald. "If you're working with just you and the computer, it's not embarrassing if you don't know the answer."

Although many may choose to pursue computer programming after high school, the school system would also like to put emphasis on computer application.

"What we would like to see is more academic application of the computer to the classrooms. It can be learned to be used as a tool to use in our work and studies," said McDonald, noting this emphasis was introduced in the sixth grade last year and would be introduced in the junior high school level this year.

"It's probably more useful having a student come out of high school knowing how to use a computer to help him solve his problems," said McDonald.

McDonald observed that word processing can be very helpful in the improvement of students' writing skills. It facilitates the process of drafting and redrafting their work.

The average class at the high school is 22 students. They share access to the equipment.

"It is a problem that the labs are busy all of the time. It's difficult to get in to practice during study periods, that's true at all levels," said McDonald.

The students may write the programs out at home or in study hall and then go into the computer room during allotted times and hope it runs.

"Teachers are generally there after school," said McDonald, indicating students may go after school to work on their programs if there is someone there.

There are approximately 12 terminals per lab.

More equipment or declining enrollment at the high school may help to alleviate this problem.

The school system also offers in-service workshops on computer repair and introduction to computers for the staff.

"Nearly all of the grade 6-12 teachers have received orientation to computer use and probably a good half of the elementary school teachers," said McDonald.

They are also considering training some students in computer repair at a future date.

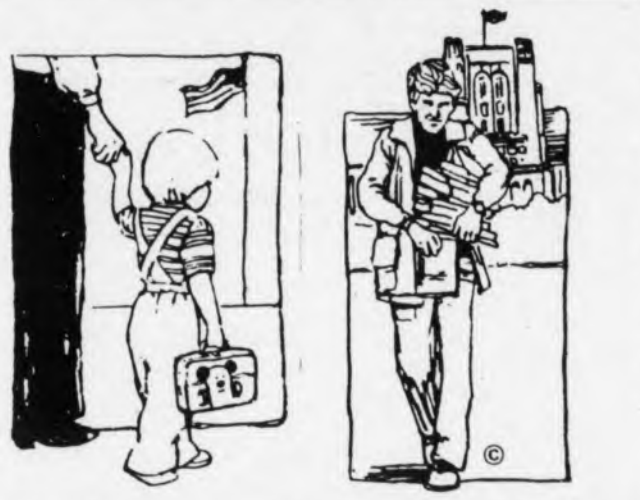
Attention all nervous parents - take a breath and relax

By Peggy Beals

(The author is the mother of six, all graduates of Marshfield's schools. She bases this report on copious personal experience and extensive sociological observation).



A word to parents whose youngsters will soon be going to school: relax. It applies if your tot is entering nursery school, your pre-school graduate is headed for first grade or 12th grade, or college. Relax.

Not that school isn't important. A look at any town's school budget, at any tuition bill, says schooling is important enough to warrant a major investment. Parents recognize this when questions about schools weigh as heavily in real estate transactions as percentages, and where the beach is.

School is important, but it needs to be kept in proportion. It isn't the do-or-die proposition parents sometimes think it is. It is an opportunity. Some kids take it, others don't. Unfortunately our public school system doesn't allow us to concentrate on the willing. Parents of the other sort can keep in mind that success in life goes to both sorts. You might as well relax.

Remember also that school isn't a sausage making machine. We can't stuff tots in one end confident that neat, knowledgable 18-year-olds will emerge from the other. It's more like a motor boat, with teacher keeping the motor running and the pupil steering, while the parent watches. He may make suggestions, and pray, but steering is the student's responsibility, his job, and a quick way to get school off to a bad start is for the parent to insist on taking over. It is the student's responsibility to get up on time, dress properly, do about lunch, and be ready for the bus or car pool. It should be his lot to take the consequences of failure, too.

For parents of tinies, beginning their school experience, school assumes the looming menace of a final exam. Will their little person remember his name, make friends, demonstrate whatever skills he's mastered in letters, numbers, color? Will he stay dry? How good is the teacher? Will she draw out creativity, or just fill time? A classic fear of young mothers, amazed by the exceptional talents of their child, is that he will be bored. After all, he's going into a class of average kids. How will the teacher possibly find time to offer him the advanced work he's ready for?

Relax! Pre-school and lower level teachers are a unique class. They are chosen for their warmth, perception, sensititivy, skill. With the aid of excellent tests, they know not only your child's strengths and weaknesses, but can also discover eye or ear problems, and detect signs of personality change or physical ills parents miss. You have a good ally in these teachers. Appreciate. Relax. Yes, your wee one may be using big words and reading second grade books. She may also be unable to concentrate worth a darn, or to be quiet. All kids have adjustments to make, and they do.

The next great tension point comes midway through high school, the massive hysteria of college applications. One would think a family's very right to occupy space on this earth depended on college acceptances, the more the merrier. Test scores are worked into casual conversation. The mail is prayed for and dreaded. Will he be accepted anywhere? Will she get into Dad's alma mater, or Mom's or Uncle Harry's? Please, let it be a name brand college!

College is again, a major investment, this time of a family's resources financial and emotional. So powerful is the pressure to get in, this investment is often made unwisely, virtually squandered.

Some pupils are strongly motivated and ready for college at, or even before high school graduation. Others are not and often do poorly or drop out. Sometimes a young person wants to study guitar, art, dance, but parents insist on a "sensible" course. One parent says no one should go to college until he wants it "so bad he can taste it." There's considerable merit in letting many graduates work for a few years, see how it feels, mature, and think about options. A friend offers this solution to the youngster dead set on what parents think is a poor career choice. "Let him finance the first year, with savings, and bank loans. If he does well, repay him. If he doesn't, let it be his loss."

College pressure creates a lot of manipulation, too. Kids look at college catalogs as wish books, a golden chance to play on parental pride and shake the dust of this poky little town from their feet, travel, see life! They declare they will kill themselves if they aren't allowed to enroll in Far West U., or Sun City Tech. Indulgent parents spend heavily for applications, travel for interviews, transportation out and back for holidays and vacations, not to mention the hassle of picking the kid up at Logan amid ten thousand other students. Toward spring comes word that Far West U. isn't all he expected, he's looking at Alaska and Hawaii. Many youngsters would be far better off enrolling at one of the excellent near-by community colleges. Local young people have moved easily from these schools into the best colleges and universities. Even U. Mass., a city in itself, can be too much for a small-town person to handle.

Yes, be interested, meet the teachers, look at papers and reports, work with the schools for improvement. Remind your youngster that every tax payer in this town has an investment of hard dollars in him, and would appreciate seeing some tangible results. Yes, remember it is his life, his judgment, his responsibility. And yes, this, too, shall pass, for better or worse, so you might as well relax.

Computers soon to become part of the basics . . .

Having their interest sparked in the schools and from the world around them, many students want to have their own personal computer at home. Some of those who convince their parents to make the purchase are taking their technical knowledge and assisting in the choosing of a system and its components.

Radio Shack, a division of Tandy Corporation, sells its own brand of home computer.

A sales representative of the Marshfield Radio Shack reports their computers are large sellers.

The interest in home computers has increased over the past year. Last year, Radio Shack had a sale on computers just before Christmas. They sold as fast as they were replaced.

The sales representative stated that mostly families come to the Marshfield store to purchase home computers, some purchasing one for each child.

Often the adults are accompanied by their children who help them pick out what they want and guide them as to what components are necessary. Some parents leave most of the computer dicussion up to the children.

Many 10 and 12-year-olds come in and know exactly what to buy. The representative also reported that many 14 and 15-year olds have a good working knowledge of computers from experiencing them in the schools.

Radio Shack also offers classes, for a fee, for adults and children to learn more about the system they've purchased. Some of the classes are two weeks or longer and provide information for those with varying degrees of proficiency.

A Norwell student displays his short story skill

The Mystery of the Thoroughbred

The site is a horse race track in the early 1900s. It is located in Suffolk County. June 17 is the approximate date. It is a fairly hot day and no one is in sight. The stables are empty because everyone is out riding.

Paul Quoton, a rather shy, black haired boy, is going to show his back country cousin that in the city there are horses, too. Jessy Muntion, who is about eleven years old, loves the smell of Berny Carston's cookie truck. Berny used to own Starter until he sold it in 1943. Starter seems to be mixed up in a smuggling scheme with Mr. Coldona and Buddy Dickle. Coldon and Dickle have seen prison many times, and are trying not to get in again. Dickle is a thirty-five year old butler and sidekick of Mr. Coldon. Mr. Coldon loves tricking and making money for himself. Tom Quoton, our hero in this story, is Paul's sixteen year old brother with red curly hair and a slight tan.

A terrible scheme is taking place. A non-thoroughbred is being sold as a thoroughbred. Paint covers the blaze. Paul discovers a shot pin and a tranquilizer in Starter's stable. While in the stable, Paul and Jessy see Mr. Coldon and Buddy Dickle talking about the one hundred thousand dollars they shall make.

Paul and Jessy decided to wait so they won't be caught sneaking around. When they think Coldon and Dickle are gone, they leave. Goldon and Dickle see the kids and follow them. Jessy and Paul hid, but are caught. The children are locked in a store barn with the machinery.

Tom, who has found Paul's note, drives over with Berny Carston. Berny is coming to see his old horse. Tom wants Paul to come home early because of company. When they get to the scene, they decide to look for the two snoopers. Meanwhile, Paul and Jessy are still cooped up.

Tom and Berny finally find the two. Berny and Paul go for the police while Jessy and Tom trap the thieves. Their plan is to surround the robbers in the barn. First, they lead them to the barn. Then Tom and Jessy sneak out of the groomiung barn. They lock the door. The air is filled with screeching sirens and gun shots. Finally the police capture the crooks, Tom, Berny, Paul, and Jessy are awarded at a banquet for catching the outlaws.

There's more to school than teachers

By Lois Martin

There are men and women without whom schools could not function. Let us be more dramatic, and say that without them education would be imperiled.

We have agreed that teaching is one of the more noble and the most important of professions. We have said, repetitively, that education is America's biggest business.

Ah, but it's the same old story. Behind the scenes of every great production, here it's the classroom, are people who make possible a finer atmosphere for learning, somehow.

First take your bus drivers . . . never literally because if you did, you and I would be the ones behind the wheel at the mercy of 50-some kids, never mind their rampant viruses, or their winsome problems.

I see them, mostly they're women in our area, as they maneuver their mammoth yellow vehicles gently toward a cluster of short people at a house-side bus stop.

I marvel at them, first at their motivation to do what they do; second, at their training and ability to do what they do, and third, at their endurance to do what.

They are also the ones who dress up for Halloween, the ones who are given meaningful hugs now and then by the little ones and they are in line for the school year for every kind of problem growing kids create or encounter. Bravo, at the beginning of your school year.

The custodians. We used to call Mr. Higgins a janitor and meant full respect in the use of that term. But no matter what the people who clean, organize and maintain our school buildings call themselves, we call them downright important.

Much of their work is done after school hours. We meet them in the halls now and then thinking of them graphically as the ones with the long brooms. In fact they are the ones that change a gymnasium to an auditorum by moving about 300 chairs and rows of bleachers.

They are in on every unfortunate accident in the building. And they are the only ones in the building who know where something is that no one else can remember having seen anywhere. They are somehow empowered and enabled to put things up where no one else can reach. They can fix everything. They are the first in and the last out. They're the ones who lock up or open up. They know how things are at the school. And they have been the undemanding friend of many a student who was briefly out of sorts or in the hall. They are inordinately important.

The secretaries. Most schools seem to have the same ones for entire generations, if everyone's lucky. Because it's the secretary you need to see when you need to see someone. She's the one who let you make the phone call that saved the day when your report's home and is supposed to be in room 309.

She is efficient. She is unobtrusive. She is slow to take credit, slower to look for it, but is faster in fact to deserve it than we have said. We should say so more often.

She answers five phones at once, contacts the homerooms on emergencies, forgives readily when no one answers or fails to get back to her on something. She is ubiquitous, magnanimous.

She is one of those professionals who doesn't harp about being one. The most professional aspect of her daily work is probably that characteristic. She simply gets the job done, the papers out, principal on the right line and in a position to get his or her work done too.

She knows who the best teachers are and why, same with the kids. She's seen them come and go. Though she never studied to be an educator, she is among the first to recognize one of them. School days would be chaos without strong competent women up front where they're needed, by the public and by the staff/student body.

Volunteers. They have other names. Mothers, 'non-working' parents, women who stay home, friend.

A rose by any other name would smell as sweet. It is obvious to credit this person, usually a woman, with her contribution as an aide when she sits with a third grader who's working like anything to get a better hang on reading. That's nice.

Further, it is never an overlooked grace to see the homemade cupcakes proudly borne into class for Valentines Day festivities. And there are those who have been to the Aquarium and to the zoo at least 12 times as field trips and needs appeared on the school calendar.

But know this. Every parent lists on that confidential start-school piece of paper, where he or she can be found when needed by the child in an emergency.

Then . . . there's a place on that paper for the person who's on standby for the parent, the one who's unavailable, out of town, working . . .

That's the volunteer, the real one I'm talking about. Show me the woman who has picked up 10 kids sick on three different winter days when she just got home with the groceries and the dog from the vet and her own low grade temperature . . . and I'll show you the unsung hero of public education.

She has taken everyone to the ballgame, to McDonald's, to music lessons, to home, time and again and twice when the kid forgot his violin.

She is magic in your child's public schooling.

And now even as we speak, these marvelous men and women are preparing to make good use of your child's intelligence again this year. You owe them, in advance, a warm handshake in recognition of their unique talents, contributed with unswerving graciousness, and, unless we're careful, too little graciousness from us.

The true confession of a school lunchbox

By Karen Cubie

Remember lunchboxes?

In grade school you had to have one.

Now you wouldn't be caught dead with one.

Most people find it hard to admit they ever owned one. Talking about their favorite lunchbox is more embarrassing than discussing their weight.

A lunchbox tells a lot about a person.

My roommate, Brenda, recalls her favorite box fondly.

"I used to have one that was oval, and vinal on the outside, I think," she giggled. "It zipped shut. It was different -- decidedly more feminine -- and it was plain. Maybe it was denim. I had a read plaid one, too, when I was in Junior High."

"My sister, Priscilla, also had a red, plaid lunch box.

"I liked Charlie Brown," she said. "But I remember my red plaid one best. This kid at school always had a brown paper bag to bring his lunch in and I felt so bad for him. I thought his mother didn't have enough money to buy him a lunch. He always commented on how much he liked mine, so one day I went home from school and told Mom I had decided I wanted a new one because mine was too old. For some reason she bought me another one. I gave the kid at school my plaid one and he used it everyday.

"He had real, bad breath," she added.

A girl at my Health Club liked the Scooby-Doo box best.

"He'd do anything for food, and when I was a kid I'd do anything for my mother if she gave me a snack," she confessed. "But that was when I was little. Now I always carry my lunch in a bag."

Even kids in South America had lunchboxes.

"My favorite was a green plastic one," remembered Gordon, a friend of mine whose parents were missionaries to Ecuador. "I think it was an ecology box. They were really popular there. It was my favorite because it was the only one I ever had."

Lance Anderson, a clerk in the housewares department at Caldor's in Pembroke, reports that WWF Wrestling and Cabbage Patch Kids boxes are the favorites of this year's grade school students.

"The wrestling one features Hulk Hogan, Andre the Giant, and Roddy Piper," he said. "They're almost all gone now."

Caldor's also carries boxes featuring the Care Bears, the Care Bear Cousins, Ghostbusters, and the Muppet Babies.

Only the Muppet Babies boxes are metal like the ones I remember, but all the boxes still contain the matching thermos.

"The plastic is more durable," Lance said. "The metal ones just don't seem to be as popular."

Lance's favorite box featured G.I. Joe.

"I don't know why I liked it," he said, reluctantly, with an embarrassed grin on his face. " 'Cause I used to have those dolls, I guess."

Sue Proctor had an Adams family box.

"I liked Lurch and all those guys," she said. "I still watch them on cable."

Sean Taylor was a deprived child.

"I never had a box," boasted the Caldor's clerk. "I always bought my lunch."

Some people are just too cool to tell the truth.

Meet Kate Coon: An independent educational consultant

by Deena Strauss Beals

The cost of a college education increases each year. Financial assistance has been diminishing. The fears and concerns that have always faced students and parents looking for the right college have multiplied over recent years as the financial investment has skyrocketed. When I went to college, the idea of merely getting an advanced liberal education and experiencing the new life styles of living away from home (a stepping stone toward adulthood) was motivation and reason enough for going to college, the four year financial investment not being out of reach for most.

But these days, most families cannot afford to pay for the experience of college unless some return on the investment is guaranteed. Making a wrong choice in a college can be outrageously expensive, as credits, time, and money are lost; hence, the growth of the new field of Educational Consultant.

Kate Coon is an independent Educational Consultant in Marshfield. Since graduating from Yale in 1973, Kate has been an educator of one kind or another. In 1979 she left her post as Chairperson of the English Department at St. Ann's High School in Brooklyn, N.Y. to join the staff at Milton Academy as a college counselor. And although she has since taken time out to have 2 children, she has hardly paused at her vocation of educating and counseling college bound kids. In fact, she has enhanced the field of college counseling by writing a small book on the subject. Coon has researched and experienced virtually every aspect of college admissions, applications, suitability and whatever else one would need to make the most appropriate choice for higher education or specialized education.

Coon, who sees students from many towns in the area gets her clients primarily by word of mouth. Her reputation has been her best form of advertising. Although most of her clients are students (and their parents) in their final year of high school,

Kate also counsels transfer students or younger students looking for specialized summer or advanced programs, or students just in need of educational advising to insure their high school academics will lead toward their long term goals.

The primary difference between Kate Coon's education advising and that of a school guidance counselor is that she takes time to get to know the student, parents and their individual needs, concerns, and goals in order to best assist in their difficult choice. Kate starts by interviewing the student and parent and getting a complete student profile and biographical outline. She then assists the student in doing a comprehensive self-assessment. Values-clarification and long range goals are all part of the assessment. When Ms. Coon has compiled all the personal information, she is then ready to match the student with her vast resource of schools. Although Ms. Coon does not use a computer, her data base is as wide as any around. She uses the standard resources as well as those that she has accumulated over the years. Kate states that, "computers can be useful for data bases, but they do not make selections or judgments well." Her emphasis is on the personal side of the whole process.

She does more than merely match students to schools. She explained, "I am able to give them (the students) the insight into the process so they can understand how colleges make their decisions, and so they can be more knowledgeable participants." Ms. Coon's goal is also to promote self awareness so that the student can more effectively fill out applications and essays. "Very often," says Ms. Coon, "the student's emphasis is on which school will accept him, rather than on which school has the most to offer him." She tries to change this perspective so that the student is sure to get all that he wants from the school he chooses.

When the student has made his choices, Ms. Coon will then assist with the application procedure. Her English background enables her to be a valuable sounding board and a constructive, non-threatening critic for essays on application forms. "Kids also have a chance to practice interview techniques, build self confidence and improve their presentation," states Ms. Coon. Interviews are generally not essential for college applicants, but they can be very helpful.

Kate's emphasis is that each student has individual needs and goals. "Some students do better by 'stopping out' for a year or two," says Ms. Coon. This gives the student a better opportunity to assess his long term goals and perhaps mature a little before making the big commitment to a particular college.

Fashions of 1985

By Paula Brackett

In the fall of 1985, fashion is breathing more freely. Prejudices are somewhat lifting, and the air is slightly less stale.

Eras of fashion are surging together in some perpetual whirlwind. Styles often make a comeback but in the 1980's, the styles are all coming back at the same time, not leaving anyone the time to think about what goes with what. Everything goes with everything.

No longer are the lines between the "Socks" and the "Freaks," the "Squares" and the "Straights" so defined.

Leather jackets of the 50's are dressed with both mini's from the 60's or baggies from the 80's. Hats of all styles are being worn in abundance. And once where accessories were used to make the outfit, they are now becoming the outfit.

Fashion today is an immediate, outwardly expressive means of communication, that students especially take advantage of.

Pia Johnson, a Marshfield resident said, "There are too many Madonna wanna be's and not enough individuality." This seems to be an agreed-upon consensus of college and high school students alike.

Yet they both are also in agreement that there's more freedom to experiment without being ostracized and the opportunity to take "mood" into consideration before dressing in the morning is like a breath of fresh air.

Special $15 offer for your student body.

It's back-to-school time. And a lot of schools and colleges require their students to get a physical examination.

To make it as affordable and convenient as possible, HealthFirst is making this special offer: $15 for a complete back-to-school physical exam.* At this price, it's a good idea to get one even if it's not required.

Each HealthFirst facility is fully equipped and staffed with highly qualified doctors, nurses and technicians. Each is also open 7 days a week from 8:00 in the morning until 10:00 at night (Weymouth facility 8:00 AM – 8:00 PM).

So take your student to HealthFirst for a back-to-school physical exam.

School Supt. looks toward a year of challenge

The upcoming school year will be "challenging" according to Superintendent Eugene Crowell. It will also be a year affected by the state's attempt to equalize and reform public education.

In Cohasset, there will be few new staff members, as changes have necessitated transition rather than new employment. Recently, the school committee approved the appointment of Colleen Lucas as the new junior-senior high school art teacher.

The third graders will be losing a "wonderful teacher" when Shirley Manna retires November 1. "She is one of the best people I have ever worked with," Crowell said. "But the great thing is we are replacing her with a teacher who is just as great, Maureen Alcott."

Alcott was a tenured teacher at the junior/senior high school, whose position was riff'd and consequently she requested the transfer. She has already received several days of orientation in that classroom, and has attended elementary education courses this summer.

Crowell explained Alcott will participate in a two-to-three-week transitional period with Manna during October. "I want her acclimated to the elementary school environment, and I think this process will work out very well." he said.

In addition, Sharon Moody, an early childhood education specialist and former kindergarten teacher here, will be returning this year. She recently moved to Cohasset, and received high praise from fellow staff members and administrators.

The school enrollment figures have recently been finalized, according to Crowell, and appear very close to figures he estimated when he first arrived in Cohasset in 1980. The Osgood population will total 321; Deer Hill will be 250, and a total of 670 students will be at the junior/senior high school. That means a total of 1243 students in Cohasset, a figure almost equal to the 1245 projected by Crowell in 1972.

If his estimations continue on course, there will be 1200 students next year, 1158 in 1987, 1123 in 1988, and a bottoming out of 1100 students in 1989. The student population will start to slowly climb after that year, according to the superintendent.

"I'm afraid that looking at this, if we drop 100 students by the year following next, I guess we'd be facing three to four faculty members dropped from our staff. But, if possible, further adjustments will be made. There will likely be a natural attrition, where teachers will be resigning or retiring from the staff. It would help alleviate that situation," Crowell stated.

Speaking of the new Public School Improvement Act of 1985, Crowell said information on the legislation is just now trickling in. He will be meeting this week with the state Commissioner of Education and other area superintendents.

Under that program, Cohasset will not be eligible for state EED grants. We are scheduled to receive $55,670 in calendar year 1986 and $38,540 the following year. These Professional Development Grants, to be used to help with the $18,000 minimum salary requirement and other assistance for instructors, must be approved by the school committee and a vote of town meeting. "Unless there is a majority vote by the school board and the town, these monies will not be available," Crowell explained.

"These and other grants for teachers are still a big question mark as to whether they have been funded. The question of whether they will get the

No answers from state

After a meeting with the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) last week, Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis walked away with more questions than answers.

Although Cohasset is on a priority list to fund the pipeline connection to the Hull sewage treatment plant, DeSantis said he has "serious doubts" about the state's intent to approve even this portion of the wastewater plan. The other two sections of Cohasset's innovative and alternative plan have received either total rejection or low priority for funding.

"We are ready to roll on the pipeline," DeSantis said this week. "We can have a design plan completed in six months and construction completed within the year. But I seriously doubt if the state will allow us to go ahead. I expect they'll still be dancing around when this latest study is done in September."

DeSantis is referring to a $200,000 study by Camp, Dresser and McKee which was commissioned by DEQE to investigate the capacity of the interceptors to handle one million gallons of Cohasset sewage into the Hull facility. The state also awarded that engineering firm another $200,000 to examine the plant's capacity to handle the increased sewage. That study was completed, and the second one is expected to be finished by mid-September.

"It's unbelievable that the state is awarding CDM all this money for studies, when the most we would ever be sending over to Hull would be 300,000 gallons of sewage. Where did this one million figure come from, and how come it's costing the Massachusetts' taxpayers $400,000 to find out the answer to two questions? This whole Hull thing, to me, is a one great study in bureaucratic tap dancing.

"I really become enraged," he continued, "at what I see as clear abuse of power and position by the state when a bureaucracy denies a community the benefit of law by contorting that law. I am angered by the incompetence and lack of conscientious effort of DEQE to do anything not only for Cohasset, but for the Commonwealth."

The commission chairman attended the annual meeting of DEQE last week along with the numerous other communities requesting construction grants funds. The Division of Water Pollution Control Chief Engineer Paul Taurasi chaired the meeting.

At that meeting, in which various state representatives and town officials were invited to speak, very few questions were answered, according to DeSantis. When he directly questioned DEQE's intent to fund innovative and alternative wastewater technology as required by the federal Clean Waters Act, Taurasi did not respond, he said. "We all vented a lot of steam, but there wasn't a whole lot of answers."

A good summer; on to winter !

The summer is drawing to a close as we exchange bathing suits and baseball uniforms for more practical pursuits. But in Cohasset, no matter what the season, there is one person whose mind rarely strays from thoughts of leisure and fun.

Recreation Director Jack Worley will remain in his office at Town Hall, busily scheduling activities and events for the fall and the winter. Even now, as children prepare to re-enter the hallowed halls of academia, Worley is fitting the winter's ski trips into the crowded schedule.

The summer was filled with recreational programs for young and not-so-young. Worley reports that this summer 286 kids participated in the playground program, 97 in the half-day schedule for four and five year-olds, and 189 in the full day camp setting.

The popular playground program extended through seven weeks, and has been a fixture in Cohasset for the past eight years.

"The number of kids who join the program has not changed much. We don't have a bigger population of kids, so we don't have a larger number every year," according to Worley.

Among the other programs he counts as successful this summer were youth tennis for all ages and adult lessons. There were evening adult classes and an adult-junior evening program. A NELTA tournament and a youth program tournament concluded the summer season.

Six-week golf lessons, along with dog obedience training and aerobic classes are fixtures in the School starts

Opening day for the Cohasset public school system will be Thursday, September 5 with a full day for all students, grades kindergarten through 12. Parents are urged to read the bus routes carefully, and students should be at their assigned stops at the times indicated on the schedule.

Students and parents of the incoming seventh grade are reminded that Move-Up Day for the seventh graders will be held Wednesday, September 4, and all students should be at their bus stops by 9 a.m. and will be dismissed at noon and be bused home. Students should be arriving at their home between 12 and 12:30 p.m.

Please follow the schedules which you have received through the mail.

Tax bills prepared

The assessors have almost completed the necessary computer work, and once the state approves the rate, tax bills will be sent out.

Appraiser Leo Hannon told the advisory committee this week that latest information pertaining to commercial properties should be processed through the computer at the end of the week. This is necessary to upgrade assessments.

The advisory board also approved a budget transfer of $1230 to add more hours to the part-time clerical help in the assessor's office. During the next three months, additional help is needed as that office prepares information for the town's reappraisal.

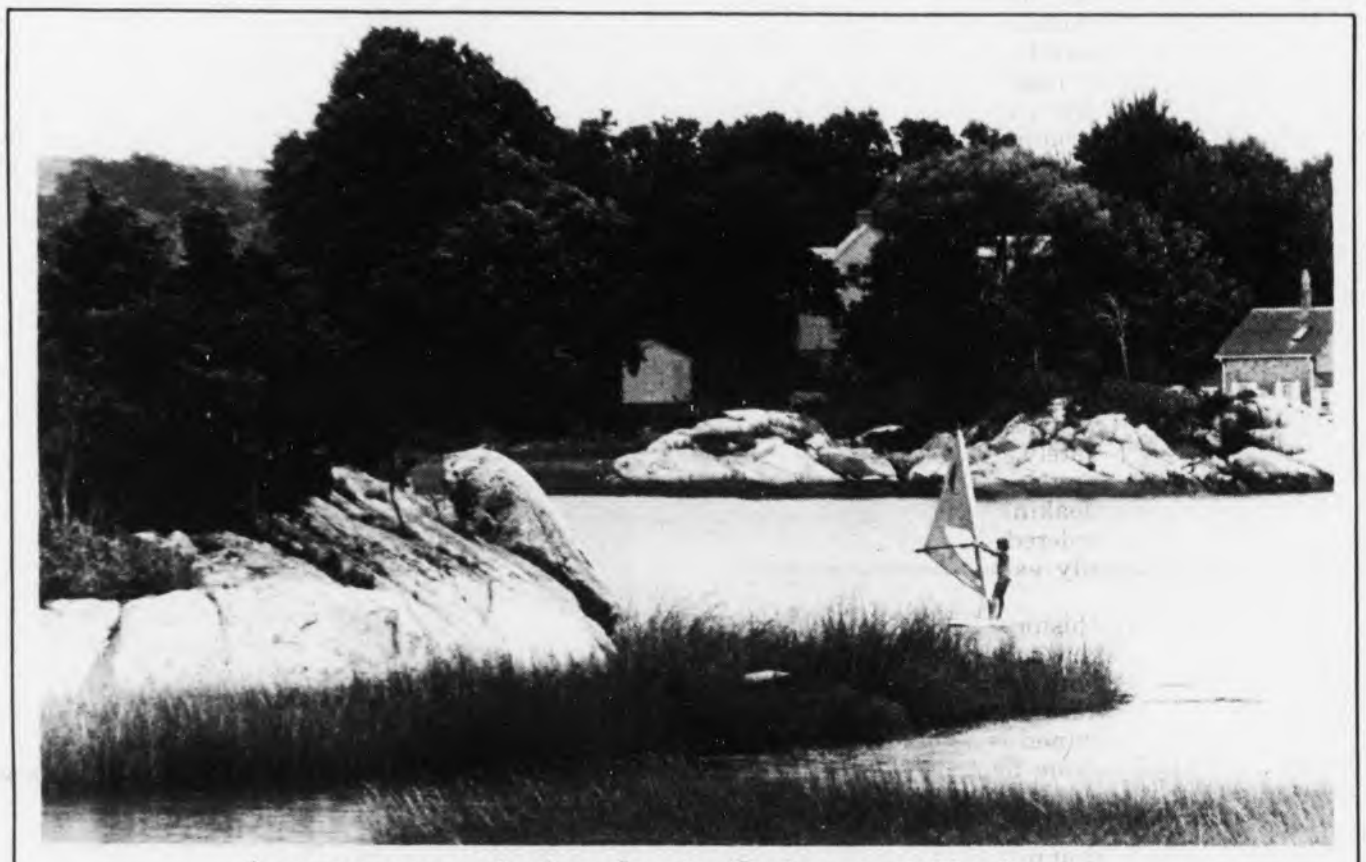
The assessors are also considering the employment of a special town counsel to assist with tax abatement cases. There is a possibility of conflict, Hannon said, because town counsel has several clients in town who might also be seeking a tax abatement. In such cases, an attorney specializing in tax appeals could be employed.

A grateful resident

Howe Road resident James Lagrotteria, who for many years supported the renovation of the North Cohasset Fire Station, thanked selectmen this week for the completion of the repairs.

Lagrotteria continually voiced a need to make the repairs to the deteriorating building. The money to make the necessary changes to the former fire station was appropriated at town meeting.

Lagrotteria said "the re-painting and vinyl-siding of a badly deteriorated building has done much to enhance our town property and certainly to improve the neighborhood as well. Your good judgement to paint the front and maintain its colonial facade also indicates your concern for history."



In his letter to the board, Lagrotteria suggested re-naming the former fire station as a memorial to a town employee or volunteer who served the town for many years. The building is currently used as a garage in which town equipment and machinery is stored.

Labor Day reminder

With the coming of Labor Day comes this reminder. The Mariner will move up its deadline next week to enable efficient production of the Sept. 5 publication along with a chance for workers to celebrate the holiday as much as possible.

Please keep this in mind: all advertising and news copy should be in the Mariner office Saturday, Aug. 31. The mailing address is P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, 02050, or the office is at 58 Main St. (Rte. 3A), Marshfield.

That'll be a busy news/ad week. Let's get it going early so that we can char the hotdogs on time.

Advisory board approves transfer requests

The advisory committee approved a few budget transfers this week, depleting the reserve budget to $93,000 for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Committee members also took issue with the way in which some expenditures have been completed without transfer approval from the committee. Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer said letters of reprimand have been written to a few committees, including selectmen, reminding them that approval from the advisory board is necessary before monies are expended from the reserve fund.

One example of this procedure was the decision last week by selectmen to approve $11,500 in repairs to fire truck four. Fire Chief Martin Dooley, following approval by the selectmen, ordered the parts for the repair work which he said could take up to five weeks to complete.

Advisory member Arne Gjesteby complained that if this was the procedure to be followed by selectmen and other committees, there was no need for an advisory committee to oversee the reserve fund.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England explained to the board Tuesday night that selectmen hinged their approval on the emergency nature of the repairs, saying the condition of engine four was affecting the public safety of the town and its residents.

But Dormitzer argued that the advisory committee should always be consulted before any expenditure approval, and failure to follow this regulation "is punishable by law." England emphasized selectmen were only concerned that postponing the repairs would endanger the public safety of the community.

"We can always meet on a moment's notice, as quickly as selectmen," Gjesteby stated.

The advisors ultimately approved the request for $11,500 to repair ailing engine four. Chief Dooley said the parts for the leaking tank and broken pump system have been ordered, although it will take longer than originally expected to complete the work.

He detailed the long history of repairs and deterioration of the truck which was purchased 11 years ago. Rust and various repairs due to salt water exposure during the 1978 blizzard have been extensive.

Chief Dooley explained that a spare engine is being used while engine four is repaired. If that engine is at the scene of a fire, mutual aid from Scituate or Hingham will be requested.

Dooley explained that it "isn't fair to always call on our neighbors" and that the force is not up to minimal staffing requirements without the standard engine truck.

When Dormitzer asked how many working fires the town has had this year in which mutual aid was requested, Chief Dooley answered none. There were seven last year, and there is no way to predict how many will occurr this year.

Member Fred Koed said he has looked at the ailing engine truck and determined it is "in rough shape." He continued, "looking at it cost-effectively, for the safety of the town, this is the priority (to have it repaired) than wondering how many fires the town will have this year."

Member William Rossi also noted that the board has heard nothing from the chief about the disrepair of engine four since they have been meeting in June.

When asked if the $11,500 apropriation will be followed by more requests to fund future repairs, Chief Dooley said he thought that might be it for a while. A drive train problem may be adjusted, he said, by the lighter weight water tank being currently installed.

The chief also noted he has continually asked for a new truck, but was put off this past year in favor of higher priority purchases. He estimated a new truck, which he still recommends, would cost about $110,000 and would take about a year to deliver if town meeting approved the expenditure.

In other action, the advisors approved a $1000 expenditure for the fire chief search committee to administer an exam to qualified fire chief candidates, and $675 for clerical costs for the committee.

The advisors approved the $675 budget transfer, although selectmen had previously allowed the committee to advertise the chief's job. That amount was used to advertise the position, for postage, and for various clerical supplies including the purchase of a file cabinet.

Committee Chairman Stephen Bobo appeared before the advisors and explained that 17 applications were received in response to the advertisement. A file cabinet was necessary, he explained, to contain the extensive records of the committee. Once their work was completed, the records and the cabinet will be handed over to the town.

Advisors noted the money has previously been committed, so there was little they could do except fund the appropriation.

Bobo explained the $1000 is needed to develop, administer and grade a test specifically designed for the seven most qualified candidates for the Cohasset Fire Chief's job. The test, he said, will be one of three factors in deciding the most qualified candidates for the position.

Along with the the examination, there has been an in-depth questionnaire for all candidates to answer, a firefighting strategy problem specific to Cohasset, and there will be a simulated situation in which the candidate will attempt to work out a problem with one of his firefighters.

The examination will be counted equally along with the other two factors, according to Bobo, and will be devised and administered by an independent consultant approved by the International Fire Protection Agency. A numerical grade will also be forwarded to the committee at the completion of the test.

Bobo said the committee plans to choose five applicants to present to the board of selectmen as finalists for the position.

The advisors approved the budget transfer, noting this ad hoc committee was formed by selectmen without a budget.

In other action, the advisors approved a $1230 budget transfer to the assessors for additional clerical hours to help prepare for the town's upcoming reappraisal.

The advisory committee will also be meeting Sept. 10 with members of the insurance advisory committee to review probable increases in insurance premium costs for next year.

The board tabled a transfer request from the highway department until they can talk with Surveyor Harold Litchfield about the inflated cost of a four-wheel vehicle for that department.

Business news Neagle top lister/seller

Mary Ellen Neagle has listed and sold the most property during July in the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company, according to manager Muriel Desmond.

Neagle has been associated with the Jack Conway Company for 15 years. She has been the top listing agent in the Cohasset office for the past five years and has accompanied the President's Gold Club to Antigua and on many other trips.

A graduate of Colby Sawyer College in New Hampshire, the Cohasset resident has earned the designations of GRI (Graduate, Realtors Institute) and CRS (Certified Residential Specialist) from the National Association of Realtors. She has been a member of the Professional Standards Committee, the Hospitality Committee and Membership Committee of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors. She is also vice president of the Women's Council of Realtors.

Summer ended, now on to winter

summer months, according to Worley. Youth wrestling clinics were another popular feature of the summer and were available to younger participants for the first time this year.

"We didn't have any new programs this summer, but we had some new formats," Worley says. "The wrestling used to be restricted for the high school kids, and this summer we allowed the younger kids in. We had a six year-old in the program. We also took some younger kids into the tennis program."

The summer, Worley says, "worked out very well. The way the programs are structured, I'm sure we could have handled more children."

Worley receives most of his program and special event ideas from the children. They give him a lot of feedback from the games and activities they play, and are quick to tell him when things aren't terrific.

"The little kids don't have that many ideas. It's more a matter of them telling you when they don't like something, and we've had some of that. But the playground program gives us the flexibility to try new things during the day," he added.

The autumn brings as many recreational activities as the summer. The first thing will be soccer league registrations. Worley predicts about 300 youngsters will participate in that program which is just being organized.

There will be another afterschool sports program from 3 to 5 p.m. for grades K-3, and for the fourth, fifth and sixth graders. Different sports activities will be scheduled daily, including basketball, soccer and games.

Golf lessons, dog obedience training and aerobics will continue through the fall and winter months.

"We're still putting together our complete schedule for the fall. I have some ideas, but I won't know what I can do until I know what we have left in the budget," he says.

There is a revolving account separate from the recreation department's operating budget. Activities such as golf, tennis and aerobics are programs allowed under the revolving account. The professional instructor is paid through a contract service system where he or she submits a bill at the end of the semester and is paid on the basis of numbers of students.

Worley must also search through his salary budget, which he said, is larger this year than in previous years. But the summer program cost more this year because of the very few rain days which normally cancel out an instructor's salary for a few days. This year the entire summer program cost between $7000 and $8000.

"The budget is going to be tight, but we have a little extra salary money so that gives us some flexibility," Worley stated. "Ninety-nine percent of the cost of a program is generally the cost of the instructor."

The recreation director is anxious to see if the available funds match the number of ideas he and the recreation commission have developed for the year.

"In many towns, you have a recreation commission who is only concerned with cutting the budget. This commission is very supportive and tries to think of new programs for the entire community," he adds.

Director since 1976, Worley describes Cohasset as an extremely sports and leisure-oriented town. "Cohasset's demands go along with our philosophy - to have as much exposure to all types of recreational activities for all children and adults. We try to provide many leisure acitivities for all ages," he says.

Worley describes the past three months as a very successful season for the recreation department.

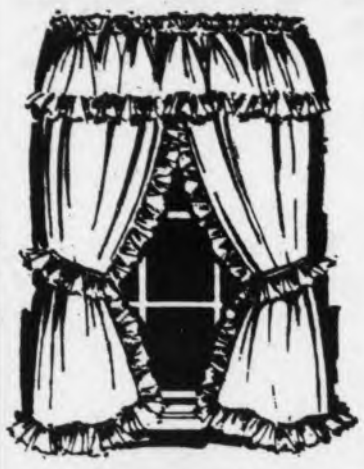
The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law



WITHIN REASON

The standard of what constitutes negligence in an automobile collision case essentially is the same as that applied to any other allegedly tortious act. The question to be answered is: Did the defendant exercise the amount of care that a "reasonable man" would have shown under the same circumstances? Judges give this "reasonable man" a wide variety of attributes when instructing the jury as to his character. Generally, however, he is described as a person of average mental capabilities and average physical characteristics and reactions. The "reasonable man," however, is not subject to the occasional ill-considered or imprudent act to which ordinary individuals fall prey. He also does not gamble with his life and safety by taking foolish risks, as is sometimes done by less reasonable men.

The details of any accident, automobile or otherwise, are vital in the course of any legal action. The manner in which this evidence is presented can also have a substantial effect on the outcome of the case. Oftentimes, personal injury or other damages are an integral part of these proceedings. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882 is available to discuss your case, offer suggestions and carry through with the required legal procedures. I am available daily by appt. Have a happy and safe Labor Day weekend. Please don't drink and drive.

HINT: No area of tort law has undergone as much change in so little time as the area dealing with a manufacturer's liability for injuries caused by his product.

It takes a lot of hustle to be great. And if practice is any indication the CHS team will be a winner this year.

New election

Martha L. Magnuson, a Cohasset resident since 1971, was elected to a third term as treasurer at the recent annual meeting of the Plymouth County Wildlands Trust (PCWT), a non-profit land trust dedicated to preservation of local natural areas in southeastern Massachusetts.

A graduate of Wilson College, Ms. Magnuson works as an Administrative Assistant in the Investment Banking Division of Goldman, Sachs & Co., Boston.

Magnuson serves with a group of 16 other volunteer PCWT officers from eight towns in the region. They work to preserve open space and some of the rural character of this part of the state in an era of rapid development.

It has 800 acres of conservation land on 19 reservations in eight towns ranging from Marshfield to Bourne. It is actively seeking to acquire more natural areas. Landowners are invited to contact PCWT for information about the many advantages of conveying land to a non-profit trust that can protect it for the public benefit.

Is your child smarter than his SAT score?

Probably. Even a case of the butterflies can affect your child's SAT score.

Want your son or daughter to do better? Prepare them better. For nearly 40 years, Stanley H. Kaplan's test-taking techniques and professional educational programs have helped over 100,000 students prepare for the SAT. Many have increased their scores 150, 200, as much as 250 points.

Call us. We could be your child's smartest move yet.

It's been a good year for recreation

"We had a very good staff and a supportive recreattion commission," he adds. "Most of the staff are college kids. We try to get people with a lot of talent, not necessarily athletic. Many are knowledgeable in art, or music, or they have a background in early education. We look for a balance in our staff and we certainly had an excellent one this summer."

Worley attributes the success of Cohasset's recreational programs to the diversity and dedication of the commission. "We have a seven-member board with a broad spectrum of interests. Some have strong interests in one area, and another will have preferences in another area. It works out well for the entire town," he notes.

A quick breakdown of the recreational budget for last year shows that this program not only provides residents with interesting activities, but generates income for the town.

In fiscal 1985, $7,318 was generated through program fees. The revolving account fund amounted to $10,600 in funds and facility permits generated $19,198 to the town. For the 6268 residents who participated in the various programs, $26,516 was returned back to the town's general budget.

Watch for parade

Several residents and community organizations are busy preparing a float for Hingham's Shriner Parade.

The parade will be held Sept. 8 at 1 p.m. and the public is invited to share in the day's activities. Because Cohasset was once a part of Hingham, several residents thought it would be appropriate to participate in this anniversary event.

The organizations involved in the project promise the float will be colorful and will reflect the enthusiasm of residents who are eager to celebrate Hingham's history with Cohasset.

Hearing on radioactive waste

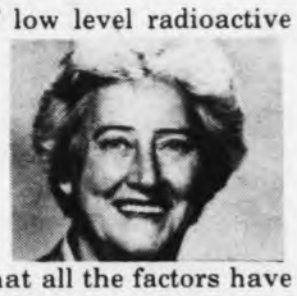
Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R), Third Plymouth District, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull's office, was informed by the Office of Transportation of the reviewal of the South Shore areas transportation problems.

Alternative routes and ways of increasing other mass transportation services were surveyed. The result was additional water transportation services to towns such as Hingham and Hull, more MBTA vehicles on the Red Line, and more subsidized commuter bus service, plus more police to help direct traffic diverted onto routes throughout the South Shore.

Representative Murray stated, "The transportation study, of the South Shore clearly demonstrated the necessity for increased transportation services to the South Shore. Because of the study, more cars have been ordered for the Red Line, and stations are being remodeled so that the Red Line platforms accommodate six-car trains rather than the four-car trains.

"Options for improving the Expressway's capacity after reconstruction is completed this year, are being reviewed," said Mary Jeanette. "Ways to add more commuter boats are being researched. An environmental study for the widening of Route 3 south of Route 128 is in the process."

A commuter rail, a most important link for resolving the South Shore areas transportation crisis, is now beginning with an extensive environmental review. The review, when complete, will decide upon the most appropriate manner of restoring commuter rail, and, thus, adding transportation facilities to the South Shore.



"I would like to have comments from my constituents with suggestions to improve the South Shore areas transportation crisis."

"Public hearings will be held regarding the possible solutions, so watch the newspapers for notification," Representative Murray stated.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray — Report from the State House

A problem that is quickly coming to the forefront is that of low level radioactive waste. According to a 1982 law, plans for nuclear power plants and radioactive waste sites must pass the hurdle of electoral approval. Currently, members of the Special Commission on Low Level Radioactive Waste are trying to come up with a proposal to build such a storage facility in the state that will be accepted by Massachusetts voters.

The possible dangers of low level radioactive waste have been well publicized in areas like the "Love Canal" in Niagara Falls, N.Y. The community that will ultimately be the repository, or at least the neighbor of the waste facility, must be assured that all the factors have been considered in the facility siting process.

The public will have a chance to voice its concerns about storing low level waste at a series of hearings to be held this fall in Boston, Pittsfield and Springfield. Officials and experts in waste disposal have already testified at hearing since the commission was formed in 1983.

☐A great celebration took place August 25 at the residence of Paul and Sandy Mattes of South Main Street.

They, and many invited guests, participated in a surprise 45th anniversary party for their parents Daniel and Amelia (Malvesti) Mattes of South Quincy. Daniel is a retired health inspector for the city of Quincy, and Amelia is employed at Micrographic Systems in Braintree.

Their five children, Daniel, Jr., of Humarock, Ronald of Sandwich, Paul of Cohasset, Dianne of Quincy and Marcia Rose Forrester of Quincy, and six grandchildren helped to make this a very special day.

Amelia and Daniel Mattes are surrounded by happy family members at their 45th anniversary party.

☐Navy Midshipman Mark R. Gunville, son of Richard P. and Barbara J. Gunville of 34 Stockbridge St., Cohasset, recently completed a month-long summer training period with the Navy and Marines in the San Diego area.

During this period he spent one week with the Marine Corps and one week with each of the three major specialities of the Navy: Surface Ships, Submarines and Naval Aviation.

He spent a week at Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, CA, learning about the Marine Air Ground Task Force. He spent time with infantry, artillery, engineer, assault amphibian, reconnaissance, tank and aviation units.

He is a 1983 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Seven boy scouts from Cohasset's Troop 28 were in South Shore's Troop 313 for the National Jamboree. The trip began on Saturday, July 20, when they left from South Shore Plaza for the University of Maryland, where they spent two nights.

During their stay in Maryland, the scouts visited the Lincoln and Vietnam Memorials, and went to the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum. On the second day, they went to the Arlington National Cemetery, and from there they left for Ft. A.P. Hill in Virginia, the site of the Jamboree. When the boys arrived, it was very hot.

The Jamboree was officially opened by the Beach Boys concert. During the day they participated in various skills and events, visited the many displays, and met scouts from all over the country. The scouts participated in raft encounters and wilderness survival. The Jamboree ended smoothly with Mrs. Reagan's speech, the Oak Ridge Boys concert, and the largest fireworks display in the nation.

On the way home the boys were all tired, and couldn't wait to get back home to warm showers and nice soft beds.

The seven boy scouts who attended the Jamboree from Cohasset's Troop 28 were: Bill Anstead, David Farrag, Michael Lelecas, Nicholas Lelecas, Mark LaVange, Chris McElroy and Matt Sylvia. Mr. Arthur Lehr and Mr. Merle Brown from Cohasset were scout master and assistant scout master, respectively, of Jamboree Troop 313.

☐If you are looking for a hairdresser that will give you a "new" look, there is one around. . .that is, if you don't mind looking like all the rest of the football team! The guys all got Mohawks (or some version of one) to start the season off with a bang! That's what I call togetherness. It's even rumored that the Athletic Director has made them a promise, according to their record. Don't know the details, but I bet the barber does!

☐Congratulations to Kerry Crehan, who is a senior at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine. Kerry has been named the production manager of the campus newspaper. The Bates Student, founded in 1873 as a monthly literary magazine. It received first place with special merit from the American Scholastic Press Association for outstanding format, content and presentation. Kerry certainly is a well-rounded gal — Remember her as Daisy Mae in her senior class play? Now to know that she is a grand author/writer, too. Good work, Kerry.

☐Polly Litchfield, Pat Litchfield, Pat Laugelle and Izzie Salvador have done it again. Those women can and do make anything they plan a grand success. They pulled off a surprise birthday party for Carmen, and he was truly surprised. He thought he was catering it for someone else, which is the way they got him there. So many of Carmen's friends showed up it was hard to count them all! The dancing was still going strong when this writer left, and the food was sooo good. He received very nice gifts, including a gal that popped out of a box and did a dance for him. . .he will never forget that night, I'm sure. Congratulations to Carmen, and to the gals who made the whole night possible for him.

☐The same gals mentioned before are still busy (ask a busy person, as they say). Now they are doing their next important task, collecting raffle items for the Jimmy Fund Golf Tournament that is to be held next month. Last year they did an outstanding job, and they are at it again. If you have an item that you would like to give them for their raffle, see any one of the women mentioned. Remember, what you give ups the total of what is given to the Jimmy Fund, and what better cause can you think of!

☐On August 22, there was a luncheon held at the home of Sue MacNamara, with Sue Collins as her co-hostess. The event was held to welcome the new art teacher at the High School, Mrs. Lucas. Members of the Art Advisory Committee, the Art Boosters Club, the P.S.O. Arts Enrichment Committee, and Mr. Crowell were all there. Classy Williams attended to represent the South Shore Art Center. What a nice way to welcome Mrs. Lucas, and they had an even bigger welcome to give her. . .

☐A group has gotten together to form the Arts Booster Club, under the direction of Karin Bartow and Sue MacNamara. What a super way to get everyone interested in the Arts, especially with those two at the helm. Anyone that is interested in "Boosters for Arts," call 383-6945 for details.

☐Everyone in the town of Cohasset knows the dog, Bandit! If you don't, ask your child and I'll bet he does! Anyway, Bandit needs a new home, his "mother and father" cannot handle the two dogs any more. Bandit is famous for going all over town, so you must keep that in mind, but he is the friendliest, nicest dog you could want. A real people dog! If you would like to give Bandit a home, call Bill or Carol Shea, 383-6375.

☐Good luck to all of the CHS fall teams as they begin this week. May they all make it through double sessons in good health, ready for winning seasons! All of us will prepare our schedules to be able to support you, right? Right!

That's the news for the week from here. Just be sure to send or call your news in. . .Without it this "Around Town" isn't anything.

School year of challenge & reform

money, is governed by the state appropriations forthcoming," he added.

In 1986, Cohasset is expected to receive $5630 in school improvement grants. This amount will be used for the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools according to the discretion of the school committee and the recently-formed advisory council. The following year, $12,870 will be available for grades 7-12.

In fiscal year 1987, $11,040 will become available to pay five or six teachers for extra duties such as curriculum work, counseling, tutoring or summer school assignments. That stipend will continue for two years.

A total of $123,750 will be forwarded to Cohasset through this series of grants, Crowell said. All figures, he emphasized, are preliminary, since funding sources have not been outlined. The state expects to hand out $107,406,460 in public education aid through this new piece of legislation.

Crowell observed that 1985-86 will be a year of "form completion" for school administrators as they attempt to comply with this new law. "This is the first time the state has put substantial money into education, and that's good. The state is demanding more quality into all education so the rich communities won't get better while the poorer towns sink to a lower level," he said. " Cohasset has always tried to remain in a position where most of things the state is asking to be done by the reform act are already in place. This is not to say we can't improve. We have good services and basic skills levels, but now we will be able to measure ourselves more accurately against other towns in the state."

Although excited about the state's effort to improve education, Crowell said he has reservations about the funding sources of this program. "I don't have the answers yet, but I just don't know right now where the state will get this money. And there are side effects. If the town accepts the money, it's only for two years. What happens after two years? We will be locked into programs and salary schedules. The answers will be forthcoming, but there's a lot to be learned," he commented.

In other areas, Crowell said Cohasset will be sending ten fulltime students to the South Shore Vocational Technical High School. That is an increase from last year, and compares favorably with several surrounding towns.

An avid supporter of vocational training for interested students, Crowell said curriculum improvement at the Hanover school has increased his positive opinion. "It is becoming more of a school we would want to send our kids to. This school now offers a good basic education as well as vocational training," he said.

The Cohasset school budget, Crowell added, "is holding up," with more school building maintenance programs anticipated. "With the new roofs, we have now begun to replace floors, ceiling tiles, and repaint walls previously damaged by leaking roofs," Crowell explained.

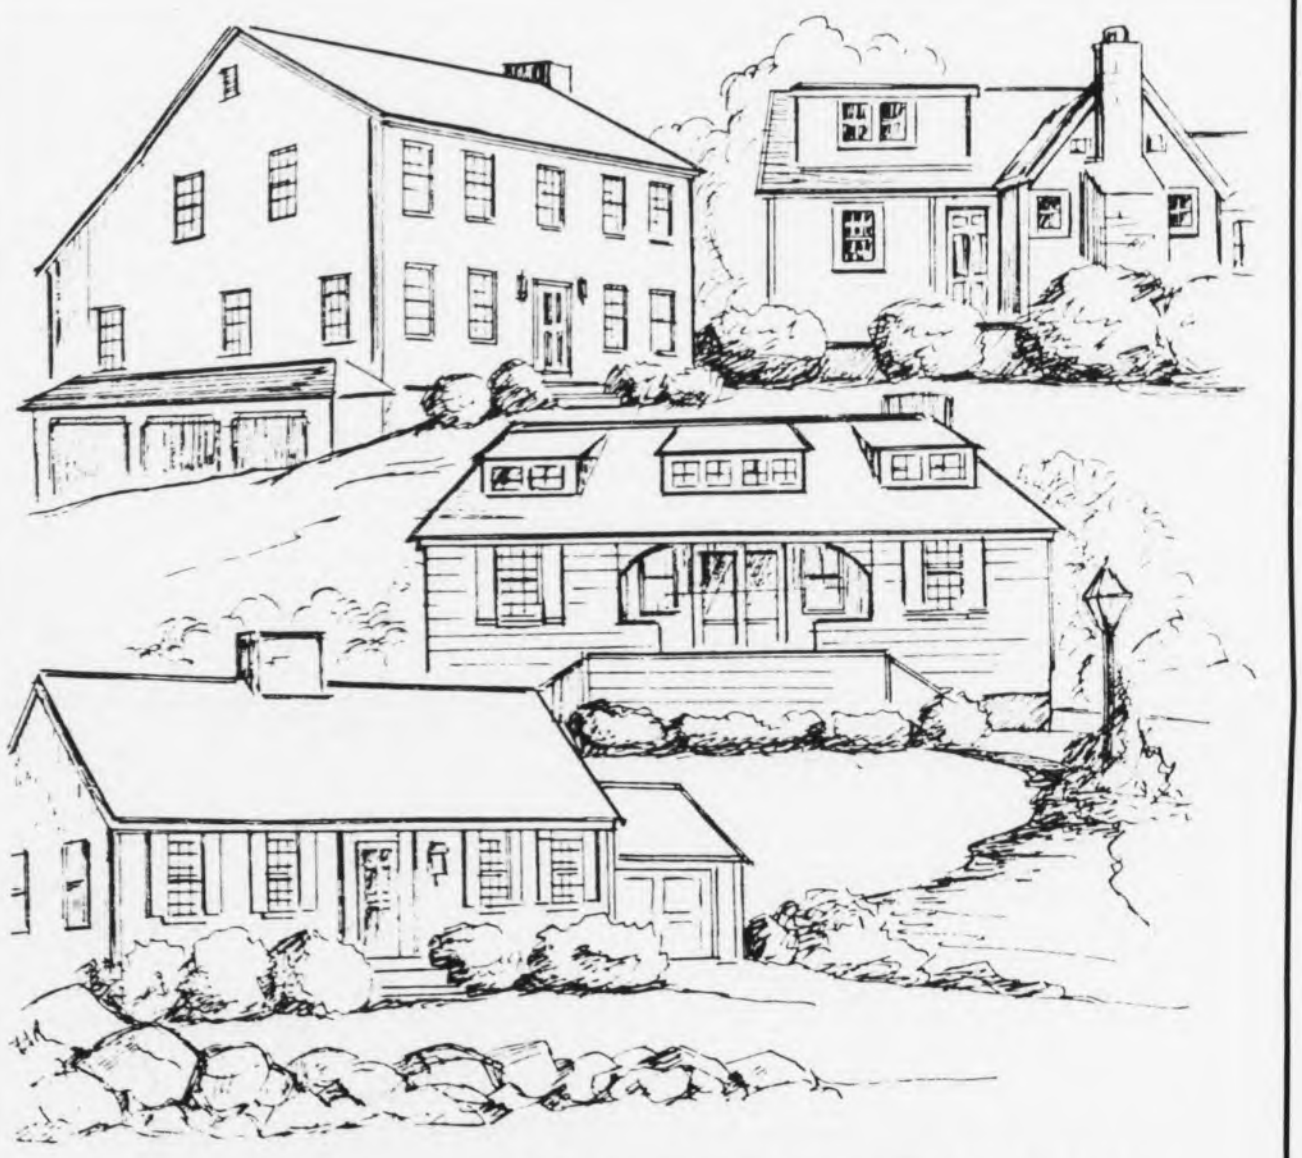
The budget can not be decisively analyzed until teacher contract negotiations are completed. A second mediation session was held last Monday. Those salaries comprise 80 percent of the annual budget.

Looking forward to the start of the new school year, Crowell said, "I am very optimistic. The buildings are in excellent repair. The curriculum has been, and continues to be designed to meet the needs of the community - to be a highly competitive academic system.

"I look forward to a good high school sports year. We have a large number of people out for all our sports programs, including junior varsity football, soccer, field hockey and track. We expect a good year. We are excited about our planned presentation of Pirates of Penzance for our all-school musical. We will be producing our drama shows beginning in October, in our newly-painted auditorium with the new lighting system. We have a new Arts Booster Club and a new art teacher for the junior/senior high school.

"The bottom line," he continued, "is I am looking forward to a fine year with a smaller student body, but a solid college-preparatory program and a dedicated faculty."

Chiropractic for HEALTH



by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

MORNING BACKACHE

When sitting, the forces on the lumbar spine (lower back) are almost fifty percent greater than when standing. When lying on one's side, the lumbar spine is subjected to forces that are twenty-five percent less than when standing. Lying on one's back with hips and knees bent is the best of all. The forces on the disc are a mere third of what they are standing. There is an ebb and flow of liquid to the discs. As fluid pressure builds up inside the discs, they become stiffer and less energy-absorbent. When lying in bed at night, less force is exerted on the discs and more fluid flows into them. This may be the answer to why many people experience morning back pain as they roll out of bed.

Even the most common activities can affect one's comfort, lifestyle and total state of well-being. To learn more about how to maximize your well-being and the beneficial affects chiropractic procedures can provide for you, we invite you to call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. As an approach to meeting current discomforts as well as preventive future difficulties, we invite you to learn the many potential benefits of a chiropractic exam. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt. HINT: As fluid flows into the intervertebral discs at night, it actually makes one a bit taller due to an extended spine.

A new year

Forget what the calendar says. January 1 may be the beginning of the year as far as calendars are concerned, and July 1 may mark the start of a new fiscal year, but for most families, Sept. 5 is the first day of the new year.

Yes, that is the day we pack our little cherubs off to school, be they 'walkers' or bus commuters. With their brand new sneakers, lunch boxes and school bags they actually think they're prepared to enter the classroom once again. Who are they kidding?

In the span of eight weeks, they have forgotten how to tie their shoes, how to take a bath, and how to brush their teeth. We parents tend to let things slide a bit in the summer . . . things pertaining to personal hygiene and religious affiliations.

These kids are so innocent, however, they can't remember how much they disliked school last year. They eagerly talk about the new clothes they have, the awesome sneakers they bought for the new year. By the third day, they arrive back home armed with homework and a revived memory of what life was like last June.

Talking with people around the Mariner this week, we reminisced about our school days. Focusing on our elementary grades, we decided that things have become decidedly better for our children.

One person remembered this particularly distressing teacher who threw erasers at unruly youngsters. The children were afraid to lift their heads from their desk work. One day, Jill heard a tapping noise emanating from the front of the class and she thought, "whoever is tapping dancing, she'd better stop before the teacher sees her." Well, it didn't stop and Jill was too curious not to peak. It was not a tap dancing performance she spied, but the teacher grabbing a little boy and shaking him up and down as his little oxford shoes tapped the wood floor.

We remembered another old teacher who used to stop you just as you entered the classroom and remark on 'what a nice blouse you have on today.' You never got past her extended leg until you complimented her on her well-worn wardrobe.

We had a science teacher who washed her hands every time she passed out papers, opened the windows, held a pencil, or touched a student. We were pretty sure she was crazy - at least that's what our next year's science teacher told us.

You never forget certain things that happened in school. Some of us can't remember what we did last night, but easily recall the date and time that Corrinne threw up on our new party dress in kindergarten.

The day we dissected a frog in biology will always remain sacred in our hearts. How can we forget, when we so perfectly excuted the plan to stuff some nerd's sandwich with the skeletal remains?

We became a bit more sophisticated as the years went along. By high school, there was one poor soul we students always picked on. She had small cards with each student's name and she would call the kids in order. One-by-one we would be ordered to the chalkboard to write out some complicated alegbra example. By the end of two weeks, there were three cards left in the pile, all the others had taken their names from the stack. And honestly, this teacher continued to call on those three students throughout the semester.

We had some wonderful times, and beautiful teachers. We are so thankful our days were spent with teachers who cared. Not a day would go by when a teacher did not ask about a sick pet, mother's flower garden, or how a brother was doing in Vietnam.

By Claire McDonough

"Well," I told the Dragon, "this is it. Much as I hate to see summer end, fall is upon us, and Skip will be starting his last year of high school. Isn't it wonderful?"

"Yeah," the Dragon responded. "Wonderful. I can't wait. Just think, this is the time we've been longing for during our 31 years of marriage."

"Right," I agreed. "Just two more short semesters and we enter a whole new phase of life. Can you imagine? No more driving kids to school because they miss the bus. No more frantic phone calls in the middle of the day asking you to bring up biology reports they left in the driveway because they were shooting a few baskets while they were waiting for the school bus. And going out to the driveway and not finding any biology report."

The Dragon nodded. "Sounds like heaven. No more having to sign tests with scores that look like their ages. No more notes from teachers requesting conferences."

"No more driving entire teams to distant cities and towns. And not having any idea where the towns are."

"No more having to pick them up again afterward."

"No more staying up at night wondering where they are or if they're all right. Once they go away to school, you have no idea where they are or how late they're out."

We looked at each other. "You have no idea," he echoed.

"No more wearing jewelry they make in school and having people in the office look at you funny."

"No more watching you pretend the Mother's Day gifts they make are just what you wanted to hang in the living room."

"No more pump lamps or fireplace tongs that fall apart."

"No more homemade presents at all."

"Well," I amended, "the grandchildren will probably make us homemade presents."

We looked at each other again, and I wondered why we both looked relieved.

"No more nagging at them to do their homework."

"No more finding unspeakable things in their pockets when you do their laundry."

"No more doing their laundry."

"No more worrying if they're eating nutritious meals."

"Well, no more being able to tell them you're worrying if they're eating nutritious meals."

"No more worrying about who they're dating."

"Not having the foggiest notion who they're dating."

"It's what we've always wanted, isn't it?" he asked.

I nodded. "Do you think we'll be able to stand it?"

The Dragon looked thoughtful. "I guess so. But I sure am glad we have one year left."

"Let's hope," I agreed, "that it doesn't go by too fast."

You praised the wrong man

Letters

To the Editor:

A few weeks ago the North American Soccer Camp Inc. completed their week long session in Cohasset. From the beaming faces and grass stained knees, I would assess the camp a raging success. At the last session, camp director Jeff Anthony publically praised my work as the "town coordinator." However, Jeff thanked the wrong man. Recreation Director Jack Worley, Assistant Director Bud Carroll, and my wife, Dee, did all the pre-camp paperwork. For my two children who attended the camp and on behalf of the Cohasset Soccer Club, I thank you all for your efforts.

Sincerely,
Charles DeSantis

No more bridge diving photos

To the Editor:

I feel that showing a picture of children diving off the Border Street Bridge is in mighty poor taste in as much as this is banned, and creates a disagreeable task for the police department.

The bridge does not have guard rails because the view up and down the Gulf is a beautiful sight.

Such diving is hazardous because there are boats using this waterway when the tide is right, which can not be seen readily from the top of the bridge. Also the traffic is at times quite heavy, and children running back and forth from one side to the other don't look before they move.

Let's help the police department to avoid serious and sad accidents.

Sincerely,
Robert C. Knowles

(We plead guilty as charged. We published the photograph last week because of its artistic merit, and did not fully consider the negative implications. We are fully aware of the constant danger posed by youths loitering along the street and jumping from the bridge. Our photographers have been warned - there'll be no more photos of teens along the bridge. Ed.)

Megan and Justin Connolly have the best seats in the house at the Paul Pratt Library.

Singer and storyteller Tom Callinan displays artifacts from past seafaring days.

Summer reading party

The Cohasset Bookaneers of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library concluded the library's summer reading program with a concert by Connecticut troubadour Tom Callinan at the Unitarian Parish House.

Callinan's hour-long performance included sea chanteys, stories about whales and whaling with much audience participation. The 139 "Bookaneers of the Seafarers Club" read nearly 300 books since school closed in June. Each reader will be awarded a summer reading certificate in the school library classroom in September by children's librarians Jo Ann Mitchell and Marilyn Pope.

Participants are also invited to visit the USS Constitution Museum in Charlestown free of charge when accompanied by an adult. Many children received a gift paperback book of their choice for reaching their grade level reading goal. These books were donated by the Friends of the Library.

The reading program which had developed a sea theme with a nautical mural and personalized boats designed by Andrew Glasfeld ended appropriately with the making of ice cream boats. Refreshments were organized by Cissie Cullivan for the Friends.

Students who will receive certificates are:

Katie Anderson, Caroline Arbury, Kate Barrett, Mark Batts, Katie Brennock, Justin Buckley, Catie Campbell, Matthew Conley, Elizabeth Corcoran, Herbie Crehan, Ann Dane, Kate deLima, Elizabeth Deveney, Keeley Ann Dwyer, Megan Fahey, Colleen Fitzsimmons, Lori Gallant, Priscilla Goff, Kristin Grassey, Merry Hansen, Shona Hislop, Matthew Higgins, Billy Jordan, Simeon Ketchum, Matthew Larson, Rhiannon Leavitt, Brooke Lombardy, Kay Long, Brendan McCarthy and Christa Ansbergs.

Also, David Aronson, Rachel Begley, Nicole Batts, Laurie Bronstein, Christine Burns, Chloe Chittick, Caitlin Walsh Connolly, Alana Cordeiro, Alyssa Cross, Penelope Dane, Dan DeMichele, Grace Deveney, Stephanie Eno, Nathan Fiore, Kathleen Fitzsimmons, Marisa Gallant, Elizabeth Good, Nicole Haefner, Matthew Hennessy, Johanna Horn, Rebecca Jenkins, Ely Kahn, Karla Kristiansen, David Leahy, Michael Lennon, Matt Lombardy, Erin McAllister, Christine McMackin, Brett MacQuarrie, Katie Medinger, Andrea Mercurio, Ellen Mitchell and Kathleen O'Brien.

You can't dump everything

Many residents of Cohasset may not realize that there are regulations which govern the use of the Cedar Street Landfill.

One of the purposes of the regulations is "to maintain and prolong the life of the town-operated landfill." To accomplish this purpose, certain things are prohibited from being deposited in the landfill.

No tires, demolition or building wastes from contractors, tree stumps, brush, branches or logs which have a diameter greater than three inches, automobiles or automobile parts and toxic or special wastes.

Demolition materials which are generated by a homeowner in a "do it yourself" project are acceptable, but these materials must be no longer than four feet so they can be easily compacted.

There is a compost pile for leaves and grass and a brush pile which the Tree and Park Department chips. Leaves and grass should be removed from plastic bags when placed in the compost pile. Compost and chips are available for residents' use.

The Recycling Center is on the left as you enter the landfill. Please recycle all glass, newspapers, magazines, and aluminum. Recycling generates monies for the town and the Boy Scouts. Lately, the paper bin may have been full when it was time to recycle newspapers. But things are looking up, and the bin won't say "full" so often anymore.

Cohasset has had a long tradition of recycling, let's make it 100 percent participation.

DeSantis: "whole process is ripoff"

DeSantis added.

Among the communities which indicated their opposition to the state's distribution of grant monies, were Groton and Bourne. DeSantis said selectmen, sewer advisory board members, and engineering consultants attended that meeting. The consultant for the Bourne project discussed the 17-year battle that town has waged to gain funding of an alternative wastewater system. "Their last project began in 1979 with the encouragement of DEQE to pursue alternatives to the central sewer system. They went through all the work and were ready to go with the design and now DEQE won't fund it. The engineer said they have done what the book says, and have followed all the directions, and then learn the state says too bad."

The Cohasset commission chairman says he is "disgruntled and worn out" from his three-year battle against the state agency, but is aware Cohasset is not alone. He said the selectmen chairman from Groton told Taurasi last week that they were looking for a program to fit their needs, and never received any guidance from DEQE. The chairman pleaded for financial help and advise from the state, something that has been continually lacking.

DeSantis said most communities, including metropolitan cities such as New Bedford and Worcester, related "horror stories" about sewage backing up onto city streets.

"It really made me think," DeSantis said. "Here are some cities with really horrible problems, and here's little Cohasset coming up year after year with requests for funding. And the state's coming after us with a threat of a $10,000 a day fine. How come us?

"The offices of the EPA and DEQE are sitting right on top of what EPA Regional Administrator Michael Deland has called, 'the worst municipal wastewater disposal problem in the nation' in Boston Harbor. That's how we measure their incompentency, by that observation. This federal and state agency has been battering us around for years, while they sit on top of the biggest wastewater problem in the country. That is totally unacceptable," he added.

At the meeting, DeSantis emphasized the state's continual rejection of Cohasset's attempt to implement innovative and alternative technology in a wastewater plan he says will cost $8 million compared to the former $30 million plan proposed by Metcalf and Eddy.

"The state has completely thrown out our plan for small diameter sewers to expand the existing sewer treatment area, and has placed our on-site repair project on very low funding priority. I told Taurasi this is not the proper management of scare public dollars. He told the other community representatives there that 'Cohasset wants the federal government to pay for collector sewers and the towns here have paid for their own. Cohasset is trying to steal collector sewers.' I said if you call Cohasset complying with the intent of Congress stealing, then I hope you guys get into compliance with the laws."

In regard to the town's appeal of the regional EPA's project denial, DeSantis said Cohasset plans to submit no further answers to the federal agency. The state DWPC had responded to the EPA with a set of intricate questions, which DeSantis said would require more money from the town to answer.

"Many of these questions are beyond the scope of a facilities plan and approach a facilities plan. None of these questions were ever asked of the Metcalf and Eddy engineers, nor were they asked by our Ward engineers during their two previous projects which have been approved for construction," DeSantis, said. "We have already spent $93,000 to get to this point. It's like a revolving door. When are they going to stop? Even if the state gives us the money, I find this whole process a ripoff of state funds and I question the motives of DEQE. I question if they want to do anything at all. They are more interested in jerking us around than cleaning up the waters of Cohasset. When I asked what is the policy of the DWPC, they never answered."

Obituary

John S. Duncombe

A memorial service for John S. Duncombe will be held today at 4 p.m. in the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common. Mr. Duncombe died Monday at his home after a long illness.

Mr. Duncombe, 51, was president of Cohasset Village Printers and Duncombe Associates which he founded in 1973.

He was also a former vice president of International Paper Sales Co. of Canada.

Born in Illinois, Mr. Duncombe graduated from Tufts University in 1955 with a degree in economics. While at Tufts, he earned All New England honors as captain of the tennis team.

He lived in Cohasset for 17 years, and founded the Cohasset Soccer Club. He was also involved in many activities at the Cohasset Yacht Club.

Mr. Duncombe leaves his wife, Suzanne (Hadler) Duncombe; three sons, David S., William P., and Scott H., all of Cohasset; a daughter, Amy L. of Cohasset; a sister, Sarah Cameron of Illinois, and a niece and nephew. He also leaves his mother Eleanor Shaw of Illinois.

There will be no visiting hours. Burial will be private.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street.

Memorial donations may be made to the Cohasset Soccer Club, c/o Jack Duncombe Memorial Fund, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, 488 South Main Street, Cohasset, 02025.

Dramatic Club tryouts

Tryouts for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's fall production of Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Sunday, September 8, from 2 to 5 p.m., and Tuesday, September 10, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Production dates are November 15, 16, 22 and 23. Helen Ketcham, Director.

This is the tale of a salesman whose once happy world is crashing upon him in little pieces. He is a salesman who, in his confident youth, was "riding on a smile and a shoeshine." Home he comes one night, the once debonair big-talker, now haunted by failure on the threshold of old age. His sons are ne'er-do-wells, and it was Willy himself who made them so. He was never as good a salesman as he pretended, a defeated old drummer coming to the deadend of his career. A terrible documentation has been leavened with bursts of wild humor and more than one moment of touching grandeur.

The case consists of eight men and five women. The main characters are: Willie Loman, a man in an emotional tailspin. Simply: at the end of his tether, his life. Linda Loman, a woman of quiet, subtle strength. Fiercely protective of her husband, Willy. Biff, their son: has knocked around for years. Is worn, angry, intense, sensitive. Guilt and his own yearnings war within him. Happy, two years younger than his brother Biff. More successful, cocky, oozing S.A., obstensibly happy with himself and his life, but is actually lost.

Pancake breakfast

The Soccer Boosters will hold their annual Pancake Breakfast Sunday, Sept. 8 from 8 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School.

In past years, this event has been very successful, and the Boosters expect this year's breakfast to be just as popular.

Tickets may be obtained from members of the high school soccer teams or may be purchased at the door. Prices are $3 for adults and $2 for students. There is no charge for preschoolers.

Proceeds from the breakfast will be used to help support the high school and youth soccer programs in Cohasset.

Bloodmobile Sept. 9

A community bloodmobile will be held at the First Parish Church, 23 North Main Street, Sept. 9 from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Anyone between the ages of 17 and 65, who is in general good health, has never had hepatitis, weighs at least 110 pounds, and has not given blood in the past eight weeks may donate. Appointments may be made by calling 471-5440.

Fall yard sale

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its fall yard sale at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, September 28.

Household goods, toys, sporting goods, books, clothing and collectibles head the list of items which will be presented at this fall fundraising event.

The Society still is accepting materials in good, useable condition to include in its fall version of the famous spring "flea market."

If you have things to dispose of and would like to help the Society continue its important community programs, please call 383-0773 or 383-6930. Dealer spaces are available at $10. Contact the Society to reserve a space.

Walking Tour Sept. 22

Sunday, September 22 will be the date of the Cohasset Historical Society's walking tour of Cohasset's historic Elm Street and harbor district.

Once a bustling fishing port, Cohasset could boast of more than half a hundred two-masted fishing schooners which sailed as far as Canada's Gulf of St. Lawrence each year to bring home cod and mackerel. During the mid and latter 1800s fishing was the town's principal industry, and Cohasset youth often went to sea by the age of nine or 10. Some grew up to crew upon or even command large merchant sailing vessels whose home port was Boston.

In the years 1855 to 1860 an engineering feat was accomplished in Cohasset when the stone tower of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse was constructed at our harbor's edge then transported block by block to its permanent location two and a half miles at sea.

These subjects will be among the ones presented on the Historical Society's tour of the maritime area of old Cohasset.

The Harbor walking tour will meet at the Society's Maritime Museum, Cohasset Center, to walk down Elm Street, along Border Street and wind up at Government Island on the harbor's edge. Tour guides will include Charles Fink of the town's Harbor Committee and Society Curator David Wadsworth.

Plan to join the Harbor walking tour on that early fall stroll through historical Cohasset.

Getting to know self

Any South Shore persons interested in learning more about themselves and their relationships to others in the framework of C.G. Jung's psychology are invited to join a nine-week discussion series that will meet in Cohasset this fall.

An introductory meeting will be held September 5 to sample an audio-taped program called Questpoint that will form the basis for the study-discussion series. At the initial meeting, those who decide they want to participate will order Questpoint materials, and a weekly time for meeting will be chosen.

For further information, call Margaret Smalzel at 383-0989.

SIDS road race

The Fourth Annual Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Foundation (SIDS) Roadrace and Run-A-Thon is set for Sept. 15.

The two races—a 10K race and a 2-mile fun run—will benefit the foundation. All proceeds will be directed to research currently being conducted at Boston's Children's Hospital. Through pledges and contributions of last year's runners, $7,000 was raised.

The race will begin at Hingham High School on Union Street. Check-in time is 8:30 a.m. The fun run will begin at 9:30 a.m., the 10K race at 10:15 a.m. The course will be through Wompatuck State Park.

Pre-entry fees are $4 for the fun run and $5 for the 10K; post-entry fees are $6 for the fun run and $7 for the 10K.

T-shirts will be given to all who pre-enter. Prizes will be awarded.

Applications are available by calling John Orshak, 834-7954 or Chuck Kerrins, 275-5974.

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome remains the largest single cause of death in infants between one week and one year of age. It is responsible for the death of at least 7,000 infants per year in the United States.

Farewell to a Celtic leader

By Mike Berger

If the 1979 Boston Celtics training camp was remembered as the dawn of the Bird, the 1985 training camp at Camp Milbrook-Marshfield High School will be noted as the year M.L. said goodbye.

Amidst a thousand and one television cameras, radio microphones and roving reporters, Michael Leon Carr retired from the Celtics after nine years of professional basketball.

He will remain with the organization as a scout and will also assist in public relations.

And what was M.L's happiest day as a professional athlete? A reporter asked if slam dunking a steal to seal Game 4 of the Celtics-Laker championship series after the Celtics were given up for dead a day before. "Yeah, that will rank up there. But I'd have to say it was the day I signed on the dotted line I was a Boston Celtic in 1979," Carr said.

The Celtics brass were all there at Marshfield High School Monday night to attend the press conference and everyone from owner Donald Gaston to President Red Auerbach, General Manager Jan Volk to Coach K.C. Jones to Administrative Assistant John Creed all mentioned one thing - M.L. will be hard to replace.

It won't be hard to replace M.L. physically because he is the first one to acknowledge he wasn't the highest scorer, the best rebounder or the best ballhandler. He said in his closing remarks that it was time for the older player in him to step aside to make room for the younger kids such as Sam Vincent and Rick Carlisle.

But everyone from Auerbach to Coach K.C. Jones agreed M.L. was the consummate team player; the one player who would sacrifice the headlines and the points in order to motivate a team; to steal the ball or to outsmart his opponent. WBZ TV sports reporter Mike Dowling referred to it as the intimidation factor.

Who will forget M.L.'s comments to Maurice Cheeks of Philadelphia at the foul line or the asides to Magic Johnson of the Lakers?

"It wasn't the money or the points. It was the people who made my career. People, that's what made me," he said.

Teammate Danny Ainge jokingly said he attended the camp to give hugs and kisses to M.L. But in the next serious moment he reflected how M.L. spent almost every moment with Ainge when he jumped from the Toronto Blue Jays of baseball to the Celtics in a celebrated maneuver by Auerbach and Volk. "He made my transition from the baseball to the basketball world easier," Ainge said.

In an emotional statement which caused some tears in some of the Celtics, M.L. said, "When I began my professional career, Red told me I'd end up wearing the Celtics green."

Later Auerbach said he saw in Carr a consummate team player, a player with tremendous desire and enthusiasm.

Whether it was the M.L. press conference or Celticmania but crowds of 500 to 1,000 people were turned away from Marshfield High School Monday night.

Ainge and Carlisle were the only veterans coming to the training camp. Larry Bird was nursing a poor back and no one seemed to know why Carlos Clark didn't attend. Cedric Maxwell decided he could better rehabilitate his knee in North Carolina.

General Manager Volk said Monday night the Bill Walton for Maxwell deal is not dead yet. "If they want to talk I'll answer the phone. But I don't have any false expectations.

Coach K.C. Jones wants Maxwell back. He feels "Max" is one of the better defensive forwards in the league and the one player who has proved he can contain a Bernard King or a James Worthy. "There's no mistake that I want Max back."

But in the same breath he mentioned the Celtics need another banger on the boards, a top notch rebounder. "That's what killed us in the Laker series. They could come in with a replacement for Jabbar and continue their momentum."

Jones feels the current crop of rookies can play but he hasn't seen any Bill Russell defensive type stars looming. "Defense is something you have to teach anyway. Especially with all these players coming out of college with zone defense techniques."

The three top rookies which impressed both the coaching staff and the media were top pick Sam Vincent, guard Andre Battle and free agent and the last player to be cut last year Ronnie Williams.

Battle and Vincent will help the Celtics backcourt substitution with speed, quickness and outside shooting. Williams at 6-8 and 239 pounds lost about 25 to 30 pounds from a year ago and is noted for his rebounding and inside play.

Ainge and Carlisle both played in summer leagues out in California and Utah. Ainge feels he is in excellent shape but needs more time to practice before the season begins. Carlisle, a free agent, wants it to be known he wants to remain with the Celtics and feels he has improved his overall shooting and floor play to contribute this year. "This team above anyone suits my capabilities."

Flying Scots results

By Lisa Shumaker

Last week the Flying Scots held their Captain's Cup race. Jim Lyons and Gordon Hislop raced brilliantly and won this prestigious event.

Bob Jackson with his crew, Susan Riley, came in second, followed by Ray Kasperowicz with his crew, Bob Davenport and Tad Kasperowicz. Roger Porter skippered the fourth place boat which was crewed by Peg Soltesz. Peter Goedecke, with Karl Goedecke came in fifth.

Saturday, eight Scots raced under a southwest wind blowing 15 to 20 knots. Ray Kasperowicz, along with Bob Davenport and Tad Kasperowicz, finished on top, followed by Peter Goedecke and his crew, Karl Goedecke and Bill Webster.

Jack McCarthy picked up a third. His boat was crewed by both Kate Delay and Eric Engdahl. In fourth place was Peter Chapman's boat which was raced by Tim Curran and his crew, Mike Suhrbler.

Dealers: car sales brisk at mall show

By Don Merrill

Shoppers at Hanover Mall last week were greeted with cars on display along the walk from Almy's to Zayre department stores.

Seven area dealerships were represented. Most of the cars displayed through Sunday were remaining 1985 models, according to salespeople at the show.

Models ranged from a Nissan Stanza at less than $9,000 to a Mercedes-Benz 300D turbo diesel sedan valued at more than $31,000. And, those selling the cars reported fairly brisk sales as of Thursday.

"We sold two cars right from the mall and had six more customers go back to the showroom to buy on the first day alone," said Paul F. Dahill of Hingham, a salesman with Prestige Imports of Norwell. "We're selling about a 20-percent rate of those interested, and I'd call that a success.

"All you have to do is look around — three people are now sitting in cars," he said, indicating some of the dealership's six cars on display in the mall's center. "It's a good opportuinty to get better exposure and bring the cars to consumers."

The cars on display in the mall seemed well-matched to Dahill's assessment of customers. Sedans, coupes, sports cars, minivans and pickup trucks carried nameplates as diverse as Dodge, Oldsmobile, Subaru, Chevrolet, Nissan, Pontiac and Mazda. Several here and there displayed a 'hold' tag, indicating a sale.

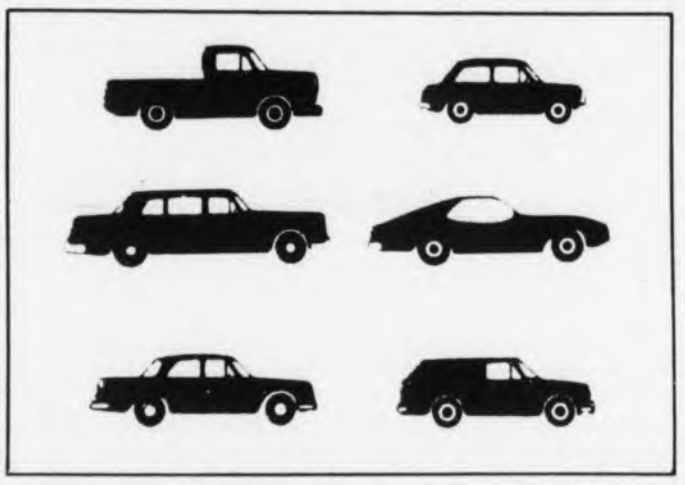
"We've already had to replenish our display because of sales," Dahill said.

Abington Subaru concentrated on the carmaker's most-popular models, according to salesman Thurman "Smitty" Smith of Duxbury.

One Subaru feature, locating the car's spare tire within the engine compartment, generated quite a bit of interest, he said. "Many people haven't seen these features."

A co-salesman added that feature had been a part of every Subaru imported here with the exception of 1974 models.

While the Abington dealer stayed with the 1985 models most likely to sell, Ricky Smith Pontiac-Subaru of Weymouth displayed the Japanese car-maker's new RX Turbo sports coupe.



Brockton Dodge had the successful Lancer coupe on display — with another hold tag.

Dealers also had several Nissan and Izuzu pickups. Many came with complete sports packages, including four-wheel drive, fog lamps and rollbars proudly proclaiming the vehicle's maker.

None of the cars came with a modest price tag, however. Of course, models like the Corvette displayed by Best Chevrolet in Hingham carry a hefty price tag: $24,000. But a quick look at the stickers on most cars — including Dodge Aries, Subaru wagons and other standard models — showed all prices near or above the $10,000 mark.

That's why businessman Bruce King rented space at the show, even though he has nothing to do with car sales. King, who owns King Collision Inc. of Pembroke, was there to let consumers know body repairs have become just as costly due to advances in car design.

King displayed a Mazda 626 on top of a Car-O-

Liner, a $35,000 frame-repair jig, putting the car well above most people's heads.

"Some think I'm selling the car, while others ask if I'm Selling the Car-O-Liner," he said. The Mazda came from Steele Volkswagen, located next to King's Rte. 139 shop.

King said 'selling' collision repair as people look at new cars isn't an easy task for obvious reasons. "No one wants to think about getting into a crash, but it happens an average of every four years to each motorist," he said.

King said advanced equipment is needed for proper repair of today's cars. Auto downsizing has resulted in design changes that take advantage of lighter materials, and insurance companies are interested in quality repair work today, he said.

"This car costs $13,000, about what our parents probably paid for their first house," he said, indicating the Mazda sedan. "You're going to pay that and more in interest while you own the car."

But while one pays off the car loan, his or her insurance company maintains an interest in the value of the car. "They're much more interested in quality work," King said.

Until the late 1970s, most cars were built with a body on top of a frame, he explained. Now most carmakers, with the exception of General Motors, use unibody construction in their newer, lighter models.

"Dent repairs used to be simple and cost an average of $750 a decade ago," he said. "Today's car can be damaged, say, in the rear left of the car, even though the collision occurred up front. That can cost $3,000 or $4,000 to repair."

Unibody construction means the car's body and frame are made without a bottom frame — "something more like an aircraft," King said.

Because the car is lighter, the unibody design allows for collapsible zones to protect occupants in a collision. That's what has made repairs so costly, he said.

Sen. Bill Golden to issue county report

State Sen. William Golden of Weymouth, Senate Chairman of the Committee on Counties, will issue a report on county government with particular emphasis on the future of county government in the state.

The report will be issued in the fall, and will include information gathered from a statewide tour of counties.

"We are meeting with commissioners, sheriffs and Advisory Board members from every county in Massachusetts," said Golden. "Our findings to date reaffirm that each county is unique, not only geographically, but in its needs and services, and its outlook for the future."

Sen. Golden has met with county officials from Barnstable, Berkshire, Bristol, Dukes, Essex, Franklin, Hampden, Hampshire, Norfolk and Plymouth Counties.

The last meetings will be in Middlesex County on Sept. 3 and in Worcester County Sept. 10.

"This is a critical period for county government in Massachusetts," says Senator Golden. "As counties move into the 1990's and beyond, the needs of the communities continue to change, and the need for regional services such as solid waste disposal, water supply, transportation and hazardous waste removal must be addressed.

"The counties are the regional level of government that local communities look to for services. To survive as a viable form of government, counties must adapt to present and future needs and re-organize to provide regional services in a cost effective and efficient manner," Golden said.

Children's council seeks members

The Coastline Council for Children needs more members.

The council is a citizen advocacy group working on issues affecting children in the coastline area towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

The council is looking for citizens living or working in these towns to serve as board of directors and committee members.

The Coastline Council for Children, along with 42 other councils statewide, serves as the citizen arm of the Commonwealth's Office for Children.

Through its committees, the council has in the past year advocated for adolescent mental health services, provided parent education workshops, developed the 1985 "Child Abuse Directory," conducted community reviews of two infant-toddler day care programs and made decisions on proposals seeking over $1 million dollars in public funds for children's services.

Members of the council directly influence the quality of life in our community for children in need of services.

An update on the Rte. 3 rest stops

By Marc Sperber

The rest area on the northbound side of Route 3 in Weymouth is not particularly pretty. The woods, separated from the asphalt strip by a torn fence, are littered with garbage and discarded tires. Dusty trails run through the thin undergrowth.

The silence on the Tuesday afternoon was punctuated only by the whirl of traffic on Route 3, 100 yards away.

The grey-haired man stood near a pile of discarded tires. He smiled.

Other men wandering around looked quickly, suspiciously at one another. Some went off to tramp through the brush.

The grey-haired man smiled and shifted his weight to his other foot. Finally, he walked over.

"This is it. This is the spot," he murmurs.

I stared at him blankly.

"This place gets busy after dark," he said.

The rest area on Route 3 in Norwell is larger and better equipped than the Weymouth rest stop. Here, picnic tables and grass invite weary travellers to sit and relax. The northern end of the clearing looks out on a wetlands plain. The woods behind are dense.

A heavyset man stood behind a tree.

Two hundred feet away, at one of the picnic tables, sat a family eating lunch. The man stared and exposed himself.

I began to walk away. As I looked back, he exposed himself again. This time, an obscene hand gesture was made.

One hundred paces away, the family saw nothing.

These two vignettes represent only a small fraction of the number of incidents which take place each day and each month.

More importantly, it points out the fact that conditions at the Norwell and Weymouth rest areas have changed little since the Weymouth News and Braintree Forum first explored the topic last April.

Since that time, only one arrest — for lewd behavior — has been made at the Weymouth stop, and none have been made at the Norwell rest area.

No undercover operations have been undertaken, and both local and state police are unsure as to when one can be mounted.

Summer is probably the season of heaviest homosexual activity in the rest areas, and ironically, it is also the time when police forces are at low manpower levels due to rotating vacation schedules.

The crucial point that emerges here is the dichotomy of opinion concerning the problem that exists between the police establishment and the courts.

The police, who see homosexual activity in the woods as a criminal activity and a threat to the public, want to do more — more patrols, more undercover operations, more crackdowns.

But the courts have sent a clear message: dissuade rather than arrest. A gay man brought up on charges faces potential embarrassment and humiliation. Undercover operations are costly and take officers away from their normal duties. A policy of constant patrol, say the courts, will send an unequivocal message to would-be cavorters in the woods: go somewhere else.

The issue is complex, and the questions are many. Can the use of rest areas by gay men be condoned if the activity is hidden from public view? Does private activity really infringe on the community's sensibilities? What should the police do? What is the appropriate judicial response?

There is no mystery about why gay men use the rest stops along the highway for meeting other gay men.

Gays and secret meeting places have a long common heritage. "It's the only way people could do that, historically," said Lee Ellenberg, a Quincy mental health counselor.

"A lot of men who are still in the closet, leading double lives, feel they can't express their sexuality in other than a quick, anonymous way," he added.

Ellenberg believes that the use of public areas by homosexual men for their encounters is an aspect, in part, of their removal from the options offered by a large city. Boston has a number of gay clubs and support groups, but they are not easily accessible to the men using the Weymouth and Norwell rest stops.

"You'll find more of this in the suburbs, for sure," said Ellenberg.

"Some people feel like it's the only option they have," he said. "They're ashamed of their sexuality. To come out would entail too big a risk."

Ellenberg admitted that this type of sexual activity does carry risks. The rise of AIDS has made casual and anonymous sex a risky affair.

"Sexuality comes out in a very driven way," he said, "and that sometimes makes it difficult to think through and plan."

"The official position is that sex acts by anybody of any kind are forbidden on MDC property," said Steven Burguy, an assistant to MDC Commissioner William J. Geary.

"We always use uniformed enforcement," he added.

Burguy said that the MDC held conferences with representatives from Boston's gay community last year, who raised the issues of entrapment and selective enforcement.

"As a result," said Burguy, "and to avoid any confusion, we have a standing order to our police department forbidding undercover operations."

"Straight uniforms. Straight patrols," he added.

Burguy commented that sexual acts in MDC parklands are "not an unusually frequent occurrence," but a policy for arresting offenders is not a hard-and-fast rule.

"If you have a situation where it is far more public, more visible," he noted, "you might have an arrest."

"The most important thing underlying the directive is that the 'no sex' rule be applied evenhandedly," he noted, in reference to homosexual and heterosexual acts.

He said that it was an "undeniable" fact that people will not engage in sex in areas heavily patrolled by police.

"What that means is that as much as possible we should insure that sex isn't occurring on our parklands," he commented.

"It's the public aspect that causes concern to judges," he said. He added that cases against men charged with gay activity in the woods are handled

Shipyard workers rally to save jobs

By Don Merrill

A grey, rainy sky matched the occasion as hundreds of workers and area residents gathered Monday afternoon in Quincy center to attend a rally to demand that the Fore River shipyard's 4,000 jobs be saved.

The spirit of the workers was in sharp contrast to the atmosphere, however. The gathering cheered statements by politicians after a cordon of several dozen workers formed along Hancock Street, urging passing motorists to attend the rally.

Workers went to shopping malls and MBTA stops last week to gather signatures on petitions urging General Dynamics officials and politicians to 'Save our Shipyard.' According to David Miller of Lakeville, a shipyard welder and shop steward, 76,000 signatures had been gathered as of Monday morning.

Miller spent several days last week gathering signatures at Hanover Mall. He said the response from area residents, merchants and businesses "has been just overwhelming."

In the rally, Local 5 President Richard Pisciutto said additional signatures from AFL-CIO members across the state have yet to be returned.

"Nearly 100,000 of your brothers, sisters, friends and neighbors have signed petitions, and many more will come from friends in Springfield, New Bedford, and all across the state," he told the crowd.

The petition drive was organized by the Save our Shipyard Committee (SOS), which includes officials of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (IUMSWA), Quincy Mayor Francis McCauley and members of the Quincy City Council, state Rep. Robert Cerasoli (D-Quincy/Weymouth) and Weymouth Selectman Peg Goudy.

Members of the AFL-CIO's National Maritime Union attended the rally in a show of support for Quincy shipyard workers.

"The designs and the matierials may have changed, but the sweat and skill it takes to build ships here has never changed," Massachusetts AFL-CIO President Arthur Osborne said.

U.S. Sen Edward Kennedy promised workers he would "do his best" in talks with President Reagan and the secretaries of defense and the navy to save jobs at the 180-acre shipyard.

"I will speak to all who should hear Quincy's story," Kennedy said. "No finer ships are made anywhere else, whether for the Navy or commercial vessels."

U.S. Sen. John F. Kerry said he would fight for the continuation of the Sealift construction program.

"In meetings we've held in Sen. Kennedy's office, some have told me that it's ironic this is happening now to the Quincy yard," Kerry said. "They know of your increased efficiency and higher quality in the defense department."

Kerry, a Vietnam veteran who served four years in the Navy, recalled the World War II legend of Kilroy, an inspector in the Fore River yard.

"The Quincy shipyard is of tremendous strategic importance. Kilroy was here, and we must fight together to make sure Kilroy stays here," he said.

Before the speeches, the gathering recited the Pledge of Allegiance at the mall's flagpole. A POW-MIA flag flew with the U.S. flag; a number of workers wore T-shirts and other clothing indicating their status as Vietnam veterans.

"Can we rely on foreign people to build ships to move our military personnel and equipment? I expect not," Pisciutto said. "The economy simply won't be as strong if it is based on services, if we ignore our industrial assets."

U.S. Rep. Brian Donnelly (D-Dorchester) said continuing 101 years of Quincy shipbuilding is not only in self-interest, but also the national interest.

"I'm one member of Congress who's getting fed up with watching jobs being exported to Japan, Korea, Germany, Italy or anyplace else," he said.

Donnelly and Rep. Gerry Studds (D-Cohasset) said a lack of contracts for commercial vessels is also to blame for the shipyard's woes. Of 100,000 people employed in shipbuilding across the nation, Studds said only 8,500 build commercial ships.

Donnelly said the U.S. currently has a 500-ship merchant fleet, compared to 2,800 in the Soviet commercial fleet.

General Dynamics officials announced the shipyard's closing in June. A skeleton crew of about 600 workers will be on duty there a year from now; that number will fall to about 150 by the end of 1986.

Auditions for 'Oliver' set for Sept. 3 & 4

Auditions for Hingham Civic Music Theatre's fall production of "Oliver" are set for Sept. 3 and 4 at 7 p.m. at the Hingham High School auditorium.

Directors for the show, which will be staged on the last weekend in October and the first weekend in November, are Judy Holmes, Stage Director; Salvatore Bartolotti, Music Director, and Joan Kenney, Choreographer.

The directors expect a large turnout not only for the major roles and the orphans, but for the gutsy adult character roles as well. Actors auditioning for major roles should come prepared with a song from the show if at all possible or bring sheet music.

The casting committee will be looking for an Oliver who can play a sensitive, appealing orphan, has a good boy soprano voice ("Where Is Love?"), moves well, and who looks no older than 13.

Fagin ("Reviewing the Situation"), a villain who manages to be lovable, needs a good character actor who is thin and agile and has a strong voice. The Artful Dodger ("Consider Yourself at Home"), who is Fagin's best pupil, is a precocious, street-wise teenage boy who must move well and look no older than 17.

The major villain is Bill Sikes who is tough, muscular and between the ages of 30 and 40. Women's roles to be cast include Nancy, the attractive, gutsy friend of Fagin, who needs a strong mezzo soprano voice and can belt out a song ("As Long As He Needs Me"). Bet, Nancy's friend, is a sympathetic young girl between 14 and 17 who sings "I'd Do Anything For You."

Widow Corney is the Workhouse Mistress, a domineering widow in her 50s. She needs a good comedy actress with a strong soprano voice. Mr. Bumble is a large, pompous man who is in charge of the orphanage. He is middle-aged and needs a good tenor voice for his song, "Boy For Sale." There are nine other principal roles for both men and women, some without singing.

Please call the Program Chairman at 740-1372 for further information on character descriptions or songs required.

Joan Kenney, the choreographer, will conduct dancing auditions and especially good dancers will be used for solo roles within the show.

Hingham Civic is also interested in hearing from anyone who wishes to work behind-the-scenes on set painting and construction, props and costumes. Come sign up at the auditions, or contact Marie Terman, Producer, at HCMT, P.O. Box 50, Hingham, MA 02043.

Cohasset Worship . . .

Cohasset Baptist Church

Sunday Worship is located at the Town Hall at 10:30 a.m.

Sunday Bible Classes are scheduled to begin in October at 9:30 a.m. Call 383-0583 or 545-3948 for more information.

Weekly Bible Teaching, for adults , is offered every Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center on S. Main St. (first floor, use front door).

For Weekly Bible Teaching for youth, and for interest in youth activities, call 383-0583 or 545-3948.

Pastoral visits may be arranged by appointment, call 383-0583 or 545-3948, Pastor Dan Brodeur.

Second Congregational

A note from John Campbell, moderator for the church committee:

It's name is a bit cumbersome - "New Initiatives in Church Development" - but its purpose is simple and basic: to bring the Christian message to more people.

That is why our church, at the 1983 annual meeting, voted to participate and why the church committee is asking you to join this missionary effort of the United Church of Christ by making as generous a contribution as you can during the drive we planned beginning Sept. 8.

The funds are already being used to help start new United Church of Christ congregations, particularly in areas of population growth such as Florida and the Southwest, and to help existing UCC churches find ways to have a UCC church in their community.

Latest count shows that over 200 projects of this type have been funded. The goal is 150 during the 1980's.

We are coming late into the massive N.I.C.D. project. Scores of other churches in Massachusetts have already completed their drives. But we decided to complete our elevator project before redeeming our pledge to help others.

Our Sept. 8 worship service will be a kick-off for the drive, with a guest speaker to tell us how important we can be as missionaries.

St. Anthony's

Sunday Masses - 7 a.m., 9:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m. -Saturday - 5 p.m.

Daily Mass - 7 a.m. - Saturday - 8 a.m.

Baptisms - Blake A. Sweeney

St. Stephen's

Two services - Sunday, Sept. 15, St. Stephen's will return to its regular schedule of two worships services at 8 and 10 a.m. The day will be a rallying occasion marked by the beginning of our new church school for all ages and by the annual parish picnic. Fun will be had by all as the "program year" gets off to a bang.

Church school begins - St. Stephen's Parish Picnic will take place this year Sept. 15 after the 10 a.m. worship service at the Wakeman's home, 257 Atlantic Avenue. Good food, fellowship, and fun are the hallmarks of these annual gatherings. Watch the next newsletter for what you can bring.

Invited tour- Sunday, Oct. 6, after the 10 a.m. service, a bus will leave St. Stephen's for the Dorchester, Roxbury, and Jamaica Plain communities of Boston where the Episcopal City Mission has supported low income housing efforts over tha last 15 years. Housing for the elderly, a tenant-owned cooperative, and other housing sites will be the subject of this tour. If you would like to know more of the important work of the Episcopal City Mission, reserve a seat on the bus for Oct. 6 by calling Carole at the church office, 383-1083.

Outreach - at the Outreach meeting Aug. 18, the committee voted a recommendation that the Village Fair funds be divided among three different programs this year: $1000 to Social Action Ministries of Greater Boston; $1000 to St. Bartholomew's parish in Cambridge for their cultural and educational center; and the balance of the funds to go to the Episcopal City Mission, with a ministry to the poor and minorities in urban areas.

Quincy Crisis Center - We have very recently received a letter from Esther Sanger, director of Quincy Crisis Center, expressing her thanks for our St. Stephen's parish monthly meal, cash, and canned food distribution. Our pantry is now bare and we would ask for your renewed support. Badly needed are: cans of vegetables (peas, carrots, beans, etc.), cans of tuna, large juices.

Bishop's chair - A committee consisting of Kittie Sturtevant, Judy Collins, Jane Carlson, and Gertrude Hooper is hard at work refurbishing the Bishop's chair with needlepoint to replace the present very worn leather.

If anyone is interested in working on this project, will he or she get in touch with Gertrude Hooper,

Traffic warning

The Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, anticipating heavy traffic over the Labor Day Weekend, issued a warning to motorists that the 55 mile per hour speed limit will be rigidly enforced along its 135 mile roadway.

Chairman John T. Driscoll said, "State Police from Troop "E" who patrol the turnpike will augment regular radar teams in order to discourage excessive speeding."

In addition, radio-equipped emergency service patrol vehicles will assist police in locating and assisting motorists in disabled vehicles and a full force of toll collectors will be at all interchanges across the turnpike. Chairman Driscoll also said that "the Howard Johnson and Burger King restaurants along the turnpike will provide free coffee to patrons of the turnpike to promote safe driving." The gesture is intended to remind motorists that rest stops and coffee stops can help to keep drivers alert, thereby improving driving performance. Certificates will be distributed at toll plazas allowing motorists to be served coffee without charge from 10 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 2, through 7 a.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 3.

Driscoll added, "It has been proven that compliance with the 55 mile per hour speed limit has reduced fatalities by at least 10 percent annually along our nation's highways. It is especially important during this weekend that all motorists, without exception, limit their speed to this legal limit. We are determined to enforce this law. In doing so, we will achieve a safer weekend for all."

MassJob matches company

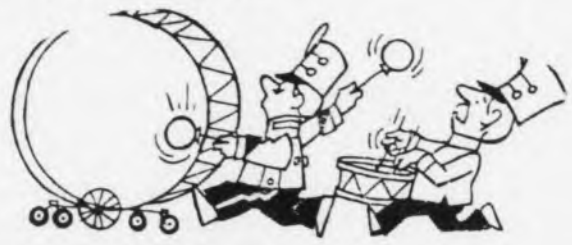
The state has created a new source of job matching for the unemployed and those who are seeking a job and/or training that best fits their abilities and needs. The Program is called MASSJOBS and it's a free program under a toll free number. (1-800-248-JOBS) (5627).

The advantage of MASSJOBS is that not only does it find jobs but it matches workers with companies that need their specific abilities.

If a person has no experience they will seek out training. Employers are encouraged to contact MASSJOBS when they need certain types of workers. MASSJOBS matches these companies with the correct personnel. Between their sources of applicants employers and trainers, MASSJOBS not only provides employment, but fulfilling careers. The major advantages include:

Customized Training for firms that need to upgrade or expand their workforce.
Subsidized On-The-Job Training for new employees.
General Skills Training in many high demand fields such as word processing, electronics and health care.
Educational Programs to improve the reading and computational skills of new and entry level employees.
Information on worker assistance programs including transportation and child care services.

Pamphlets are available in editions for both employers and employees. They can be attained by writing or calling Representative Mary Jeanette Murray's Office, Room 134, State House, Boston, MA 02133 or telephone 722-2400.



Health Bd. warning - 'Buckle Up'

This summer the Board of Health, the Passenger Safety Program of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, and the National Safety Council are encouraging the people of Cohasset to buckle-up. The Labor Day weekend marks the end of the "101 Critical Days" of summer campaign which has increased the public's attention of passenger safety.

"During these busy days, and especially during this upcoming holiday weekend, there is increased traveling and, therefore, increased risks for those people on their way to and from vacations," explained Joseph Godzik. Dr. Godzik, health agent for the Town of Cohasset, added, "We are trying to get people into the habit of buckling up seat belts and using car safety seats to decrease the risks of auto accident tragedies." Last summer in Massachusetts, 136 motor vehicle drivers and passengers were killed and many more were injured during the Memorial Day to Labor Day holiday season.

People can decrease their chances of being injured in a car accident by 50 percent and of being killed in an accident by 70 percent simply by using seat belts and child safety seats properly. Cindy Rodgers, director of the Massachusetts Passenger Safety Program, stated, "We hope to get people to pledge to themselves to buckle-up during every car ride for two weeks. By doing this, they'll see how easy and comfortable this life-saving habit can be.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts currently has a law requiring all children five-years-old and younger to be secured in a safety seat or a seat belt during evey ride. The Massachusetts House of Representatives passed a bill in July requiring the mandatory use of seat belts. The Senate is due to consider the bill this fall.

We just landed a number of big ones.

It takes more than a great menu to make a great restaurant.

It takes talented people to bring it all together.

We've got it all.

We've brought back most of the original items from our menu that won all sorts of awards 30 years ago (some things you just can't improve).

And in the past few months we've brought on board the kind of seafood restaurant people we need to help guarantee you catch some of the finest seafood and steaks to ever land on a menu.

Come and enjoy the light fantastic.

Officials discuss arrests and prosecution

"in a very humane manner."

Judge Albert Kramer of Quincy District Court cited the improved sense of restraint on the part of police forces in recent years, and the emphasis on police presence, through patrols, to discourage activity rather than to discover and interrupt it.

Nonetheless, undercover operations are permissible, he said. They do not constitute entrapment because the police agency posing as gay men are simply "giving them (gays) a chance to do what they would ordinarily do."

Kramer cited the actions of the MDC.

"They are attempting to clear the areas for public use," noted Kramer, "they are trying to discourage people from engaging in sexual acts on such property."

"I don't think anybody is saying that park and recreation areas should be turned over to anything other than park and recreation," he noted. "Let people know it's off limits (to engage in activities there) rather than make arrests."

Kramer acknowledged that a double standard may have been in effect in the past.

"I think there was a tendency to look at homosexual activity as something to be stopped," he noted, "that same view didn't take place when heterosexual activity was involved."

Such a practice would probably be illegal, since it would constitute the use of public funds to finance selective enforcement of the law.

Police patrols, insisted Kramer, should be the police option of choice. They are non-intrusive, require little manpower, and, most importantly, send the proper message: one of persuasion rather than prosecution.

An undercover operation at the Norwell site, headed by Lambalot's second-in-command, Lt. Robert Comtois, was carried out in July 1984. That operation netted eight arrests.

The eight men, ranging in age from 29 to 64 years old, were booked at the state police barracks in Norwell and ordered to appear in Hingham District Court. Two of the men were from distant locations; one was a Mattapoisett resident and the other a Catholic priest from Brattleboro, Vt.

Seven of the cases were heard during the period of October 1984-January 1985.

All of the men were fined, with penalties ranging from $25 (for the priest) to $500.

Three of the men are still on probation, and will remain so until the end of this year. One has been assigned probation supervision. All of the other cases have been closed.

So the view of the State Police is clear: They do not condone homosexual activity at the areas, even when it is conducted out of the public view. The most common justification is the protection of the public.

Sgt. Freeman phrased the problem: "People going down to the Cape stop in at the areas to relieve themselves, give the kids a little rest. Kids go up the hill and see this stuff. Parents get very upset. Can you blame them?"

"It wouldn't take many complaints to inspire me (to begin a crackdown)," said Chief Higgins.

The judicial aspect of homosexual activity in the public rest areas is delicate. Gay men arrested in undercover operations are usually charged with assault and battery if they touch an undercover policeman in the groin area. Those caught while engaged in intercourse can be charged with "unnatural and lascivious acts," under Chapter 272, Section 35 of the General Laws.

But what constitutes a 'private' act and when does that infringe upon the public?

"The court has said that 'privacy' means the conduct is not committed in a public place, not in public view, and others are not in a position to view it," said Peter Agnes, an assistant district attorney for Norfolk County.

"The outcome of a case may depend upon where the conduct occurs."

By this standard, gay activity in the woods — removed from the public view — as might occur at the Weymouth rest stop, might not be prosecutable.

This sign at the Weymouth rest area shows the issue at hand. Police say the hardest task is to decide where to draw the line between discouraging gay activity in public places and avoiding the pitfalls of selective enforcement of the law.

Agnes said that the office of the D.A. tries to avoid encouraging police actions in this field. "The practice in the past has been to discourage police intrusion or undercover operations when the parties are involved in consentual, private activity," he said.

We're talking about private conduct between consenting adults," said Agnes, "the rationale for undercover operations simply isn't present."

"Is the conduct really offending the community sensibility," said Agnes, "or is it just in the abstract?"

"On the other hand, there may be families who may be confronted and find it offensive. This is an actual offense of the community sensibility," he added.

Agnes raised the issue that is perhaps central in deciding on plans for police action: Is gay activity in the woods truly impinging on the 'publicness' of the rest areas, or is it merely a thought that most people find unpalatable and therefore oppose?

The Beauty Experience

It's A Family Affair

Our Full Service Salon takes special pleasure in welcoming all the members of the family and happily anticipates giving the very best in style and service to Mom, Dad, Big Sister and Little Brother . . . right on down to Tiniest Tot. It's never too soon for children to begin to learn the important lessons of beauty, lessons that teach them principles of grooming discipline, cleanliness, order and contemplation, which will stand them in good stead later in life. Vanity, a much aligned virtue in modern life, is perhaps not so bad a beginning for youngsters who will soon be seeking positions in a society that frequently equates personal appearance and style with aptitude and potential. Think about it. And when you make your next appointment . . . make it a family affair. You'll ALL enjoy the good looks!!

Drivers needed - The American Cancer Society has a need for volunteer drivers to drive cancer patients to appointments and chemotherapy treatments. Retirees, part-time workers and housewives form a pool of volunteer drivers able to transport patients to these medical appointments. For more information call: Carolyn Housman, 383-0771; Barbara MacDonald, 545-0197; Hot Line, 749-2535; A.C.S. office, 583-8515.

Discussion series - Any South Shore person interested in learning more about themselves and their relationships to others in the framework of C.G. Jung's psychology, are invited to join a nine-week discussion series that will meet in Cohasset this fall. At the initial meeting, those who decide they want to participate will be able to order Questpoint materials and a weekly time for meetings will be selected. For further information, call Margaret Smalzel, 383-0989.

Carillon recital

There will be a carillon recital Sunday, Sept. 1 from St. Stephen's Church along the Cohasset Common from 4 to 5 p.m.

The carillonneur will be George Matthew Jr., a graduate of Columbia, Bridgeport, and Wesleyan Universities. He is director of instrumental music in Stamford, Conn. schools and is carillonneur at the 56-bell Maguire Memorial Carillon of the First Presbyterian Church in Stamford.

His selections will include compositions by J.S. Bach, "The Boston Tea Party" by Leen 't Hart, "The St. Louis Rag" by Tom Turpin, and "The Wall Street Rag" by Scott Joplin.

Bloodmobile Sept. 9

The Cohasset chapter of the American Red Cross will conduct a Bloodmobile on Monday, Sept. 9.

It will be held at the Unitarian Parish House on the Common, and the hours will be 2:30 to 7:30 p.m. Everyone in good health between the ages of 17 and 65 are urged to attend.

Variety of services offered by volunteer army

By Jim Whelan

Supported by an army of over 100 volunteers, the Social Service League of Cohasset provides our community with innovative programs that address problems in the area.

Operating out of its offices at St. Stephen's Church on Cohasset Common, the non-profit organization offers health, guidance and counseling services for the elderly, a Senior Shuttle Bus and Meal On Wheels to Cohasset residents.

Under the guidance of Virginia Riley, the agency's president, some very important seminars will be introduced this fall. Riley and her 15 member board determine the programs by examining the needs of the community.

For instance, this fall a program entitled "Chemically Free' which expounds on the dangers of alcohol abuse, will be offered to junior high school students and their parents. Riley said that underage alcohol consumption has been a problem in Cohasset and has caused a few recent deaths. The seminar is composed of three sessions, one for the students, one for their parents and one combined. It has been organized by Helen Hooper who is chairman of the Family Services Committee at the League.

She expects a good turnout for the seminar, especially at the last session where the students and their parents get together and really communicate.

Riley said, "Peer pressure is such a big thing, but kids will avoid it no matter what the pressure if they know the danger."

Also on the schedule this fall is a one day seminar entitled "Good Grief." It is a progam designed to instruct young and old how to handle grief after a loved one has passed away. The program was offered last spring and was quite successful. It is slated to be held September 26. Those interested should contact the League for further details.

In addition to important and effective educational programs, the League has established support programs over its 75 year history that many of the town's residents have come to depend upon.

Nursing services performed by the public nurse offer health promotion and disease control. Nurse Mary Ann Hansen, R.N., works three days a week for the League. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays she has walk-in hours at the League's office from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. From 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. she visits shut-ins.

Twice monthly, Hansen holds a keep-well clinic. Blood pressure screening, urine testing, weight and general health consultations are available at this

by JOAN PINKHAM

One last fling and then it's back to the books, goodbye to cookouts, lunch by the pool and picnicking on the sands. One last round — weather permitting — of outdoor fun before the casual summer days give way to classes, meetings and a more hectic lifestyle. For some such as our ever-loyal contributor, Millie Carr, cooking and entertaining know no season. Her cake recipe which follows could do justice to either a cookout or house party —either way, sounds good to me.

APRICOT CREAM CAKE

1 pkg. yellow cake mix
3/4 C. apricot nectar (canned)
1/4 C. Wesson oil
4 eggs
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour bundt or tube pan. Combine cake mix, nectar, oil and eggs and beat as directed on pkg. Filling:
1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
1/2 C. sugar
2T lemon juice
1 C. coconut
Combine above and beat until smooth. Spoon over batter in pan. Bake 50 to 55 min. Cool upright for one hour and drizzle the following glaze over top:
1 C. powdered sugar, 1 T lemon juice, 1 T apricot nectar

It's that time of year when we're being offered tomatoes, squash and zucchini from every side and people you hardly know are pleading with you to relieve them of a few. Before you break down and accept their bounty, stand firm and avoid overripe and bruised veggies unless you plan to retire to the kitchen immediately to use them up before they rot. This recipe was sent to me by Dorothy Aronson when the column first began and came to her by way of a friend in California and Dorothy wrote: "It's so great, you'll never believe it's plain, old zucchini."

ZUCCHINI CASSEROLE

4 medium zucchini sliced about 1/2" thick
3/4 C. shredded carrots
1/2 a medium onion, chopped
6 T. butter or margarine
2 1/4 C. herbed croutons
Can cream of chicken soup
1/2 C. sour cream
Cook zucchini in small amount salted water until slightly tender. Drain. Cook carrots and onion in 4 T. butter until tender. Remove from heat and stir in 1 1/2C. croutons, soup and sour cream. Gently stir in zucchini. Turn into 1 1/2 qt. casserole. Melt remaining butter and toss gently with rest of croutons. Place on top of casserole. Do not cover. Bake in 350 oven for 30 to 40 min. Serves six.

For Sally Bergin, life as a senior citizen is a busy round of whist parties and affairs that often find her arriving with refreshments from her kitchen. She stopped long enough to copy three of her favorite recipes to share with us and here is Sally's way with

LOBSTER NEWBURGH

1 C. (5 oz.) lobster meat, frozen or fresh
3 T. flour
1/2 tsp. each salt, mustard and pepper
1 can evaporated milk
3 T. shortening
1/2 C. yellow cheese, grated
3 to 4 T. sherry
Make white sauce with shortening and flour, seasons, juice from lobster and undiluted evaporated milk. Beat well with beater. Add cheese and let melt. Add sherry and mix well. Serve on toast.

And now when green beens are popping up all over the garden, here is how Millie makes

GREEN BEANS AND MUSHROOMS

2 T. butter
1 C. sliced mushrooms
4 C. cooked green beans
1 C. sour cream
Salt and pepper and 1 T. chopped parsley
Saute mushrooms in melted butter. Add beans, sour cream and mix well. Season to taste and sprinkle with parsley.

Lest you forget: now when the children are back in school, perhaps you might find that spare moment to share your favorite family recipe. Just send it along to me and we'll all be grateful.

MUSINGS

By JOHN H. CUTLER

☐ From "Chapter and Verse" of a recent Harvard magazine: "Sydney Steele wonders where, when, and to whom Dwight Eisenhower said: The greatest single force for peace in the world, other than a government body, is Rotary International." Neither Rotary International headquarters nor the Eisenhower Library knows the answer.

☐ The last time I saw the Kentucky Colonel he was still siptoeing through the juleps.

☐ I don't think Robert Browning would be so well remembered were it not for his wife Elizabeth Browning. And I can never forgive Robert for his poem beginning: "Grow old along with me, the best is yet to be . . ." As I grow old without the poetic aid of Robert, I realize the absurdity of those lines. H.L. Mencken has an appropriate comment: "The older I grow the more I distrust the familiar doctrine that age brings wisdom."

☐ Nepotism is okay as long as it's kept in the family.

☐ The way President Reagan and Congress are trying to reduce the national deficit reminds me of misguided people who are trying to feed the alligators instead of draining the swamp.

☐ An economist is a person who guesses wrong without blushing.

☐ I didn't say he was dumb. I merely said he wasn't sure whether Moby Dick was a man or a whale.

☐ I agree with Somerset Maugham: "Only a mediocre person is always at his best."

☐ There are three kinds of modern literature: erotic, neurotic and tommyrotic. According to an area police chief there are three kinds of drivers: "urban, suburban and bourbon."

☐ Add a little dirt if you want to make mountains out of molehills.

☐ The wife of the great physicist, Robert Millikan, passed through the hall of her home in time to hear her maid answer the telephone. "yes," Mrs. Millikan overheard, "this is where Dr. Millikan lives, but he's not the kind of doctor that does anybody any good."

☐ I'v heard enough of hidden taxes. I prefer to hear of places where taxpayers can hide.

☐ Concludes Paul Mooney, president of the Boston Bruins hockey team: "Sports teams, by and large, are not bonanzas."

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A race to glory or folly?

If you will kindly overlook the surfeit of bathroom wit in this space of late, I will assert that Massachusetts suffers from a bad case of transportation constipation; I can't think of a better way of describing the state we're in. We are impacted not only with too many cars and too little space to move them in and park them, what is worse we are impacted with transportation projects that we can't seem to get moving.

As if I needed it, this was brought home to me the other day during the afternoon commutation hourplus on the first day of what I guess I should call "modified decriminalized travel in the breakdown lanes" of Route 3 between Hingham and Hanover. I confess it was a modification this life-long Red Sox fan and Route 3 driver had himself convinced would transform the daily commute into a pleasant drive in the country circa 1950.

Thus, I was full of optimism as I came up to the Route 18 exit this Monday, and I was trying in my mind to figure out which choice of lanes the Hingham to Hanover modified decriminalization would allow me to hit 70, I mean 55, first. The passing lane? The center (formerly the travel) lane? The newly decriminalized breakdown lane? The latent juvenile in me decided to give the passing lane a whirl.

So I gunned the Eagle, which by my best reckoning and recollections is the 19th car I have owned and driven on this road, and pulled into the passing lane where I spent so much of my adolescence. Just about then I came up behind Frank Hynes, Marshfield's distinguished state representative, who was doing about 51 in the center lane. Perhaps because 17 summers ago (in one of my more pixilated moments) I ran for that very seat in the House myself, the old competitive juices started to flow in earnest. "I'll show that cockamamie legislator how a pro drives Route 3," I thought as I began to overlap him.

I pulled up alongside him, tooted, waved and smiled as if to say, "See you later, center laner!" He looked up, smiled and waved back, as if to say, "Still think you can make it in the fast lane, don't you, Mittell?!"

The race was on. I accelerated to 54, nearly rear-ended someone and blew by the hapless Hynes still doing 51 in the center lane. I watched him begin to disappear in the rear-view mirror (nearly rear-ended someone else), my foot hard on the accelerator, the testosterone racing through my veins, the distance between us widening to a car length, then to two, then four, then eight.

But Hynes, although distinguished, is nevertheless pretty smart, and as we passed the Rockland exit, his center lane began to gain on my passing lane. The gap narrowed until his front bumper was almost even with my rear bumper. I thought, "I could cut out in front of him and block his advance — with a Mass. plate I can do anything I want!" But the sportsman in me wouldn't allow it. I thought, "I've chosen my weapon the fast lane, he's chosen his weapon the center lane. I'll go down defending the honor of the fast lane if I have to."

My virtue was immediately rewarded. Just as we were to go neck and neck we came up to the Hanover Mall exit where the decriminalization of breakdown lane travel comes to an abrupt end courtesy of the State Police. There was a sudden squeeze between the center and breakdown lanes. The hapless Hynes was caught in it, and for me in the passing lane clear sailing emerged as far as the eye could see. I could have accelerated to 70, but craving a chance to wink at the vanquished representative, I put the Eagle at 56 and pulled out of the passing lane into the center lane for the first time since the Braintree Dump.

My victory, it began to appear, was more easily gained than I had imagined. Frank Hynes was nowhere to be seen. He had disappeared from my rear view mirror, dropped out of my radar so to speak. I crossed the North River and was coming up to what destiny, or if you will, destination, had predetermined to be the finish line of the race — the Marshfield/Pembroke exit. Still no sign of him whom I began to think of as my gallant competitor. "Good grief," it suddenly occurred to me, "maybe he stopped at that rest area."

Suddenly the traffic braked, and for the third time I nearly rear-ended someone. . .for this was the Monday of the Marshfield Fair, and the Marshfield/Pembroke exit was backed up two lanes wide all the way out and onto Route 3. Suddenly I realized that I could holler and be heard by the "finish line," yet my passage to same was hopelessly blocked. Suddenly I had to bet on a lane again. Should I risk fortune on the more heavily traveled right lane to Marshfield which (except when the wrong cop is on detail outside the Christmas Tree Shop) usually keeps moving? Or gamble on the more lightly traveled left lane to Pembroke, which stops and starts as cars vie with oncoming eastbound traffic from Route 139?

I calculated that Hynes the mischievous Marshfielder, Hynes the habitual, would bet his fortune on the Marshfield lane. Therefore, all I would have to do to win the race would be to get in line ahead of him. So I cut in front of someone and pulled into the Marshfield lane. But no sooner had I executed this move than the Pembroke lane opened up. I found myself wedged between two idiots in the Marshfield lane, and before I could extricate myself, Frank Hynes, who may be distinguished and smart, but is also a sneak and a rat, glided by me in the Pembroke lane doing about 25, and in a wink disappeared into the twilight toward the bourne of Marshfield. I was 20 more minutes getting to the Mariner office, by which time my ignoble competitor was without doubt enjoying his second glass of ginger beer.

I had better luck than this when I was a kid, and if I may get beyond my "race" with Frank Hynes (who incidentally is a voice of the light of reason on Beacon Hill) I will tell you how I had better luck when I was a kid, which is the point I have been (forgive me) driving at here.

When I was a kid Route 3 (now Route 53) was a three lane road and a mess all summer with Cape traffic. So was Route 3A, which absorbed what Route 3 couldn't absorb. So was Route 128, which was another three-lane roadblock through Queen Anne's Corner, Braintree Five Corners, and even cornier places. For a while when I was a kid we lived in Wellesley, and I can remember my father's being delighted one day when it took us only an hour and 20 minutes to get to Duxbury, where we also lived from time to time. Most of the time it took an hour and 40 minutes, and my father drove like — never mind — I'm already in a hell of a lot of trouble for a crack I made in this space about his driving.

So the roads of my childhood were a mess. Yet constantly throughout my childhood new roads were being built. Franconia Notch, New Hampshire aside, there isn't a major road in America that wasn't rebuilt or built between the time I was five and 25. Yet now that Frank Hynes and I are 27 or 28 or whatever it is, it's a big deal when government can get its act together enough to build a half a dozen turnouts so that beleaguered motorists may drive in the breakdown lane for eight or 10 miles.

Our fathers' World War II generation literally redrew the map of America. But our Viet Nam generation, once so full of promise, and now at an age when it ought to be at the height of its effectiveness, fusses with turnouts and has no master transportation plan for the next generation to go by.

I'm not sure what the problem is.Partly I think it is a legal system that doesn't know when to quit. (A single litigant has held up the completion of Route 25 to the Cape for years now.) Partly I think it is the overly dominant role that the Federal Highway Administration now plays in highway building. (It saps state and local planners of their initiative.)

But whatever "it" is, Frank's and my generation needs to get "it" together. We need to get some of our fathers' and mothers' vision, their energy, and above all their effectiveness back, and find some solutions to some of our problems. As a generation we are finding that it has been much easier to sit back and criticize than to build things that work. We need to make some results happen, for if the millenium dawns with a four-lane Route 3 and no passenger railroad southeast of Boston, this generation will go down like the 1932 "pregnant Buick" as one of history's laughingstocks.

Passing Lane

1985 Buick Century wagon

This column will appear monthly in the Mariners. It is our attempt to present a not-exactly expert but sincere opinion of cars that would appeal to our style of living. It is delivered from the woman's point of view - a woman who is forced to travel that rocky road of survival in suburbia.

By Jane Lane

Since the invention of the garage, man has tried to engineer a car that would fill it completely. Finally, some genius gave birth to the station wagon, a square-shaped monstrosity with a front grill that resembled Godzilla's smile, and a hood that required five grown men to pry it into a yawning position. This car was so wide and so long, innocent children would be forced to sit at the opened rear exit to let Mom know the tail section had just rounded the last corner.

Items to fit in this home on wheels also had to be invented - and thus we were introduced to Pampers economy packs and overweight, lazy kids with paper routes.

Detroit got smart a few years back when they saw most of these wagons lying forgotten inside the garages. Cobwebs carpeted the once-proud family wagon - reminders of a time when gas was plentiful and cheap. A smaller version was created - a car that didn't drool and whine every time you passed a gas pump. A car that never prompted audiences to stand in mute amazement as you attempted 17 times to back into double parking space.

The 1985 Buick Century wagon is a recent attempt to design a mid-size, good-looking, roomy car that is perfect for that suburban family with 2.5 kids (although we're told there's room for that other half)

This, we stress, is a nice-looking car with lots of extras. But the best thing we can say about this vehicle is the mileage rates. It comes equipped with a variety of engine sizes. With the four-speed automatic transmission and the 3.0 liter V-6 engine we estimated about 24 miles per gallon in the city, and thirty M.P.G. highway. The 3.8 liter Multi-port fuel injection V-6 engine also comes with four-speed automatic transmission and overdrive.

That fourth gear is the cruise control - a marvelous feature designed for highway fuel economy and specifically for mothers who have to reach back to whack an unruly passenger.

For that inimitable Colonial look, the Century wagon features woodgrain applique. We loved the new soft velour fabric interior - my livingroom should look so good. But Mom, avoid the beige. It's camouflaged under a layer of sand, but Kool-Aid does a job on it.

Extra features such as electronic windows and door locks are terrific - and don't the kids love to hear it click! I certainly wish someone would design a master lock control for the driver's door, or automatic arm restraints for the back seat.

The dashboard, not something I usually gush over, is cleverly designed. Everything from radio to air conditioning, to rear window defogger is easily recognizable and reachable. And a cup of coffee, your bills, or a small box of (unused) tissues fit great on top.

I also liked the rear door. It's a one-piece job that is easy for Moms to open and shut, but forget the kids. There's no way they could pry this thing open.

A short pause for praise. Handy, clever features such as a glove box light, an overhead map light, make you feel there must be a real human being putting some thought into this car.

The singular objection to this handsome, smooth riding car is the price. The base sticker is $10,500. With some of those extras (forget about it, I require air conditioning, stereo-tape deck, roof racks, power seats and tilt steering wheel) the price tags jumps to $15,600.

I'm sorry, Detroit. At that price, I don't want to be chauffeuring a bunch of Brownies to swim camp, or the week's garbage to the local landfill. For $15,600 I want a car that screams 'for adults only', not the neighborhood school bus.

It's economical, good-looking, and a good performer. It's all the things you'd ever want in a husband or a car. But I wouldn't pay $15,600 for either.

The Cape Cod life you've waited for is here. Now. In Duxbury.

Oceanwoods is selling as fast as it's being built, for a lot of reasons. Cape living, without the battle of the bridge. Quality construction and creative architecture you thought had passed you by. Residents' use of one of the world's great beaches, in one of New England's most beautiful towns.

Choice two-bedroom townhomes and condominiums remain, from 1500 to more than 2000 sq. ft. From $154,000 to $260,000. With a few remaining single-family residences, designed by award-winning architects.

Come enjoy 23 acres of salt air, balconies, ocean view, crickets at night and serenity—only 45 minutes from Boston. But, do it now. So someone else isn't enjoying what you should be.

The Cape Cod life you've waited for is here. Now. In Duxbury.

Oceanwoods is selling as fast as it's being built, for a lot of reasons. Cape living, without the battle of the bridge. Quality construction and creative architecture you thought had passed you by. Residents' use of one of the world's great beaches, in one of New England's most beautiful towns.

Choice two-bedroom townhomes and condominiums remain, from 1500 to more than 2000 sq. ft. From $154,000 to $260,000. With a few remaining single-family residences, designed by award-winning architects.

Come enjoy 23 acres of salt air, balconies, ocean view, crickets at night and serenity—only 45 minutes from Boston. But, do it now. So someone else isn't enjoying what you should be.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

SAAB
The most intelligent car ever built.

time. This fall the nurse will administer the annual flu shot and offer correctal examinations.

Generally, she services people who need monitoring and looking in on, not the acutely ill. Most of her services are for elderly patients who address their general health questions to her.

"Meals On Wheels" is another mainstay of the League's local programs. The reasonably-priced meals are distributed to any senior citizen who requests it six days a week. The service is available by the day, week or month.

The Senior Shuttle Bus that many of us see on the roads of Cohasset is another service provided by the Social Service League. The bus is driven by volunteers Monday through Friday between 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. The Shuttle Bus offers special monthly shopping trips and transportation to church on Sundays.

Two social workers, Carolyn Housman and Judy Basmajian, are available for geriatric counseling services. The two social workers help families with important decisions about the well-being of their elders. Both are licensed medical social workers and can address a variety of problems including adolescent problems.

For the younger generation, the League offers a summer intern program called "TEC," Teens Exploring Careers. This allows juniors and seniors in high school a career exploration internship for two weeks during the summer months.

The Wilcott Fund Trust grants financial assistance to elderly couples living in their homes. It is available to any couple living in the Plymouth County area. At this time there are 23 couples receiving assistance through the fund.

As always, the League is an outlet for the distribution of government surplus cheese and butter. The distribution will begin again in September. This is a program for the area residents who are temporarily out of work and have no income coming in.

More than anything else, said Riley, the League serves as a referral center for the community. The secretary at the office, Dana Kamoski, said that she has a resource file for just about anything. One woman called her once looking for a fresh egg farm. Kamoski was able to provide her with the information. Most of those who call are elderly seeking medical reference. The Social Service League is a great resource for newcomers in the area to find out what the community has to offer.

The Cohasset Consignment Shop on Rte. 3A is operated solely to benefit the League. The shop is staffed entirely by volunteers and its profits are a substantial part of the League's revenue. The League also receives money from the Town of Cohasset and the Board of Health.

Any information about services rendered by the League should be addressed to its office: phone is 383-0821.

Builders obtain permits for watershed land

By Jane Lane

Plans to develop land surrounding the town's water supply have surfaced since the town learned last week there will be no construction moratorium.

A proposed amendment to the zoning bylaw which would prohibit construction within the watershed district, failed to win approval from the state Attorney General Francis Bellotti. He notified Town Clerk Frances Marks last Wednesday that because of procedural problems, the amendment was rejected.

That same day, Marshfield developer William Last applied for two permits at the office of Cohasset Building Inspector Edward Poskus. With no moratorium to legally prohibit development of the area, Poskus granted permits for the construction of foundations for two single-family residences at 84 and 92 Aaron River Road.

The following day Frederick Koopman applied for a permit to construct a foundation for a single-family home at 98 Aaron River Road.

"I have no way of knowing if more people will be in here to get more permits (for the watershed district)," Poskus said this week. "But there's no reason now to hold them up. I held them up for as long as I could."

Last April, town meeting approved the zoning bylaw amendment which would ban further development of the area designated as the town's water supply district. This temporary restriction was intended to stop encroachment onto the watershed, while an official study is being conducted. The engineering firm of Camp, Dresser and McKee are in the process of studying and defining the watershed, and will have recommendations for bylaw amendments within the next year. Last April's moratorium was a temporary measure, designed to hold off development until a permanent solution is designed.

Peter Pratt, chairman of the Water Commission, said the bylaw failure was "disheartening." He could not comment on what course the town may follow to avoid further construction in that area, until the commission discussed the matter with town counsel.

He said the commission would be "turning to town counsel for guidance" while they repeat the process to initiate another moratorium bylaw. "We'll get this thing to the next special town meeting, if it means we have to hand carry the document ourselves. With the daily advice of town counsel, we expect to resolve this situation by the next special townmeeting(tentatively scheduled for November)," he stated.

Pratt was referring to the reason why the bylaw amendment was denied by the state. According to the attorney general, failure by the town to have the zoning plan at the town clerk's office and with the

Plans begin for French exchange

By Dave Goodsell

Opening communications with Cohasset's sister city, Souppes sur Loing, building an exchange program for young people, and election of officers were all areas of discussion at the first meeting of the Cohasset Cultural Exchange Committee, Thursday, Aug. 29.

"They as a town are much more organized than we are," said Selectman Cliff Mitman as he addressed the group. He said the French town in Normandy has already set up a budget for the sister city arrangement and the town has made a guest house and bus available to Cohasset visitors in France.

"Well, you know, a mayor in France has more power than one has here," said committee member Francoise Najar. "He makes the decisions for the town. It's not as democratic as it is here." Because the mayor of Souppes sur Loing is interested in the exchange, he can make things happen, said Mitman.

There has been some correspondence between the two towns, according to Mitman. "They were ready to charge right ahead," he said, explaining confusion about a possible visit by 30 people from France this past summer. Although no visitors came this year, Mitman asked the committee to come up with concrete goals and to plan on making arrangements for late spring and summer next year.

The committee discussed an exchange program for young people as a way to build interest in the cultural exchange between the two towns as a whole. Najar said bringing young people from France to Cohasset would be a good way for them to understand the differences between lifestyles in France and America. "For French people, the town has a certain shape, it's still quite old-fashioned. For them it will be fascinating because they don't realize what an American town looks like."

Committee member Elizabeth Warren suggested that an exchange program for young people would be a good way to get adults interested in visiting the French town and in hosting French visitors to Cohasset. "I took an informal poll among my friends and I was disappointed that they weren't interested in taking exchange guests in," she said.

The committee is made up of three Cohasset residents at this point, and they will be looking for more people to join. Judith S. Keim will serve as the committee chairman, Francoise Najar, as correspondence secretary and Elizabeth W. Warren, as recording secretary. Each member expressed her personal reasons for becoming involved with the committee and all were interested in making the sister city arrangement work for the residents of both towns, so that they may have a chance to experience a different culture.

Plans discussed by the committee include a slide show about Souppes sur Loing for Cohasset students and French language review classes for Cohasset residents.

Commission approves plans for barn renovations

By Dave Goodsell

Approval of a Cohasset Community Center plan to renovate a barn for use as an annex, and the election of two officers were passed in unanimous votes at the Tuesday, Sept. 3 meeting of the Cohasset Commons Historical District Commission. The group's monthly meeting also opened a discussion on a plan by the Cohasset Garden Club to install nameplates on various specimens of trees in the Commons.

The Community Center plan calls for the renovation of a barn located behind the organization's site on Cohasset Common so that it may expand its services. Community Center spokesman Don Larson told the commission the barn is now "in terrible condition."

The plans for physical improvements to the site include a complete exterior renovation, tearing out one window and replacing it with a door for handicapped access, replacing existing windows with double windows, tearing down a cyclone fence and re-landscaping the lot. Larson told the commission that the changes would have no effect on parking in the area.

Vice chairman of the commission, Don Evans told the commission, "I would like to see the building renovated instead of it being left the way it is now."

Currently, the center's main building houses both a nursery school program and gymnastics program, according to Larson. "At 12 p.m., the nursery school program has to be broken down and moved so the gymnastic equipment can be set up for afternoon lessons," he said.

"By adding space for the gymnastics program, the nursery school program can go longer than from 9 to 11:45 a.m. each morning," said Larson. He also said the gymnastics program could expand with the larger facilities in the renovated barn.

After listening to Larson, discussing the plan and its possible impact on the Commons area, and reviewing the architectural plans drawn-up by St. Don and Associates of Marshfield, the commission passed the plans in a unanimous decision.

After electing Don Evans as vice chairman and Hubert Vanderlugt as secretary, the commission moved on to a discussion of the Cohasset Garden Club's plan to put nameplates on trees in the Commons.

Commission member Patsy Dean presented a sample of the plates which would be used and told the commission that the plates were guaranteed not to rust or break apart for 50 years, that the plates came in different sizes that are appropriate for a particular tree and would be placed just above eye level. "In the plan, one of each type of tree will be labeled so that the plates will not be redundant," she said. "This will have to be approved by the Town of Cohasset because it is town land."

Cohasset's week . . .

Conservation hearings

The Conservation Commission held three public hearings two weeks ago. A request for a determination of applicability was filed by Mr. and Mrs. David Replogle to construct an 8 foot by 12 foot extension onto the first floor of their home at 84 Gammonds Road.

Lee B. Palmiter, owner of Cohasset Cycle Sports, requested a determination of applicability to extend the front of his building seven feet toward Ripley Road and to construct a second story onto his existing building for business or professional offices. Palmiter wants to expand his business operations at his Depot Square location.

A notice of intent was filed by Mr. and Mrs. J. Erickson of 68 Nichols Road to construct an addition to their home to hold a whirlpool and a double vanity.

The commission proposed to draft a letter to the Sandy Beach Association informing them they cannot remove sand from the beach area without the consent of the commission.

Large amounts of sand were removed earlier this summer when a disposal company hired by the Sandy Beach Asociation removed the kelp that washed up on the beach after an early July storm.

Chamber meeting

There will be a general meeting of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Sept. 11 at Hugo's restaurant.

Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis will be the guest speaker at the meeting. He will update Chamber members on the sewer project appeal.

The Chamber's board of directors will meet Sept. 25 at Kimball's at noon.

Heavy equipment damage

Michael Russell of 105 Atlantic Avenue has asked the town to pay about $7000 worth of septic system repairs to his property.

Russell said last summer he gave permission to the water department to bring heavy equipment onto his property to dig up and relocate water pipes. "I gave this permission only after being reassured that my property would be restored to the same condition as before," he stated.

In a letter to Water Supt. Ben Curley, the Atlantic Avenue resident stated that several holes were dug in the area of his leaching field. After the construction crews left, the sewage system was malfunctioning.

An engineer has estimated it will cost approximately $7000 to repair the damaged system. "I expect to be completely reimbursed for all expenses related to the repairs of my septic system," Russell added in his letter.

New post commander

Laurence Sousa, 35, a veteran of the Vietnam war, was installed last week as commander of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118.

Sousa, a resident of Scituate, replaced outgoing commander William Spiers. He is a former sergeant-at-arms at the post.

Born in Cohasset, Sousa attended school in Cohasset and Scituate. He enlisted in the Marines in 1969, and during a tour in Vietnam, he was seriously wounded when he stepped on a mine.

He and his wife, Lou Anne, have three children.

Classification study

The personnel board has issued a request for proposals for a classification and evaluation study of the town's 57 non-union employees.

The study, according to the board, will include a review with department supervisors and job descriptions for all non-union positions. It must also recommend such changes as appear necessary to more closely define duties, responsibilities and requirements for each position.

There will be a review of the present classification by law and its application to the subject positions, along with a comparison between the town's classification by law pay schedules and those of comparable communities.

Recommendations which may improve the management of the bylaw should be suggested, with special regard to the legal aspects. And a review of the department supervisors regarding the present performance evaluation and merit pay system should be completed.

The personnel board also stated a classification study should recommend a job performance evaluation system which can be utilized by all town departments for non-union employees.

Landfill and beach sand

Conservation Commissioner Patricia Buckley recently discovered a large amount of beach sand at the rear of the Cedar Street landfill. The sand presumably was deposited there during the town's efforts to rid Sandy Beach of seaweed in July.

Commission Chairman Merle Brown notified the Board of Health that before any material is taken from the beach, or any disruption occurs within wetlands or beaches, the commission must be told in advance.

The health department had unsuccessfully attempted to contact the commissioners the day the beach was cleaned.

In the future, Brown suggested, the commission must be notified a few days in advance of any cleanup at the beach "so they have time to inspect and make suggestions or Orders of Conditions so that there may be no future recurrence of this problem," Brown stated.

Carillon concert

There will be a Carillon Concert Sept. 8 from 4 to 5 p.m. from St. Stephen's Church at Cohasset Common.

Carillonneur Janet Dundore from St. Thomas' Episcopal Church in Whitemarsh, Pa., will perform.

Among the selections she will perform on Sunday are: "300th Birthday Celebration" by Johann Sebastian Bach; three transcriptions from the "Romantic Period", and "Favorite Melodies in 3/4 Time," in addition to two evening songs.

Mrs. Dundore is a committee member of the World Carillon Federation and is a past president of the Guild of Carillonneurs in North America.

Permits issued after moratorium rejected planning board at the scheduled time, attributed to the denial by the state.

In his letter to Town Clerk Marks, Bellotti noted that the text of the proposed zoning bylaw creating a Watershed Supply Protection Building Moratorium District was filed in the town clerk's office on February 3, 1985.

The planning board's hearing was advertised as taking place March 6 "and it made reference to the bylaw being available at the aforesaid offices," the state official noted.

That bylaw text referred to a plan entitled "Aaron River Dam and Lily Pond Watershed" as filed in the office of the town clerk. But, Bellotti stated, the plan was not filed with the town clerk until April 2 "and it was not available at the planning board office until the same date. Town Meeting convened April 6 and the voters at Town Meeting, even of they had advance copies of the warrant as of the date it was signed by selectmen - March 2 - would not have been able to ascertain the key element involved, namely the location of the proposed district.

"The map was discussed at the planning board hearing on March 6 as being a map that would replace the one being used by the Board of Health and that the new map would be a detailed one," he continued. "The voters were not apprised of the zoning change they were being asked to adopt."

Town officials were aware of the probability that the amendment to article 43 may not win state approval. Last month, Bellotti forwarded his approval of several other town meeting articles. Article 43 was missing from that list.

From April until last week, Building Inspector Poskus was aware that several developers were interested in the land, but he would not issue any permits until a decision on the moratorium was finalized.

Water Commissioner Pratt said the failure of the amendment passage rests ultimately with his commission. "The document passed through many hands. But the water commissioners were the authors of the bylaw so we must take full responsibility of this problem."And, "he continued, " we will now take the responsibility for bringing a Constitutional construction moratorium back to town meeting."

Saying he was disheartened, but still willing to "pick up where we've left off," Pratt emphasized the need to revive a moratorium in the watershed district. The original moratorium passed town meeting in April by an overwhelming majority.

"Only the town as a whole can continue to conserve our precious water supply from individual profit-minded developers who are not concerned about the future of this town," he stated.

The commission chairman predicted his membership would gather this week "at the drawing board" to initiate a second moratorium attempt. Pratt said the first bylaw amendment passed so forcefully, he could foresee no difficulty repeating the process.

"I think the townspeople will understand," he added. "We'll just have to pick up where we left off."

Plans discussed for CCC barn

Bim Holt, a member of the commission, expressed reluctance to the plan as it was presented. "I think the purpose of these are for people to determine what the trees are without them having to look like a signboard," he said. "If they come little, then why don't they all come little? I would think they should all be the same size."

Dean told the commission the company that produces the nameplates makes them in varied sizes and styles, and that the appropriate size for each tree could be ordered. Chairman Jim Sandell suggested the Garden Club could order more samples in different sizes, and that the plan be approved so the nameplates could be ordered.Sandell then motioned that the commission dispense with a public hearing on the decision.

Holt opposed the motion and said, "I think there are enough people in town who would have strong feelings about the issue."

Vice Chairman Evans raised a question of the significance of the issue and if it merited a public hearing. "Getting into setting the sizes is meddling too much. If there are appropriate sizes for specific-sized trees when why not use those sizes?"

"I don't think we should decide right now that there has to be one size,"said Evans."I think we should use some judgment and discretion."

The plan will be discussed further at the commission's next meeting, on Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Cohasset will be part of parade

Sunday, Sept. 8, a gala parade will take place in Hingham, and Cohasset will be part of it.

Hingham's 350th anniversary, being celebrated this year, brings to mind the fact that the town now called Cohasset originally was part of the early Colonial town of Hingham.

First called "Bare Cove", the settlement now named Hingham was founded by 1635. Its earliest boundaries encompassed an area much larger than do those of the modern town, and its easternmost section was called Conahasset. The uplands and meadows of Conahasset stretched south and east from the first village, to meet the boundary of Scituate and the neighboring colony of New Plymouth. Not until the year 1670 were the upland areas of Conahasset divided up among the landowners of Hingham.

In Cohasset, a group of enthusiastic residents have planned and are building a float destined to appear in Hingham's parade. The exact motif of the Cohasset float remains shrouded in mystery, but will be revealed the day of the parade.

For the first century and a half of its existence, Cohasset was part of Hingham. Cohasset's presence in this year's 350th anniversary commemorates a long and friendly relationship between these two small but historic New England villages.

Chocolate candy hearing

Sewer Department Supervisor Manuel Salvador notified the selectmen's office that if the new proprietor of Sharon's Chocolate Factory intends to make the candy on the premises at 23 South Main Street, it will require a hearing before the sewer commission.

Because the manufacture of chocolate candies may have an adverse effect of the B.O.D. (Bio Oxygen Demand) loading of the sewer plant, the building's proposed change of use would have to be reviewed and approved by the commission.

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

THE FIRST RESORT

Many thousands of people "try" chiropractic as a "last resort." To their surprise, they find prompt, gratifying and lasting results. Many have come to believe that they could have avoided years of discomfort and pain if only they had used chiropractic treatments as a preventive measure. Chiropractic does not claim to cure all the ills of mankind. It does, however, offer an alternative approach to the methods of other healing sciences. The number of Americans who receive professional care from Doctors of Chiropractic increases each year. This growth is not sustained by false claims. It can be attributed to the word of mouth recommendations of grateful patients who make chiropractic care their avenue of first resort.

The science of chiropractic is being realized more and more as a natural approach to the cause of one's problems. Chiropractic applications go the source, not merely the symptom. Through a natural, knifeless and drugless approach techniques are applied that strive to return the total state of well-being that is so eagerly sought. She swims (a lot) because she likes it!

By Jane Lane

What type of person does it take to wake each morning at 4:30 a.m., travel into Cambridge and swim 12 miles, return home for school and complete another round trip by 9:30 p.m.?

Eleven year-old Jennifer Jackson has a simple and honest answer. This has been her schedule for the past four years, just because she likes it.

In her own words, "I like it. It's fun."

Jennifer is a pretty, petite girl with blonde hair streaked lighter from hours immersed in chlorine pools. She is a typical, thoughtful, shy adolescent, embarrassedto be discussing herself,even with her mother Susan at her side.

Within the kitchen of their Woodland Drive home, mother and daughter talked about the course both their lives have taken since Jennifer discovered competitive swimming.

"Actually," Susan recalled, "the first time Jennifer went into the pool was at the K of C pool when she jumped off the starting blocks because a teacher was holding popsicles at the other end. Jennifer thought that was the only way she could get the popsicle. She was 18 months at the time."

It wasn't until she was five that Jennifer decided to start swimming lessons, despite the fact that Mom had taught private lessons in Cohasset for many years. "She was always attached to my leg," Susan said. "Then one day, she decided to go into the pool."

There's been no stopping her since that time. She joined the Aquaducks swim club in Duxbury by the time she was seven. That afforded her a chance to swim year-round in the indoor pool. In winter, her mother would drive the youngster to the pool after school three times a week.

Individuals from that swim club competed at the New England meet, and there Jennifer was officially listed as the second best swimmer in New England for the eight years and under category. It was during that final meet that Jennifer was introduced to the enthusiasm and team spirit of a Cambridge club, Bernal's Gators.

Jennifer Jackson

Jennifer wanted to try out for this exclusive club and with her parents' blessing, she underwent a two-week grueling test of her natural talent and desire.

"I couldn't watch it," Susan said, remembering how Jennifer was required to perform endurance and technical tests of her abilities. She made the team. But that was only the beginning.

At eight years old, Jennifer was to practice five days a week with her teammates. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays she swam after school, and on Saturday and Sunday mornings. The evening practices were from 5:30 to 8 p.m., the Saturday schedule was from 7 to 10 a.m. and on Sundays from 7 to 11 a.m.

At first, Jennifer feared she would be lonely, away from her Cohasset friends, spending her spare time with strangers. But that was a problem she soon overcame.

Practicing with the same teammates over a span of four years has developed strong friendships outside her community. Jennifer, accustomed to scheduling most moments of each day, says she spends enough time with all her friends to remain close and in contact with them all.

She likes to swim a lot

Being a competitive swimmer, Jennifer explained, "is hard work. But I like it. I don't know why, but I really do." Having a lot of good friends on the team also helps, her mother added.

These friends include teammates from western Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and towns as far away as Andover. Girls and boys who travel that distance twice a day to the Harvard University pool.

Jennifer carpools with 'neighbors' in Duxbury, Scituate and Hanover. The bigger the carpool, the less frequently Susan must make the trek into and out of Cambridge with a station wagon filled with tired kids.

During the hectic months of practice, Susan awakens Jennifer at 4:30 a.m., grabs a cup of coffee, awakens Jennifer once again, gets dressed, awakens her daughter again, grabs another cup, and once more commands her sleepy daughter to get out of bed. "I have to do this even on days when she doesn't practice," Susan stated.

Fifteen times a month (not that much considering Jennifer practices five times a week), Susan drives the carpool. In darkness, they begin their journey each morning, and in night, they return from their second roundtrip of the day.

Jennifer, who does 'okay' in school according to her standards, and 'excellent' according to her more realistic Mom, completes her homework directly after school. If she needs more study time, there's always cramming inside the carpool.

"The kids have flashlights and often study, read or write on the way to and from the pool," Susan explained. "One parent said her daughter's teacher complained about the way she wrote her homework assignments, until the parent explained that the writing was always done while traveling in the car."

A brief summer break will conclude with a meet Sept. 15. The kids compete on weekends, staying in Cambridge for the entire two days to participate in long and short distance meets. Although most of the New England meets take place at the Harvard pool where times are now computerized, the team will also travel to New York, Kentucky and as far away as Florida for some competitions.

In the winter, at the height of training for the New England age group championships, Jennifer will swim about 20,000 yards a day and in summer, she will gradually work up to another 12 miles each day.

A modest girl, Jennifer weakly admitted she was named second overall in the New England meet for ten years and under, and placed third overall in the 12 and under category last year, and 17th in the country. In October, she will turn 12 and will therefore be on the older side of that same category, giving her a distinct edge on the competition.

"I expect she will place higher this year than last," her mother predicted.

As for Jennifer, she said, "I really don't know how long I'll keep doing this. It's fun and I like it. Sometimes I don't like the hours and it's a lot of hard work. But it's fun once you see your friends and practice with them."

Her one goal at this point is to qualify for the 1992 Olympic Games. By the summer tryouts, Jennifer will be 17, almost 18 at the time of the games. She expects to be at her prime by that time.

Her mother's goal, at least for the moment, is to keep her car in running condition. "We just bought the car last year and already I have put 22,000 miles on it. But if Jennifer's interested in it, I'll go along with it. If she fought against it, it wouldn't be worth it," said Susan.

School officials discuss education reform

By Valerie Kroon

The first regional meeting called to discuss the state's new Education Reform Bill left many area superintendents still puzzled about minimum salaries for new teachers and substitute teachers.

To reach a $18,000 minimum salary, official votes will be needed by school committees and a special town meeting.

The newly enacted state Public Improvement Act of 1985, popularly called the Education Reform Bill, was discussed at a special meeting for area school superintendents Aug. 28.

Hosted by the town of Duxbury and initiated by the Lighthouse Superintendents group, those in attendance had questions answered by Commissioner John Lawson of the state Board of Education, Gerald Indelicato, the governor's educational advisor, and state Rep. Frank Hynes, a former educator now serving Scituate and Marshfield in the state legislature.

Hynes opened the meeting, saying the local superintendents' meeting was the first area meeting on the new Chapter 188 bill. Calling the bill "a major act," Hynes said the legislature has been ironing out components of the Education Reform Act since the spring of 1983.

"You may be dissatisfied with some parts of the bill and you may be satisfied with some parts of the bill; unfortunately, that's the state of legislation," Hynes told the administrators in attendance.

Indelicato said the state Department of Education and governor's office responsibilities were "to give you the opportunity to do what's within the law (Ch. 188) without being cumbersome."

"The governor is going to do everything he can to make this thing work," Indelicato said. "The money's there. The opportunity's there. There are some dollars here to do some interesting things. The law's very clear. Responsibility sits at the local level with the state the helping hand."

Indelicato addressed concerns about the two-year level of funding, telling the group this was more a legislative issue rather than a final process.

"We cannot lay out four or five years of funding," he said. "We're working on a year-to-year budget. We don't know if the bill's going to be there in five years."

Indelicato did say, however, that there was a state commitment to continue support for funding Chapter 188.

"To dispel any rumors, in two years you're not going to be left holding the bag. The governor stands strong behind this law - and with some flexibility," he stated.

State Education Commissioner John Lawson said his office has been studying implementation of the law in areas of understanding the bill, ways to implement the law, and processes for accessing school districts to available funding.

Noting that quality education lies with the classroom teacher, Lawson said, "This bill essentially supports that teacher." He added the bill was "framed purposely to not get in the way of local superintendents."

Lawson said implementation of the bill would take a fairly long planning time, and that the first-targeted components would not be initiated until January or February of 1986. State-required uniform basic skills testing wouldn't begin until the 1986-87 school year, he said.

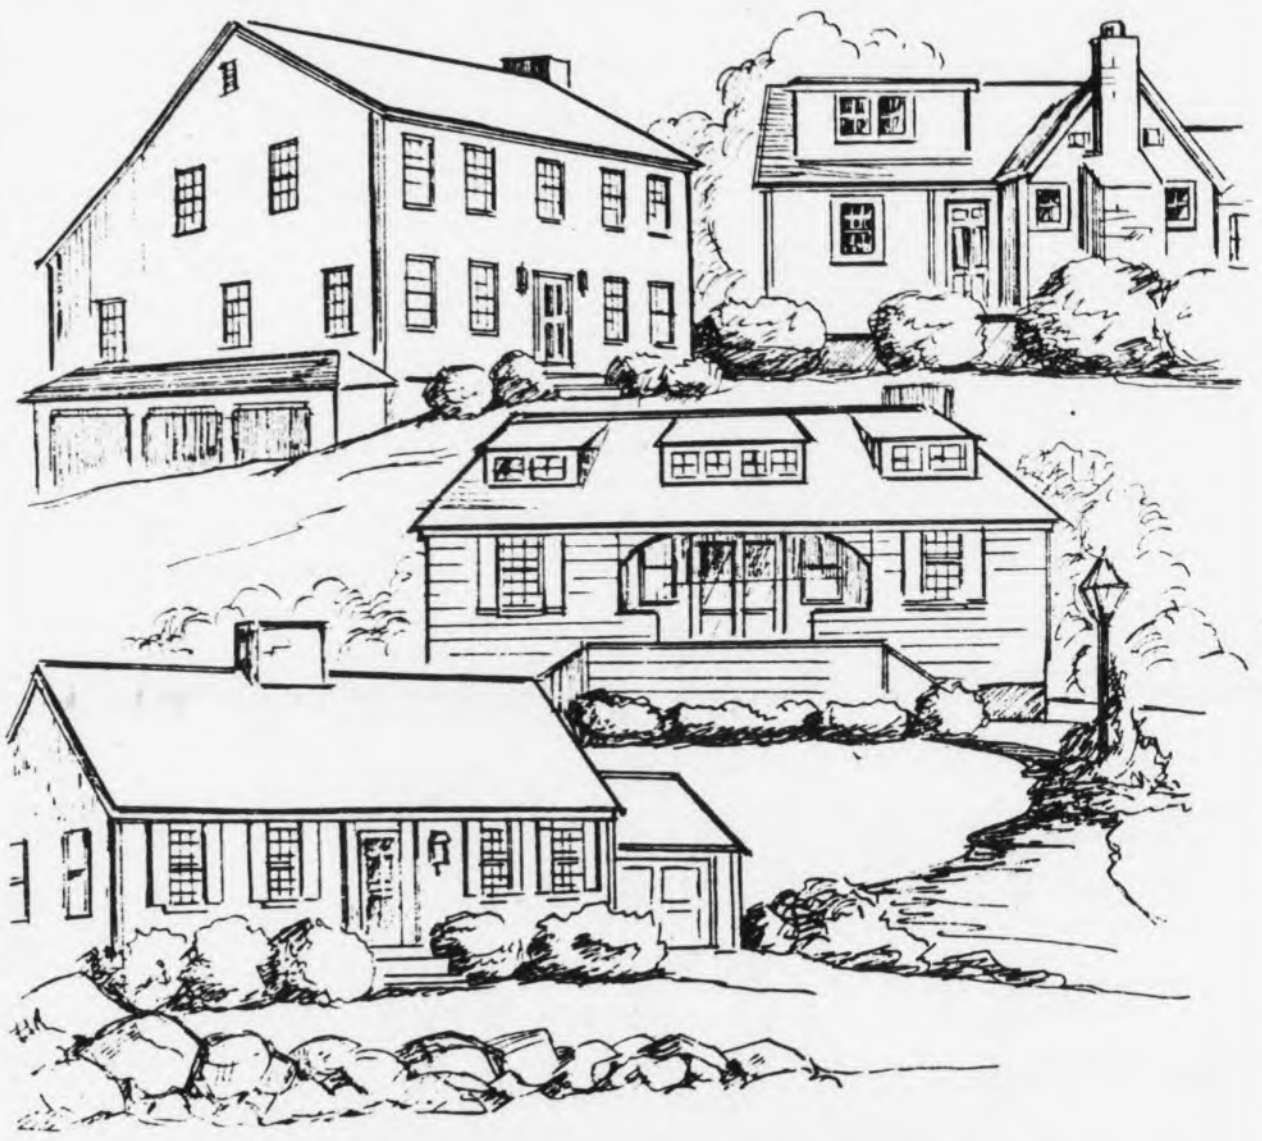
Lawson said he's formed two committees to help with implementation: an internal coordinating committee made up of educators and administrators, and an external coordinating committee with membership to be from the school committee, voter, and municipal level.

He also said he wants to set up an evaluation model. "I want to be able to say in two years, here are the results," he told the group.

Lawson and the state education board will hold five regional meetings in September to educate administrators on facets of the bill.

Of the four or five main grants school departments will be eligible for under the law, Lawson said checks would be forthcoming as soon as each individual school district's School Improvement Council is in place. The council is required under Chapter 188. First year funding is earmarked for grades K-6, and second year monies will go to K-12. Town or city council members will first vote to expend the money, and then the local school committee will have 30 days to respond to that vote.

Lawson stressed that no money expended under the bill can be used to reduce a school budget, that if a school committee's intent was to reduce a budget the city or town "won't get anything."



Steps a town must take to increase their teachers' minimum salary to $18,000 under the bill would first be a required vote of the school committee, Lawson said. Then, a copy of the vote would go to the mayor or board of selectmen's chairperson. In area towns, a special town meeting would need to be called, and the warrant item would require a two-thirds vote to pass.

After certification of the two votes to the state Department of Education, a check to cover the allowed grant amount would be sent, Lawson explained.

"We're talking a turnaround of two to three weeks," Lawson said. In answer to one question, Lawson said there were "no strings attached" to money received for increasing the minimum salaries of teachers.

"The problem has always been, the starting salary is too low," Indelicato said in response to concerns about getting "a ripple effect" from third-year teachers.

He said teachers' unions agreed it was most important "to bring up the bottom." But he added, "The bargaining process is up to you."

Lawson said a teacher would be eligible for the new higher minimum after being in place permanently for two years. This would include a teacher classified long-term substitute, Lawson said.

He was promptly told by one administrator that many towns would consider classifying all substitutes as short-term to skirt this requirement of the bill.

Lawson admitted this was probably an area to be ironed out, but that he would hope school committees would utilize this service-time requirement as an incentive to attract more qualified substitute candidates.

As for the bill's curriculum assessment skills training component, Lawson said plans call for this to begin with Grades 3, 7 and 11 next spring. Math, science and reading will be tested first. Test scores will be compared to national scores, and the results will be sent to communities, the legislature and the governor.

Lawson added that, although the test data will be made public, his board will attempt to discourage the media from making comparisons "which mean nothing."

For 1985-86, the schools will continue to use their own basic skills tests, but in the 1986-87 school year the state will purchase the tests, hold training sessions for administering them, and score and analyze the results.

"It's to give you some notion how well your school system is doing compared to other districts and across the nation," Lawson said of the skills testing requirement. "But we're not going to tell you what to do. We're hoping an under-achieving district will go over the results and then find out why. It's up to you to do what you think is right for your community," Lawson told the superintendents.

Lawson told the group that any district violating standards under Chapter 188 can have their Chapter 70 aid withheld under the law. He added that he hoped this step would be a last resort.

After the meeting, Dr. Daniel Bresnahan, Marshfield School Supt., said that Chapter 188 was "a very complex piece of legislation."

"Implementation will determine what it (Ch. 188) becomes," Bresnahan said. "Right now, what we're doing is figuring how to best organize for that implementation, and how to implement to improve the education of the kids. This bill is an opportunity. Now it's our job as educators to do the very best job we can for the kids of Marshfield."

Hingham School Supt. Lewis Ernst also feels the new Education Reform Bill is complex.

"The meeting demonstrated the bill is far more complex than even its most vocal critics thought," Ernst reported.

Ernst said he was surprised at Lawson's interpretation of the $18,000 minimum salary section of the bill in that it only applied to those teachers on the salary schedule last year.

"I thought the bill was for lifting up the salaries of new teachers," Ernst said.

Ernst also said he'd hoped to get strong guidelines at the meeting, but that many questions remained unanswered.

"I had hoped many questions about major pieces of the legislation would be answered. I did not think they were. But I've been assured these questions will be answered Sept. 6 when the state Board of Education holds it first regional meeting."

Recreation news

The Cohasset Recreation Department will begin a new session or Aerobic Exercise Classes Tuesday and Thursday mornings and evenings, beginning Tuesday, Sept. 10 and Thursday, Sept. 12.

Morning classes will be held from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday. Evening classes will be held from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. the same days.

The fee for the eight week program is $15 for one class or $25 for two classes.

Ms. Margret Watson, well known instructor on the South Shore will be instructing. All classes will be held in the Town Hall Auditorium. Checks for fee payment may be brought to your first class, and should be made payable to the 'Town of Cohasset.'

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

A WORD ON SELF-HELP

Are you tempted to use a do-it-yourself manual of law? Check the copyright date then add at least one year. That is how outdated the book is. Even a book copyrighted the year before may have been submitted to the publisher a year or more before that. Good attorneys, however, keep their knowledge of rapidly changing laws up-to-date. Consider as well that if the authors of such manuals made a thorough attempt to present everything that should be known to handle a particular legal matter, the book would be prohibitively thick. Have you ever wondered why lawyers have so many thick books? Consider how it is possible for a single self-help volume to thoroughly cover all the areas of law that it claims to do.

Remember that your legal rights are only as good as your ability to protect them and that only a trained attorney can represent your best interests. Read this column weekly for more information on you and the law. In the meantime if you are in need of legal advice of any sort please call LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE. My office is located at 202 Mill Wharf Plaza, P.O. Box 376, Scituate, MA 02066, 545-6660. I am available daily by appt.

☐ Tryouts for the Cohasset Club's fall production of Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Sunday, September 8 from 2 to 5 p.m. and Tuesday, September 10 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Production dates are November 15, 16, 22 and 23. Helen Ketcham, Director.

This is the tale of a salesman whose once happy world is crashing upon him in little pieces. He is a salesman who, in his confident youth, was "riding on a smile and a shoeshine". Home he comes one night, the once debonair big-talker, now haunted by failure on the threshold of old age. His sons are ne-er-do-wells, and it was Willy himself who made them so. He was never as good a salesman as he pretended, a defeated old drummer coming to the dead end of his career. A terrible documentation has been leavened with bursts of wild humor and more than one moment of touching grandeur.

The cast consists of eight men and five women. The main characters are Willie Loman, a man in an emotional tailspin. Simply: at the end of his tether, his life. Linda Loman, a woman of quiet, subtle strentgh. Fiercely protective of her husband, Willy. Biff, their son, has knocked around for years. Is worn, angry, intense, sensitive. Guilt and his own yearnings war within him. Happy, two years younger than his brother, Biff. More successful, cocky, obstensibly happy with himself and his life, but is actually lost.

☐ Although it was certainly cold this week it s still hard to believe that it is time to start thinking Village Fair already! Well, the gals are hard at work and would love some help . . . with workshops in progress, even if you don't think you are talented, there is a need for many different materials. Perhaps a walk through the woods and the pinecone crop brought to the boutique table. For more ideas and information call Carol Sandblom at 383-1812 or Gail Bell at 383-9837.

☐ From all that have been tested (tasted that is), Bobbie Barrow's tomatoes win the blue ribbon. Outstanding in every way, he should grow enough to market them next year!

☐ Congratulations go out to Reza and Susan Tehranian on the birth of their son, born August 21.

☐ Jack Silvia was the envy of many during the recent hot spell! He was in a hammock with the harbor breezes cooling him off, happy as could be.

☐ This week marks the "official" end of summer. School starts and the South Shore Music Circus closes for another season. Next think fall sports. . .

☐ Rick Grassis has moved into his new home, and we wish him much happiness.

☐ Don't forget to register your soccer player this Saturday. Grades K-9 registration will be held on Saturday morning at 9 (until 10:30) at the Town Hall, with the fee of $6. The league (sponsored again by the Recreation Comm.) will begin on Sept. 21.

☐ The Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy will be holding its first anniversary celebration on Sunday, Sept. 8 at 1:30 p.m. To be held at its Rt. 3A site, the ceremony will include a traditional Chinese Lion Dance as well as kung fu demonstrations by the students. The public is invited, and more information may be obtained by calling 383-6822.

☐ Polly Doggett was one of more than 20,000 adults that recently went to the Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. The program is sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints and is open to all interested men and women. A curriculum of over 1000 subjects to select from keeps the student busy all day long . . . also had plenty of exercise hiking to and from the classes. For Mrs. Doggett it also meant visiting with family members that lived near by.

☐ The date of the Jimmy Fund Tournament that was reported about recently was wrong. It is to be held on Monday Sept. 23, so mark that date and get in touch with one of the committee members for an application.

☐ Here's to all of you Freshmen sitting in your dorm reading the Mariner for the first time away from home . . . if you have news, send it to us! If you have suggestions do the same. And, good luck in your new endeavors, study hard and have a grand time.

☐ The end of summer is always sad, but there are two or three things to look forward to in the Fall, guaranteed to make you happy . . . think of the smell of bread baking in the oven (the same oven you wouldn't light three weeks ago, it was so hot), or the thrill of winning the game, or the first wood fire in the fireplace . . . .

☐ Bon Voyage to the DeVos as they leave for their year in Europe. They certainly will have many stories when they return next year!

☐ Happy Birthday Norman.

☐ Please call or mail your news to me, this "Around Town" cannot be as interesting to you without your news in it too!

Art Center fall schedule

A complete schedule of fall classes including some old favorites and a few new ones is being offered by the South Shore Art Center for the fall '85 session.

Kicking off the fall semester is a one-session workshop How to Plan and Plant a Japanese Garden led by Shinichiro Abe on Tuesday, September 10 at 8 p.m. Abe comes to the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset at just the right season to help gardeners lay their plans and begin planting their Japanese gardens. This workshop as well as all Center classes and workshops require advanced registration.

A fall open house Sunday, September 22 from 4 to 6 p.m. will allow visitors an opportunity to meet instructors, learn about the course offerings and enroll in classes. The fall semester officially gets underway September 30 and runs through November 23.

Returning to the fall lineup of classes is a course for people who can't draw a straight line. Meeting Wednesdays, October 2 from 12:30 to 3 p.m. the course is designed for people who thought they could never learn to draw. It also offers students a chance to relax and enjoy drawing as a new way of seeing. Instructor Albert Abany will teach line, form, proportion, perspective and structure.

Abany will also teach oil and acrylic painting on Wednesdays from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Designed as a creative painting course for the beginner as well as the more advanced student, it offers the opportunity to explore a personal visual and color vocabulary based on sound painting practice.

Three David Tandy courses, Evening Watercolor, Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting are on the fall schedule. Evening Watercolor meets Wednesdays, beginning Oct. 2, from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m.; and Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting both meet Thursdays, beginning October 3 from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m.

Phyllis Murphy Szerejko will teach a new workshop, Composition through Collage, to acquaint the non-painter with the elements of composition in a manner that is not threatening and to aid the painter in refining the compositional skills. This course meets Mondays, beginning Sept. 30 from 3:30 to 6 p.m.

Szerejko will also teach Creative Anatomy for the student who wants a better understanding of the human form. The course begins with the study of the skeletal system and progresses to the form and function of the muscles and their interdependence. This class also meets Mondays from 7 to 10 p.m.

Portrait painting classes will be taught by Katherine Smit, Basic Portrait on Mondays from noon to 2:30 p.m.; by Constance Flavell Pratt, Pastel Portrait for Advanced Painters, Tuesdays, 9 a.m. to noon; and by Judeth Van Hamm Wiers, Portrait Painting for all levels, Tuesdays, 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Two courses are being offered through the design department. Bill Bell will teach Calligraphy Wednesdays from 7:30 to 10 p.m. and Louise Kalish will teach Creative Color and Design on Fridays, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Bell will emphasize individual stroke exercises in his calligraphy course.

Kalish's Update Your Imagery is designed to explore with the interaction of color. Composition and design will be emphasized and developed in both the abstract and the realistic.

Virginia Avery's Watercolor for all levels of ability will meet on Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon and Eleanor Avakian's Oriental Brush Techniques will meet on Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The Photography department offers two Paul Fortin courses, Photography for Beginners on Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and Improve Your Photographs on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. John Droege's Beginning Darkroom meets Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. A special Photo Field Trip led by John Goldie is scheduled for Saturday October 19 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with a critique followup Saturday, October 26 from noon to 2 p.m.

In addition to regular class offerings are many opportunities for travel—to New York for the Toulouse Lautrec exhibit, to Hawaii for painting in a paradise with Harriet Zabusky-Zand, and to the British Virgin Islands for painting with Virginia Avery. The Center also offers two critique sessions, one on Saturday November 2 with Rosalind Farbush and the other, Saturday, November 23, with Bety Kohlberg.

For more information on these programs and courses and the offerings in the young artist department, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-0548.

A serious setback

Most town officials were informed last week that an important article passed at town meeting was rejected by the state. Article 43, which contained an amendment to the zoning bylaw, signaled the first step Cohasset has taken to prohibit by law, the invasion of our water supply territory.

The state's denial of our bylaw, based purely on the inadequate procedural steps taken before the town meeting vote is a "disheartening" step backward. Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt used that word to describe his emotions upon learning this week of the article's defeat.

We couldn't agree more.

The article was rejected by the state because the plan delineating the Aaron River Dam and Lily Pond watershed prepared by SEA Consultants, was not available for public review within the statutory time frame. It arrived at the town clerk's and the planning board's office only a few days prior to town meeting.

This is unfortunate, to say the least. Town officials suspected the state might defeat the article, knowing that every procedural step was not followed in the precise manner.

But developing this complicated piece of legislation before the April town meeting was a large task, and we can understand confusion and delay.

We're not so understanding of the fact that the water commissioners, authors of the proposed bylaw, were not notified of the state's decision to reject the article until the press phoned for a reaction. Town clerk, selectmen, the building inspector, and probably everyone else within town hall knew of the decision.

But the water commission chairman, whose office is located in the other end of town, was not informed until almost one week later, and then by members of the media.

Perhaps the long holiday weekend prevented the proper channels of communication. It looks to us as if the commission was inadvertently overlooked, and that is regrettable.Every day is precious now as the commission must start anew their attempts to initiate a watershed protection bylaw.

The reason for the rush? Because as we write this, developers are planning to construct along that precious land which abuts our water supply. As Commissioner Pratt said, "profit-minded individuals" with little concern for the future of this town, are busy working out plans to build upon the land adjacent to Aaron River and the reservoir.

Why, the very day the town was notified of the state's decision, one developer entered the building inspector's office and returned, armed with two building permits. Building Inspector Edward Poskus hadn't even heard the news when this contractor was knocking at his door.

He expected developers would be eager to grab some of this rich land if the bylaw was voided, but he never expected the rush would begin within hours. "There must be a pipeline from town hall to some of these developers," he stated with just a hint of sarcasm.

We will be eager to see the bylaw enacted by town meeting once again. There are some contractors out there, eager to see substantial profits for themselves and ignoring the damning effect it may have to the future of our town.

Dungeons and Dragons on Highway

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon looked at me suspiciously. "It says here," he said looking up from Sunday's Boston Globe, "that Boston's drivers are among the worst in the world. Does this include people from suburbs who drive to Boston?"

I sighed. "I read that article too," I told him, "and the author just doesn't understand. Driving in Boston requires a spirit of adventure. It's a little like ' Dungeons and Dragons. ' You have to outwit your opponent or you lose."

"Never mind outwitting Dragons," he told me. "It says here that Boston drivers never stop for red lights or red and yellow lights. But they do stop for green lights, because they know the drivers coming at them from a perpendicular direction will run the red lights they have. Is that true?"

"Sort of," I admitted. "Although the object is to keep your opponent guessing. Sometimes a driver will actually stop at a red light, because he knows it will confuse the driver behind him. I've even known a driver to stop and let a lady with a baby carriage cross the street. Naturally, no one was expecting such an unprecedented action, and it tied traffic up for at least a mile in every direction."

The Dragon shook his head. "That's the craziest thing I've ever heard in my entire life."

I shrugged. "I didn't say it was sane. I just said it's the way the game is played.

"Let me give you another example. You know I drive a "humongous" van. I'm terribly conscious of what it could do to a small car, so I always try to leave a reasonable distance between me and the car ahead of me. That way, if there's an emergency, I'll be able to stop without damaging the other vehicle or injuring my passengers' spinal cords.

"But the gap never stays empty. Little pygmy cars keep moving into the space. It's absolutely impossible to leave a safe distance between vehicles."

"Can't you drop back every time someone moves in?" he asked.

"If I did," I informed him, "I'd wind up on the Cape instead of in Boston."

"Don't the police do anything about it?" he wondered.

"They try," I admitted. "But if you want to pull someone over in Boston, where do you pull him over to? Cars are already double and triple parked. If you pull someone over, you create a traffic jam of historic proportions."

"Then why," he asked, "don't the police tow the double and triple parked vehicles away?"

"Honey," I told him, "I'm generally a mild-mannered person. But if I'm trying to drive through Boston at rush hour, and I have to wait while tow trucks deal with illegally parked vehicles, I can't be responsible for my actions.

"As a matter of fact," I added, "there are other Boston drivers with much shorter fuses than I have, and the results aren't always pretty. One day we saw a man take a golf club out of his car and smash another driver's windshield. Because he was double parked."

I sighed. "I never even think to bring golf clubs with me."

The Dragon shook his head. "Maybe I should reassess my previous judgment. I thought it was terrible the day you came home with a dent in the back of your van, and you said the safety officer, the police officer who goes around to high schools and tells kids how to avoid accidents, rear-ended you."

"You should reassess," I agreed. "Actually, denting my van was a clever ploy on the part of the safety officer .

"He undoubtedly knew that most Boston drivers look on an undented vehicular surface as a challenge. By denting it for me, in a manner that didn't hurt anyone, he was protecting me from all the ' Dungeons and Dragons ' players on the highway. He probably has a quota of vehicles he has to gently dent each day."

"That," the Dragon said firmly, "is the craziest thing you've said so far. But at least I know what I can get you for Christmas."

"Emeralds?" I asked hopefully. "A star sapphire?"

He shook his head. "Your own set of golf clubs."

A nasty shock?

To the Editor:

How amusing that Sewer Commission DeSantis questions if the state really wants to clean up the waters of Cohasset, when much of the support for his antics comes from residents who are hoping to delay any actions.

Perhaps they have delayed for a few years the construction of our own treatment plant, but that will come in time - and at far greater cost. Meanwhile, the state is willing to go along with the Hull connection, foolish as it is, because it is at least a temporary fix. But the state properly insists that we design our collection system and accept the funding limitations by the same rules that apply to everybody else. The rules we have been told about repeatedly.

The questions asked by DEQE result from our non- cooperation. Defiance may seem to be heroic to other residents, but to me it is costly, counterproductive and setting us up for a nasty shock in the court.

Registration for fall CCC classes

Autumn registration for courses at the Cohasset Community Center will be held from Sept. 9 to Sept. 20.

The Community Center provides an extensive range of classes and workshops for all ages both after school, in the evening and on Saturday mornings.

The very popular gymnastics program includes a Tumble Tot program for boys and girls age three to five; a beginner program for boys and girls ages five to 14.; intermediate classes; rhythmic (ribbon) gymnastics and even a program for mothers and tots ages 13 to 35 months called "Mom and me."

The Dance program will be offering several different classes for various age groups. The Creative Movement class (ages three to five) will be a fun opportunity for young children to explore the fundamentals of movement. The class will consist of improvisations, games and basic dance steps taught in a non-competitive environment. The Creative Dance -Intro. Ballet course (ages five to seven) will be similar to the Creative Movement class but will be geared to an older child. Beginning ballet including the basic positions and some barre and centre work is also part of this course. Introduction to Ballet (ages eight to 12) will teach the student the fundamentals of ballet including the basic positions and terminology, barre and adagio. This class will be helpful for the beginner who wants to develop solid technique for future dance training. Jazz Dance (ages 11 and up) will be a fast-paced, fun introduction to jazz dance for both beginner and those with some dance training. The class will begin with floor work and each week will work on a combination that will develop into a full dance routine by the end of the session.

Besides gymnastics and dance the Center provides an extensive after school program which includes preparation classes for both SAT's and Achievement tests; Bowling (for all age groups); Introduction to Chess, a workshop in making Gingerbread Houses and a 4H babysitting training course. The babysitting course is being offered to prepare and train potential babysitters in the Cohasset Community. This course will give participants a better understanding of the safety and care of children. Course will include Safety and Common Sense, Infant Care and First Aid, Nutrition, Entertaining Young Children and Child Development. Graduation will be held at 7 p.m. at the Center Nov. 18. Each boy or girl completing the course will be presented with a babysitter indentificaiton card and certificate stating that he or she has participated in the course.

The Adult Program includes several cookng workshops which you won't want to miss. Anna Abbruzzese will share with you various mussel recipes including sauces, Hor D'ouevres and main dishes; Lot Bates will be running a workshop on Boston Brown Bread/Parker House rolls which will include recipes and samples to take home; Donna Cloherty will be holding two workshops to teach you how to create a Gingerbread house; Laura Atherton will finally divulge to all the secret of her Pepper Jelly in her workshop; and Anna Abbruzzese and Carol Walls will show you why nothing can compare to the taste of fresh homemade Calzone.

After enjoying all these treats you can then sign up for a Gentle Exercise program designed for those who have not exercised for a long time and wish to get in shape; or take a Yoga class which will be taught on both beginner and intermediate levels.

Several craft programs will also be offered including a Sweater Sampler Workshop to help revolutionize your sweater knitting; a Crochet Workshop for those interested in learning basic crocheting; and three different Basket Workshops including an egg basket; a cheese curd basket; or a utility basket.

Two new programs added this year include Basic Estate Planning and Pet Parenting. Charles Olney, a tax attorney will present a one night workshop to discuss Estate planning strategies in light of the recent tax law changes, including the use of marital deductions, unified credit planning, exploring charitable giving opportunities, methods of "freezing" the estate and use of the Qualified Interest Property Trust.

Donna Cloherty will present a series of three "hands-on" workshops for pet lovers of all ages. Her workshops are intended to teach you all the tricks for keeping birds, fish and small pets healthy and happy. For her workshop on birds she will bring in her cockatiel family which she bred in her own bird cage and trained to perch and sing. She will also discuss parakeets, finches and canaries. Her small aquarium workshop will show you how to set up a small aquarium and how to choose the right fish, turtles or chameleons. And finally, her workshop on small pets including hamsters, guinea pigs, gerbils and mice will help you to learn which furry friend can be cuddled and which will give you the most pleasure.

For these and other workshops please register at the Community Center, 3 N. Main St. from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday. The Center telephone number is 383-0000. Call for further information, but hurry. Classes begin the week of Sept. 23.

Showing off the agility and balance of brother Colin is Quinn Kelly and her equally proud mother, Donna.

Commissioner Jackson responds to editorial

Letters

To the Editor:

I write to convey the Revenue Department's appreciation for the Mariner's excellent coverage of the recent seizure of the Strawberry Parfait for nonpayment of state taxes. Along with our thanks, though, some clarification is needed on some points raised in the related editorial. In brief, it accused us of attacking a small business for vainglorious media purposes.

The editorial itself noted that we were right to close down the business. And the proprietor himself was good enough to apologize and to admit he had ample warning of the taxes being due, even the fact that a seizure was imminent. His one defense: the press of the paperwork on top of all the other concerns of the small entrepreneur.

We in the Revenue Department certainly sympathize with the bookkeeping demands on small business operators. In the past filing season we introduced a simpler and shorter tax form to help them in meeting their corporate tax obligations.

It should be noted, however, that the taxes for which the seizure took place were not taxes on profits—as the editor put it "extra money pushed aside for taxes." The Cohasset seizure involved what we call "trustee taxes." That's meals and wage withholding money collected from unsuspecting customers and honest employees but then not turned in to the state. The owner doesn't "pay" these taxes; he simply collects them as "trustee" for the state.

In pursuing delinquents and evaders, we pursue businesses of all sizes, individuals of every income level. For instance, our out-of-state auditors last year found 14 Fortune or Forbes 500 companies or their affiliates doing business in Massachusetts but not filing or paying state taxes. They will be pursued until those taxes are paid. In our seizure efforts we have taken expensive yachts, private planes, fancy cars, pharmacies, cement and fence companies, bars and lounges, auto repair outfits, real estate firms, manufacturing and construction companies, and entire restaurant chains. We don't "pick" on small business, but by the same token small size is not, and should not be, an insurance policy against vigorous tax law enforcement.

We make no bones about the fact that we want publicity about seizures—for the deterrent effect that coverage has on other delinquents. We are convinced that the growing public awareness of our seizure, audit and criminal investigations program contributed substantially to our continuing increase in voluntary compliance. That has now accounted for at least $500 million in added tax collections over the past two years.

Finally, a word about our methods of alerting newspapers, something which also bothered the editor. We are prohibited from identifying in advance the name of the taxpayer whose property is being seized. In the past we generally notified the press only after the seizure had taken place. In a number of cases, reporters and editors complained that lack of advance notice prevented them from getting to the scene for interview and pictures with our agents, which they preferred to talking to our Communications Office in Boston. It was to meet that objection and to accommodate the legitimate needs of the Fourth Estate, without violating the rights of individual taxpayers, that we adopted the policy of giving papers an alert, with approximate time and general location of the planned seizure. Most newsmen indicate they appreciate the service.

We hope it won't be necessary to do another seizure in Cohasset. But if it is, we will respect the Mariner's choice to be informed only after the fact.

In any event, I want to thank the Mariner again for the thorough news report—and for giving us the opportunity to respond to your editorial. No, we weren't "picking" on anyone, and, yes, we do audit and seize and refer for criminal prosecution the "big boys" as well as the little boys. We are in the business of protecting honest taxpayers. That requires a balanced program of vigorous enforcement that doesn't exempt any group or region and a program of equally vigorous customer service. We're trying our best to provide for both.

Corrections to League story

To the Editor:

We are always pleased to see the worthwhile activities of the Social Service League brought to the attention of your readers. However, an article in your Aug. 22 issue contained several errors that definitely need correcting.

At no time during our interview with reporter Jim Whelan did we state that underage alcohol consumption in Cohasset has caused a few recent deaths. We are not in any position to make such a statement or judgment and have no knowledge whatever that this was in any way a contributing factor or what the cause might have been for these tragedies.

Our educational program "Chemically Free," to be presented in October, will be open to all junior and senior high school students and parents of children in every age group to raise their awareness of alcohol and drug issues.

Regarding our monthly distribution of government surplus cheese and butter, we follow federal guidelines in determining who is financially eligible to receive the food. Recipients are not usually out of work and certainly have a source of income. However, because of family circumstances, some people find they do qualify under the broad guidelines which are published with each distribution notification.

Your paper is a terrific way for our agency to reach Cohasset residents regarding our programs, and we appreciate the space you so willingly give us.

Virginia Riley, president
Social Service League of Cohasset

THE BEST OF ENGLAND COMES TO NEW ENGLAND

A preview of CHS fall sports

By Lisa Shumaker

Varsity Girls' Soccer

When most of us have been sleeping soundly this past week, the girls' soccer team has been hard at work pounding the pavement and getting in shape for the tough season that lies ahead of them. Coach Kennan Startzell has been very happy with the way in which these 42 girls have been pushing themselves to excel and improve during double sessions.

After losing about 12 seniors last year, Cohasset must regroup this season and build an entirely new team. This means many girls with very little varsity experience will be expected to play like veterans. However, Startzell feels that although this might be a "building year" for his team, their record will be much better than what one might expect.

Startzell has been very impressed with the way in which Susan Riley and Melissa Shea have taken over the leadership roles which were left open after last year. Startzell believes that these girls will be very important assets to the team both on and off the field. Startzell also pointed out the strength of Karin Anglin and Caitlin Staunton up front. The coach is expecting many goals from these players. Startzell is expecting an inconsistent season in which the girls will be capable of beating anyone on one day and also capable of being beaten by anyone on another. However, Startzell is not ruling out the possiblity that the girls may come along and surprise everyone, including himself.

Cohasset opens their season Wednesday, Sept. 11 in East Bridgewater. East Bridgewater has always been a physical team and should bequitea challenge for the Skippers.

Varsity Boys' Soccer

Sixty eager boys showed up last Monday for the dreaded soccer double sessions. Well, by now they may not be so eager (there's probably not even sixty anymore) but according to varsity coach Jon Anderson, they have been impressive. Anderson boasts that these soccer hopefuls have been working harder and with more enthusiasm than in any other year since he has been coaching.

Anderson feels strongly that his team's hard work will undoubtedly pay off. With 13 experienced seniors, Anderson can almost promise Cohasset will either tie or most likely improve over last year's record.

Anderson cited Kevin Dunn as playing well thus far. The team will be looking to Kevin a lot this season. Other leaders on the team will be captains Bobby Shultz, Mark Crough, and Chris Kirkendal.

The boys begin their season Tuesday, Sept. 10. Cohasset will be taking on East Bridgewater at home. The boys hope to have a strong showing and will try to keep their winning tradition going.

Varsity Football

One cannot ride through Cohasset without noticing some rather strange haircuts running around. Although the mothers of Cohasset might not be too happy with their sons' recent trip to the barber, varsity football coach Phil Pisano is pleased with his team's strong display of spirit. Pisano feels this enthusiasm can only spark his team onto a winning season.

In the first week of practice the team worked on improving its offense, which did make great strides in a short time. Pisano said the boys have not only been working hard, but also enjoying what they are doing.

The team will be looking to captains Bobby Corkery, John Hall and Floyd Hardwick for leadership. Pisano applauded his team's choice of captains and felt these three were perfect for the job.

In a scrimmage against Old Rochester last Saturday, Pisano was impressed with the efforts of Bobby Durkin, Floyd Hardwick, Philip Mahoney, and quarterback Sean Corkery. Pisano also pointed out that his offensive line, consisting of Jeff Soltesz, Patrick O'Conner, Jamie Roy, Liam Stanford, and Jeff Lloyd, played well. On defense, Jeff Hartwell, Greg Ferreira and Jeff Lydon stood out.

Pisano predicts his team will be very competitive and most likely have a winning season as long as they avoid injuries.

The boys kickoff their season Saturday, Sept. 21 with Norwell. Norwell has always been tough in the past, but Cohasset is capable of breaking their winning tradition.

Pisano urges the people of Cohasset to come watch his team this year. He promises some exciting football for all the fans.

Residents volunteer 900 hours for national parks

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Ten days of laboring in the great outdoors isn't the average American's idea of a vacation.

But 230 folks this summer took time off to work outside, through the American Hiking Society's Vacations Program.

They became trail building and maintenance crews at 21 national parks and forests.

Twelve of these robust volunteers spent July 28 through Aug. 9 at what they considered to be a particularly exotic wildlife sanctuary, Boston Harbor Islands State Park. The park's headquarters is located in Building 45 of the Hingham Shipyard.

The Volunteer Vacations Program Director Kay Beebe of Scituate said the 12 persons came from the Boston suburbs, New York state, the Midwest and Kentucky.

She said the volunteers had disparate ages and vocations, but were all experienced backpackers who were familiar with wilderness camping and capable of hard labor.

Beebe said she visited them at their base camp on Bumpkin Island and at their work sites on that island, as well as on Gallops, Lovells, Calf, Peddocks and Great Brewster.

She watched them soak in the quiet, the pungent smell of decaying seaweed, the calls of soaring birds, and the sparkles of falling stars.

The volunteers told Beebe that being on the islands gave them tremendous pleasure. In return, they provided the park with three campsites on Great Brewster, two outhouses on Peddocks, one outhouse on Gallops and a reconstructed trail on Calf.

The volunteers also did extensive work on Bumpkin which included widening a trail, starting a group camping area and building two sets of stairs down to the beach.

They volunteered about 900 hours of work. "If they had been paid $6.50 per hour for their eight-hour days, they would have earned a total of about $5,800. For them, it is a very inexpensive and rewarding way to see a beautiful part of the country," she said.

"The trips are usually ten days long. You pay a tax deductible $25 registration fee and your travel expenses. The food we provide is very good. Your lodgings are usually carried on your back."

She added that this was the second summer volunteers had come to the islands and that the American Hiking Society had been the sole provider of food. "It cost us $500 for the 10 days."

Kay Beebe & Brian Shanahan

The volunteers were hosted by the Department of Environmental Management's Division of Forests Parks. Their work was managed by Boston Harbor Islands State Park Senior Supervisor Brian Shanahan.

Shanahan said of the volunteers: "They worked their tails off. The minute I gave them a job, they would have it finished. They are great people, easy to work with. Next year, I would like to have twice as many.

"And next year, we will improve our support. We will find a way to provide them with food."

Beebe, who founded the volunteer program in 1979, received a Gulf Oil Conservation Award on May 23, 1985 for her efforts to safeguard wildlife and preserve the natural environment.

Kathleen MacMahon, 25, outdoor education instructor from Needham, Mass.: "The past two weeks have certainly flown by. I have had a great time getting to know these islands better. Seeing a new group of people get excited about these surroundings has given me a deeper appreciation for this beautiful park...It has been a good learning experience, and I will fully appreciate every latrine that I use from now on."

She and 22 other environmentalists were awarded $1,000 each and bronze plagues at a ceremony in Washington, D.C. The 1986 award program will be sponsored by the Chevron Corporation, which acquired Gulf.

Beebeexplained,"It all started in 1978. I was flipping through 'Backpacker Magazine' and read an ad for volunteer vacations set up by the National Hiking and Ski Trail Association based in Colorado. I had thought I would take my two sons on a trip to Wyoming, before they left for college. I ended up going alone. The trip was wonderful."

When the association folded, Beebe decided to start up a similar program with the American Hiking Society. In her first season, she organized two teams at sites in Wyoming and Montana. This summer, she sent 21 teams to 21 sites throughout the country.

"I feel very good about the fact that over one third of the volunteers are past alumni of the program and keep coming back each year," she said.

"I have found directing the program to be a remarkable experience. I have friends from all over the country and of all ages."

She said persons interested in learning more about the program may send a self-addressed, stamped, #10 envelope to: AHS Volunteer Vacations, P.O. Box 86, No. Scituate, Ma. 02060.

Cohasset business news . . .

Doris M. Johnson is editor of the new South Shore Business Journal to be launched Oct. 1 by David S. Cutler, owner of Mariner Newspapers of Marshfield.

Johnson comes to the Mariner from The Patriot Ledger of Quincy. During her 17 year career with that daily newspaper, Johnson handled a variety of assignments, from courthouses and county commissions to the State House and Quincy City Hall, winning national as well as local awards for her coverage.

For the past four years, Johnson has been a business reporter for the Ledger. Her responsibilities included editing the weekly real estate pages.

Prior to her Ledger affiliation, Johnson worked for several other daily and weekly newspapers in southeastern Massachusetts, In fact, her first newspaper job was as a Milton High School sophomore, writing to a gossip column for teenage readers of the Milton Transcript.

Johnson was born in Quincy. Although she spent a handful of years living as far away as Florida and Guam, she has always returned to the South Shore and now lives in Kingston.

In addition to her newspaper reporting and varied freelance writing, Johnson is known to many on the South Shore for her other activities. She has long been involved in Kingston historical affairs, serving the Jones River Village Historical Society in several offices including president. She was commissioned by the town to write its first booklength history—a 433-page volume, "Major Bradford's Town: A History of Kingston, 1726-1976."

Johnson is an avid small-boat sailor, ever since her first venture as a teenager aboard a 15-foot Snipe in Quincy Bay. Now she cruises the coastline in her 20-foot Duxbury-built gaff-rigged catboat and edits the quarterly 54-page Catboat Association Bulletin, read by nearly 1,500 members of that worldwide organization.

Another avocation, outside the sphere of writing, is Johnson's long-time involvement with music. She has been a member of community choral groups and church choirs since childhood as both singer and accompanist. She is known to many South Shore congregations as a substitute organist and for six years served as organist-choir director at Trinity Episcopal Church in Marshfield Hills.

Minority business fair

Minority business firms in the Cohasset area will have an opportunity to talk business with state purchasing agents at a Spirit of Massachusetts Procurement Fair to be held on Sept. 12 at the Saltonstall State Office Building in Government Center, Boston, from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

The fair, sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce State Office of Minority Business Assistance (SOMBA) and the Executive Office for Administration and Finance, will bring minority business representatives together with 75 buyers from various state agencies.

In accordance with Gov. Dukakis' Executive Order 237, the state targets five percent of its contracts for goods and services and 10 percent of construction for minority enterprises. State purchasing agents will provide minority business representatives at the fair with lists of goods and services they expect to buy in the next fiscal year.

SOMBA certifies minority businesses to increase their access to public markets. To become certified, a business must be at least 51 percent minority owned and controlled. Workshops on the SOMBA certification program will be held during the fair.

For information call Joyce Foster, State Office of Minority Business Assistance, 617-727-8692, or Cathy Mulrow, Administration and Finance, 617-722-2040.

GRI graduate

Ann Courtney of Gallery 360 Cohasset has earned the nationally recognized GRI (Graduate Realtors Institute) designation from the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, according to Tom Hamilton principal of the Cohasset office.

The GRI designation signifies 90 hours of advanced in-class real estate education. Realtors who have passed the GRI examinations are recognized as having attained one of the highest professional levels in residential real estate.

Ms. Courtney is a graduate of Framingham State College and was formerly an assistant to the art director of a major New York publishing company and worked as an assistant buyer for a Boston-based department store. She was associated with the Rutledge Gallery of Homes in Wellesley before joining the Gallery 360 Cohasset office and in 1983 earned the national Gallery of Homes award in the firm's Million Dollar Club.

Ruth Dalbeck, known to many families from her work in the public schools, is our guest organist this Sunday. Be sure to welcome back these two guests and one another to the service of worship and Communion this Sunday.

Special event - Sept. 8 - Jack Hill, Associate for Stewardship and Financial Development for Massachusetts UCC churches, will help us launch the special appeal for gifts and pledges for New Initiatives in Church Development (NICD). Our church voted in 1983 to support the program, which will provide funds to start UCC churches and renew some existing churches.

For over 20 years, Jack Hill directed his own corporation, Church Fund raising, Inc. He is an active member of the First Congregational Church in Natick.

Jack Hill will tell us about NICD and its importance to our denomination. He will also invite each of us to ask ourselves the question, "What if there were no church in your community?" and to consider a pledge or gift to NICD. Be sure to be here Sept. 8 and welcome Mr. Hill.

Christian Education Committee meeting - Sunday, Sept. 8 at 7 p.m. in Bates Hall.

Sunday School teachers' meeting - Sunday, Sept. 8 at 8 p.m.

The Christian Education Committee is looking for an adult to handle child care on Sunday mornings. If you or someone you know would be interested in this position, please contact Rev. Benbow or a committee member for more information.

Open flower dates - October 27, November 3, December 15. If you are interested, please call Fran Walton at 383-1798.

Psychology - Any South Shore person interested in learning more about themselves and their relationships to others in the framework of C.G. Jung's psychology are invited to join a nine-week discussion series that will meet in Cohasset this fall. An introductory meeting will be held Sept. 5 to sample an audio-taped program called Questpoint that will form the basis for the study-discussion series. At the initial meeting, those who decide they want to participate will be able to order Questpoint materials, and a weekly time for meetings will be chosen. For further information, call Margaret Smalzel, 383-0989.

Obituaries

Joseph N. Wright

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday morning in St. Anthony's Church for Joseph N. Wright, 21, who died Monday at South Shore Hospital after a brief illness.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Wright was a student at Tufts University where he majored in international relations. He minored in German languages and attended Tubingen University in Germany last year in the Tufts University foreign program.

A resident of Cohasset the past three years, Mr. Wright was born in Quincy and was educated in Weymouth. He graduated in 1982 from Weymouth North High School.

He leaves his parents, Norman R. and Mary-Jane (Mahoney) Wright; and four sisters, Martha Lee of Atlanta, Ga., Joann Wright-Scott of Randolph, and Sally and Penelope Wright, both of Cohasset; his grandparents, Robert and Velma Wright of Weymouth, and a nephew. He was the grandson of the late Joseph and Lucy Mahoney.

Donations in his memory may be made to the Labre Indian School, Ashland, Montana, 59004.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Conklin service

A memorial service will be held for Sandy Conklin at 2:30 p.m., Sept. 8 at the First Parish Church in Cohasset.

Pancake breakfast

To kick off the 1985 high school soccer season, the Soccer Boosters will hold a pancake breakfast Sunday, Sept. 8 at the Deer Hill School.

Breakfast will be served from 8 a.m. to noon. Tickets are $3 for adults and $2 for students. There will be no charge for pre-schoolers.

The soccer season begins Sept. 10 with a home game for the boys against East Bridgewater at 3:15 p.m., and Sept. 11 the girls will travel to East Bridgewater for their opener.

This year's schedule includes several Saturday games for the boys' varsity and junior varsity teams. Saturday, Sept. 28, they will play Sandwich at home at 1:30 p.m.

Williams exhibit

The works of Claffy Williams of Cohasset are featured at the Dover Library Gallery from Sept. 16-Oct. 5. The show is a retrospective on paper and canvas in watercolor and acrylic.

Claffy lived in Dover 39 years before moving to Cohasset. Her first group show was at the Charles River Art Center in 1968.

In the seventies, Claffy had two one-person shows at the Copley Society in Boston. Recently, she exhibited at the Art Complex Museum in Duxbury. She helped start the prison art project.

Claffy attended the School of the Museum of Fine Arts and for many years working as gallery instructor in the Museum of Fine Arts added to her experiences. Claffy is a member of the Boston Painters and Sculptors and has shown and sold extensively. A recent corporate art commission was a 20-piece painting sale for Arteam in Dallas, Texas.

Claffy is currently a member of the board of directors and head of the Long Range Planning Committee for the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

According to the artist, "I painted landscapes realistically in the beginning. The more I painted, the more I found myself using free abstract shapes. In watercolor, transparent free abstract shapes create form, effecting a lyrical mysticism from natural elements.

"In acrylics," she added, "as I expanded my shapes, the canvases grew larger and larger! Abstractions became exciting when the free forms and colors narrate a sense of space. Painting addresses the spirit, whether influenced by nature or created out of one's own mind. This creative expression is a spiritual translation of one's inner self."

We just landed a number of big ones.

It takes more than a great menu to make a great restaurant.
It takes talented people to bring it all together.
We've got it all.
We've brought back most of the original items from our menu that won all sorts of awards 30 years ago (some things you just can't improve).
And in the past few months we've brought on board the kind of seafood restaurant people we need to help guarantee you catch some of the finest seafood and steaks to ever land on a menu.
Come and enjoy the light fantastic.

Corn festival this month

The Corn Festival on Sept. 21 will feature traditional New England music and dance with the Green Mountain Volunteers, just returned from a seven-week, eight country European tour. Indian Chief One Bear and friends will present Indian dancing and drumming. At 5 p.m., there will be a New England Bean Hole Dinner (pre-purchased tickets required).

Craft demonstrations will include Basketmaking, Tinsmithing, Apple Pressing, Rug Hooking, Leatherwork, Herbal Vinegars, Quilting, Honey Extracting, Cut and Pierce Lampshades and more. Many craftspeople will be offering Colonial, Harvest and Nature Crafts for sale.

There will be guided Fall Nature Walks, a Farmers Market and an Agricultural Fair (save your outstanding fruits, vegetables, flowers, herbs and preserves to enter.

Goodies, including muffins, bread, brownies, and cookies will be available from the Farm Kitchen. Heartier fare will be found during the day at the Kernel's Snack Bar.

Admission is adults, $1.50; children under 14, $.75; under 3, free.

Join us at the Corn Festival! For more information, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, in Norwell, just off Route 123, and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Poster contest winners

The names of the 12 winners of WCVB-TV's "A World of Difference" poster contest have been announced. Each of the winners, one from each school grade, will have his or her poster included in the 1986 "A World of Difference" calendar. "A World of Difference" is Channel 5's year-long prejudice awareness and reduction campaign, done in conjunction with the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the Greater Boston Civil Rights Coalition, and Shawmut Banks.

The winners included, Grade 1: Elizabeth Good, of the Joseph Osgood School.

Last spring, WCVB invited students in all public, private, and parochial schools to address artisically the subject of racial, religious, or ethnic prejudice. Each school selected three entries per grade to send to Channel 5. By June 14, the deadline date, WCVB had received more than 800 entries from around the state, representing thousands of youngsters who participated.

From the 12 winners, three grand prize winners and a super grand prize winner will be selected. The names of these winners will be announced at a State House ceremony on Wednesday, Sept. 11.

Shipyard union president warns of more staff cuts

By Don Merrill

The closing of the Fore River shipyard in Quincy means many others will lose jobs besides industrial workers. Support staffers in such diverse fields as chemistry, firefighting, clerical work and designers will also be laid off over the next year, the president of one of the yard's unions says.

Peter Svirsky of Marshfield, a 20-year veteran of the General Dynamics shipyard, was elected president of Local 90 of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (IUMSWA), which represents the yard's technical and clerical personnel.

Svirsky, elected in June, presides over what is probably the worst crisis Local 90 has faced. The tragedy of shipyard layoffs is reflected in the number of Local 90 employees still working at the yard.

"We had more than 300 members when I was elected," he said last weekend. "We lost eight or nine workers last week alone, bringing our membership to about 200."

Svirsky noted that Local 90 had more than 1,400 members in the late 1960s.

Svirsky, who is active in the Save our Shipyard Committee of the IUMSWA, said layoffs will have an effect in Marshfield as well. More than 70 workers now commute to the shipyard from Marshfield, he said. In 1969, more than 200 workers lived there.

SHIPYARD CAN BE SAVED

Svirsky rejects statements by federal and General Dynamics officials that nothing can be done now to save the shipyard. He said another U.S. shipyard was recently saved from a shutdown through political pressure, though he declined to specify which yard.

"We know the work is out there, and we want to build ships," he said. "The workers don't want handouts or menial jobs elsewhere, they want work at the Fore River yard."

Svirsky said workers are proud of the yard's century-long tradition of shipbuilding, which most recently has included construction of LNG tankers, barges, nuclear submarines and aircraft carriers.

"The carrier USS Massachusetts was built here," he said. "Many of the long-time workers are proudest of that project."

Company officials have said the yard needs $125 million worth of contracts each year to remain viable — a dim prospect now. But despite reports that only 600 workers out of nearly 4,000 will remain at the yard one year from now, Svirsky remains optimistic about the prospect for more work.

"It's been done before, and we know it can be done here," he said.

The unions took part in talks concerning conversion of the yard to other uses, such as condominiums, car assembly or a large marina. But Svirsky said union officials decided to fight to keep the shipyard open rather than looking for ways to convert its use.

"Once the shipyard is closed, there's no bringing it back," he said. "We won't be interested in conversion unless that happens."

Commercial shipbuilding remains a possibility for the Quincy yard, but only if the federal government revives a subsidy for commercial vessels which was cut in 1981. Svirsky said the SOS Committee is planning a trip to Washington soon to present signatures gathered in recent weeks from nearly 100,000 South Shore residents in an effort to revive the subsidy.

The number of signatures represents "overwhelming" support for the shipyard, he said. "The committee projected about 35,000 signatures, and we gathered well over twice that number."

Svirsky said he gathered 300 signatures alone standing outside Angelo's supermarket in Marshfield center on Aug. 17, a Saturday.

Though no date has been set for the Washington trip, Svirsky said committee members hope to present petitions with more than 200,000 signatures to federal officials.

The effort is designed to save U.S. shipbuilding, "which is a dead industry without federal subsidies.

"We're not looking to save our jobs at the expense of shipworkers elsewhere," he said.

Svirsky also criticized the Bay State congressmen who spoke at last week's shipyard rally in Quincy center. He said he was angry that Sens. Edward Kennedy and John F. Kerry, as well as Reps. Gerry Studds and Brian Donnelly, used the rally as a "political forum" to rail against the Reagan administration. Bipartisan cooperation, not criticism, will save the shipyard, he said.

"It's time our congressmen got together with people in the Reagan administration to solve this problem. Poking them in the nose about Star Wars or other defense policies won't help.

"All could be lost" if they persist in criticizing Reagan, Svirsky added.

PERSONAL IMPACT

Svirsky has spent the better part of two decades working as a shipyard lab technician. Though he faces being laid off next spring or summer, he said he has yet to visit the Braintree job-placement center sponsored by General Dynamics and the state Divison of Employment Security. That's something he plans to do in the next few weeks.

He said a number of employees have taken advantage of the placement service, though many remain hopeful that something can be done to save the yard.

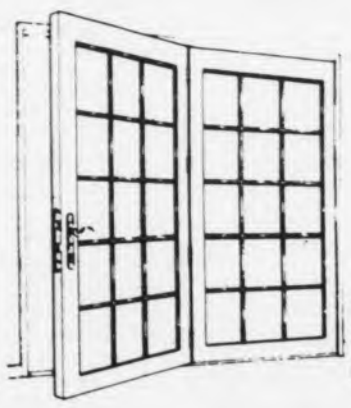
"I think we can win, so I'm staying optimistic for now," he said. "The state's economy is good, but we don't want jobs flipping burgers in fast-food stores. We want to stay here."

One Marshfield man, a shipyard firefighter, is under consideration for a similar position at Otis Air Force Base in Bourne, Svirsky said.

But for many other workers, the future remains a foggy mystery.

Historical society yard sale

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its fall yard sale at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, September 28.



Household goods, toys, sporting goods, books, clothing and collectibles head the list of items which will be presented at this fall fundraising event.

The Society still is accepting materials in good, useable condition to include in its fall version of the famous spring "flea market."

A history of women & the arts

By Charlotte Carney

In search of the origins of American womanly arts, we must first recognize that all art forms draw from some kind of inspiration or circumstance.

In order to understand the circumstances from which the Early American woman drew her inspirations, we must examine her place in society. We must know where she spent her time, to fully appreciate her expressive contributions to the art/craft world which is still being influenced by her efforts today.

Before the days of suffrage, women could only aspire to the state of marriage; believed to be the happiest of situations for a woman.

From the day she was born, a young girl's training and education molded her life in the direction of a "housewife."

As a housewife, a young woman was expected to maintain an orderly and comfortable home that was both morally and physically sustaining to her husband and children.

It was she who was responsible for presenting her family in the most positive light to relatives, friends and guests.

Housewife-ly tasks such as cooking, spinning and weaving were learned at her mother's side. Since this was also the time before birth control, there was almost always a new infant for which the mother had to care, forcing the young girl to put these practical skills to use at an early age.

If the family could afford it, a girl was sent to school where she learned plain and fancy sewing,

'Private Lives' opens Friday at Nickerson

Noel Coward's enduring comedy, "Private Lives" opens the second season for The Nickerson Theatre, Friday, Sept. 6.

Directed by Neils Miller, the cast includes: Linda Cameron (Amanda Prynne), Bob Riley (Elyot Chase), John Adair(Victor Prynne), Paris Klopp (Sybil Chase), and Natalie Brown (Louise).

James Hoff is in charge of sets and lighting design and costume design is by Craig Sonnenberg.

Noel Coward, English playwright, actor and director, noted for his style and dry wit, was a colorful and sophisticated theatre craftsman.

He once described his own life as being one long extravaganza. "Private Lives" was a box office hit as were most of Cowards plays, which among others include: "Blithe Spirit," "Design for Living," "Hay Fever," "Present Laughter," "Tonight at 8:30," and "Fallen Angels."

The original cast of "Private Lives" included Gertrude Lawrence, Lawrence Olivier, Adrianne Allen and Noel Coward himself (Mr. Coward alsodirected this production, which was written especially to provide roles for Coward and his childhood chum, Gertrude Lawrence).

Before its London opening in 1930, Coward wrote years later, "an assurance of success seemed to be emblazoned on the play from the first."

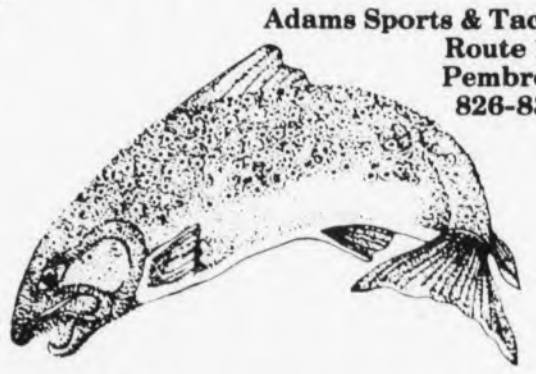
Opening in New York in 1931, the witty comedy continued its phenomenal success and ran for 256 performances.

The Nickerson Theatre production of "Private Lives" will continue through Oct, 12. The 1985-86 seven play season includes: "The Glass Menagerie," "A Christmas Carol," "The Fantasticks," "Tribute," "Deathtrap" and "The Rainmaker."

The performance schedule is Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m., Friday at 8:30 p.m., Saturday at 4 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., and Sunday at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Ticket price for Friday and Saturday evening is $16 and $13 for all other performances.

For a detailed brochure on the new season, call or write the Nickerson Theatre, P. O. Box 272, 30 Accord Park Drive, Accord (Norwell), MA 02018. Tel. 871-2400.



ANGLER'S CORNER by George Doucette

Development threatens fish population

Nature's Delicate Balance—If we upset it we will pay the price with fewer fish in our favorite pond. Many small ponds in the area hold a good supply of bass, pickerel, perch, sunfish, minnows, and frogs and turtles.

As construction continues with more and more homes being built on lakes and ponds we see the swampy, rich edges being replaced with sand and gravel and boat docks and dykes. This upsets the cycle that is necessary to keep a good fish pond producing. Let me explain: Turtles and frogs and sunfish live and breed in the cover of weeds, grass, and lily pads along virgin shorelines in large and small lakes. Minnows also seek cover and food in these highly oxygen laden areas; sunfish live and breed in these areas. Larger fish will move in and out of these shallows to feed and this is where the fishing is best. Remove the cover, weeds, stumps, and partially submerged grass and you have removed half of the creatures from their homes and sent the large fish to the deeper, more remote areas. Not only do they not want to be there, but they don't survive. The fish in these ponds are substantially smaller for their age and are not healthy. When they breed, the offspring are not healthy and fewer survive to be adult fish. The next time you hear of a new waterfront development on a lake, let's hope its not on our favorite "fishing hole."

American eating habits turn to 'grazing'

Gone the way of dinner at noon—once the biggest meal of the day, when men worked locally and came home to eat—is the traditional breakfast, lunch and dinner type of dining.

A Gallup survey of American eating habits reveals that people are "grazing," instead of eating three square meals.

As more women go out to work, they are cooking less—seldom does the entire family gather for chicken and dumplings for Sunday dinner, for on Mom's day off she has much to do and the children have places to go. Says one teenager, "people like to eat more when they're hungry, not when meals are scheduled." And so, for those who like to "graze," here is an easy way to make a snack that is quite inexpensive to buy. Ever so good with crax, is Phyll Coyne's

8 oz. unsalted white butter
16 oz. cream cheese
Blend above with 2 cloves garlic, mashed and any herbs you may have on hand such as thyme, dill or marjoram. This will freeze well for gifts and when I made it last week, I used garlic, parsley and chives to mix with the softened cheese and butter.

Finding ways to escape meal preparation is an art being developed by the working woman and for families who don't eat out, they eat in as long as someone else does the cooking. The poll prepared for the National Restaurant Association shows you are not alone in sending out for pizzas, for 70 million other Americans ordered pizza in the first three months of this year, while 74 million others either ate Oriental fast food, pasta or hamburgers. City streets abound with young people grazing on cones mounded high with rich ice creams, or munching on bakery cookies. For those of us who find the time to bake, here is Jane Eiseman's recipe for

BUTTERSCOTCH BROWNIES/ CHOCOLATE CHIPS

2/3 c. melted margarine
1 box dark brown sugar
3 eggs
2- 2/3 c. flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1 large (12 oz.) pkg. chocolate chips
Mix ingredients in a bowl two at a time. Grease 9 x 12 pan and bake mixture at 350 ° for approx. 25 min. Makes 40 brownies.

Eating together is seldom a family activity these days. Late hours at the office, school sports, part-time jobs, or after-school activities usually finds the dinner hour stretching on and on, sometimes from four in the afternoon to seven at night. Grabbing a handful of potato chips or a candy bar, quick snacks advertised so temptingly on television, can be eaten on the run—eating in this busy scheme of things is regarded as a necessity not worthy of an hour's chunk out of one's time. Another teenager observes: "We just don't have the time to keep running home and eating at a certain time." A pot of homemade soup simmering on the back burner would be far more nourishing than a few chips, but for many, it's all too difficult to find the time to make this traditional French recipe for

RICH ONION SOUP

2 lb. onions, sliced
6 T butter
2 T corn oil
1/2 tsp. each sugar and dry mustard
3 T flour
2 qt. beef broth
1 1/2 c. white cooking wine
Salt and pepper to taste
French bread slices, toasted with cheese

In large kettle, cook onions with butter and oil over low heat for 30 min., stirring occasionally. Add sugar and mustard. Cook 30 min. longer. Blend in flour. Stir in broth and wine and cook 30 min. more. Season to taste. To serve, ladle into ovenware crocks; top with bread slice that has been toasted and a slice of Gruyere Cheese. Bake in 450° oven until cheese is bubbly. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese, if desired.

If you have a recipe you would like to share, send it to Joan Pinkham, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050.

MUSINGS

By JOHN H. CUTLER

☐ Definitions I wish I had originated:

Socialism: If you have two cows, you give one to your neighbor.

Communism: If you have two cows, you give them to the government and the government gives you some milk.

Fascism: If you have two cows, you keep the cows and give the milk to the government; then the government sells you some milk.

New Dealism: If you have two cows, you shoot one and milk the other, then you pour the milk down the drain.

Nazism: If you have two cows, the government shoots you and keeps the cows.

Capitalism: If you have two cows, you sell one and buy a bull.

☐ Mae Schmidle, a Connecticut lawmaker, introduced a bill banning instant rice weddings. Innocuous as it seems, instant rice kills birds that eat it by absorbing moisture, causing severe bloating. She does not advocate policing weddings, but simply wants wellwishers to convert to birdseed.

☐ Abortionists, prolifers, casuists and theologians have different theories about how life begins. An unknown wiseguy has this theory:

Life does not begin at the moment of conception or the moment of birth. It begins when the kids leave home and the dog dies.

☐ One definition of God: A circle with its circumference everywhere and its center nowhere.

☐ Montaigne had a point when he said, "For when I play with my cat, how do I know she isn't playing with me?" Ask the Standish Humane Society.

☐ Some folks talk so fast you're lucky you can't hear what they say.

Occasionally I hear from readers demanding to know what I have against Gov. Dukakis. "Why do you keep taking shots at him?" they ask. "Get off it, he's a good governor!" they say. My most strident critics on this score are those who are aware that I abetted Dukakis campaigns in one capacity or another in three decades of this century. "Go to Hell you turncoat, and don't bother to turn left at Purgatory" is the gist of what this intelligentsia wants to tell me.

The question suggested by such explicit instructions is a fair one, for the governor's name does creep into this space as often as that of any other public figure, and as this column approaches its first birthday, I have to admit that I have criticized His Excellency more often than I have praised him. His partisans who are kind enough to read me are entitled to know the reason for that.

It is not, as my distinguished publisher suspects, that I don't like the man personally. Sure, Mike Dukakis has a fault or two. For a very bright man he is something of a literal and obtuse learner; and he was very unkind in 1975 to many of his ardent supporters who had given him their 1974.

But this is a fine human being . . . and not just by comparison with slimy politicians. With the possible exception of basketball, Mike Dukakis would have stood out in any field he chose. My personal introduction to him in 1969 was both great fun and inspirational. In that year Dukakis was preparing to run for Lt. Governor in 1970, and he was moving around the state calling on Democratic Ward and Town Committee members, lining up support in the coming nominating convention.

Typically of the man, he undertook these early campaign forays alone and in his own car. Then one night while driving home after a long day in Western Massachusetts, he found himself starting to doze off at the wheel. Thereafter (and again typically of the man) he went "cold turkey" on solitary forays, and always took along a friend or supporter to keep him awake and to help with the driving.

Astonishingly, I was among those chosen to help keep him awake, and I subsequently went out with him dozens of times in 1969, 1970, 1973, and 1974. It was he, however, who regularly kept me awake, for traveling with Mike Dukakis was an education. He hardly needed a driver because he had memorized the map of the Commonwealth the way Churchill memorized Macauley's "Lays Of Ancient Rome," and every road he took he had an idea. . . "Do you see that abandoned school?" he would say, "I want to make it into elderly housing." "Do you see that rusting rail line? With a small subsidy we can put it back into service." Above all, Dukakis loved Massachusetts. He loved Massachusetts the way Kennedy loved the sea, the way my father loves Harvard, the way you and I love the Celtics. It was he who taught me that the most beautiful scenery awaiting the San Francisco to Boston east driving traveler lies in our own thickly forested Massachusetts. For me it was and is impossible not to like Mike Dukakis.

Nor, I hope, is the fact that I sometimes criticize him today due to the fact that he has never exhorted me to get a mail-order law degree the sooner for him to appoint me Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court . . . or something. It is quite true that along with many other 1974 campaign workers I was very disappointed in 1975 when there was no role to play in his first administration. But life went on. A door had closed, but another opened. I found riches behind the door that opened and no longer supposed what lay behind the door that had closed. I only record the history here in order that the reader may judge for himself what motives I have in criticizing this governor.

If not personal dislike, and not personal bitterness, then on what account do I criticize him? On account of a billion dollars, that's what. All I want Dukakis to do is to cough up a billion dollars or so, then I'll write nothing but nice things about him. Seriously, for here's how I see the state we're in:

The state budget hit $1 billion for the first time in fiscal 1967. In fiscal 1986 it will hit $8 billion, which even allowing for 19 years of inflation, represents extraordinary and unprecedented growth in state spending. Yet anyone who deals with the Registry of Motor Vehicles or the Division of Employment Security or the Board of Registration of Physicians rightly suspects that rudeness and inefficiency in state government will always cost as much as state government can gull us into spending on state government.

I therefore believe that if about a billion dollars were forcibly taken out of state government and put into our communities and into the private sector that is the true engine of our present prosperity, that our economic future to the turn of the century and beyond would be assured. Moreover, with a budget capped at about $7 billion (still, I submit, quite a fair sum of money to spend on state government) the state would be forced to discipline itself as the municipalities were disciplined by Proposition 2½ and as the private sector is disciplined every day by the market place.

I have little doubt that under such discipline, efficiency would improve, lines at the Registry would get shorter, the Red Line would run on time now and then . . . and so forth. We all need to be disciplined (my writing wallows in sloth when I'm not under deadline) and the 1½ Party politics of Massachusetts are such that without discipline, state government just goes on feeding itself and its slothful constituent parts.

A governor using the line-item veto could impose some discipline on state government. But not only does Gov. Dukakis not use his veto as I wish he would, in the last two years he has made spending proposals that come the 1990's and a recession could put the Commonwealth right back to where it was in the 1970's and a recession. No one has compiled the aggregate cost of the spending proposals Dukakis has sent to the Legislature in the last two years because the aggregate figure would astound everyone. The irony is that this governor remains popular and strongly favored for reelection in large measure because the Legislature has rejected every major proposal he has placed before it except Education Reform, which it greatly curtailed before agreeing to.

What the second Dukakis administration reminds me of more than anything else is the "Great Society." When Dukakis speaks these days I am reminded of the "we can have it all" rhetoric of Lyndon Johnson some twenty years ago. Dukakis, like Johnson before him, seems to think that we have reached what Herbert Hoover before him foolishly called the "permanent plateau of prosperity." Like Johnson, Dukakis seems to think that he can fatten all the ganglia of his noisy constituency and throw in a tax cut and have a balanced budget.

So successful was Proposition 2½ five years ago in convincing companies that Massachusetts is a good place to locate and their employees to live, so strong are revenues this year, that this year the governor may pull it off. (I say may.) But surely there will be years ahead when the glow goes off our prosperity that he or some successor will have to deal with declining revenues. We must prepare for that day, but as I see it this governor is not doing so, he is only preparing for the next election. The incubus of 1978 weighs too heavily on his brain, I believe (that's what I mean about being a "literal learner"), and that is why, although I often praise Dukakis' personal qualities, I often fault his gubernatorial record in the second term.

Some day, if there's anyone then left I haven't outraged in this space, I may run for governor on the platform that is what I'd like to see Gov. Dukakis implement today. It would go something like this: I would take that $8 billion budget and veto a full $1 billion worth of line items. I would set the sun on supernumerary boards, agencies, departments, and officials all over the state. Then, if I could make my vetoes stick in the Legislature, I would take that $1 billion saved and divide it into five equal parts of $200 million each.

One part would be returned to the taxpayers as a permanent tax cut. One part would be saved — tossed into the next year's budget against the possibility of falling revenues. The third part would go into debt service to reduce the amount of interest to be paid on past borrowing. The fourth part would go to the 351 communities of the Commonwealth — without strings attached — to help them in their many worthy tasks. The final part would go to new spending. Surely in this great Commonwealth new projects could be found that would be legitimately worthy of state spending. Commuter rail for the South Shore. The acquisition of conservation land. Cleaning up our rivers and harbors. Educating the mini baby-boom.

Such a plan, I believe, would launch Massachusetts toward the millenium (and just 30 years thereafter the start of our fifth century) in superb condition. If such a plan were implemented by Gov. Dukakis he would either be reelected or he would not, but I am certain he would walk with John Winthrop, William Shirley, John A. Andrew, and the other gubernatorial giants whose chair he now sits in. Not only that, he'd get me off his back every week. Can't think why he doesn't do it.

A history of women & the arts

drawing, manners, and other social graces in addition to letters and numbers.

As if all of this were not enough, music was one of the social arts taught a young gentlewoman at school, therefore making her an accomplished, gracious hostess that could oblige her guests with musical entertainment.

You might think that living such a rigid, sheltered existence, going from girlhood to that of her husband, keeping house, rearing children, and attending to a myriad mundane details of everyday life, might stifle creativity. That was not the case.

As the saying goes, "you can't hold a good man down," and the Colonial women were certainly no exception to this tradition.

She flourished and grew, and in her efforts to produce works that showed her creativity with form and beauty, she took functional objects and made them works of art. This is a legacy that continues today.

Before the nineteenth century, there was no distinction between art and craft, however more sophisticated tastes would separate the two.

Before Colonial woman had the time or the encouragement to pursue their artistic talents with a brush making ornamental pictures, she took needle in hand and created pictures with thread, wool, and scraps of fabric. With her art, she decorated practical items such as table linens, pillow covers, and clothing accessories.

Quilts were among the most colorful and expressive American needlework arts, and are among the most sought-after 'collectables' today.

Along with quilting, the beautiful art of needlepoint, embroidery, and free style stitchery, proved Colonial housewives were as creative with needle and thread as any fine brush impressionist.

The fine art/craft traditions of yesterday are carried on by many South Shore residents today.

In a world of microwaves and instant replays, Sigrid Carey of James Lane finds time to not only make her own clothes, but to spin the fibers from which to make the cloth. "My interest in sewing," said Carey, "started as a child with needlepoint and embroidery."

As a proficient weaver for over twenty years, Sigrid modified directions from a Girl Scout handbook and designed her own back strap loom which she uses to make clothing that is sold at a local South Shore gallery.

Carey, a multi-faceted craftsman, has traveled extensively and has had the opportunity to study the 'womanly arts' of other cultures.

Joni Appel Jensen of Holly Lane is another of Cohasset's many-talented artists/craftsmen. "My interest in sewing grew from exploring quilting," she explained. Jensen is well known for her beautiful custom costumes, and soft scuplture which have brought joy to many.

The art of floral arranging is no less popular today than it was in Colonial times. Arranging flowers to bring color to dark rooms, as well as making holiday wreaths and arrangements, was up to the lady of the house. Dried flowers placed in baskets assured her color through the year.

For Tina Watson of South Main Street, this would have been an easy task as her talents encompass all the above. Tina, who had previously worked in pottery for ten years, said, "I've had a rebirth, making baskets." She displays the baskets, along with her floral arrangements and wreaths at the Pottery Loft above the Cohasset Hardware store. An avid gardener, Tina grows the artemisia she uses on her wreaths in the fall.

Most artful/craftsmen are usually proficient in more than one craft and Barbara Fairchild of Pleasant Street is certainly in that category.

Barbara recently completed a week long course at the Harrisville Weaving Center in New Hampshire. "I have taken several courses," she said, "to further my knowledge of weaving techniques." Her diversified interests in hand crafts make her a well-rounded craftsman, following standards and traditions set long ago.

Time marches on. During the last half of the eighteenth century, both men and women carried needlework pocketbooks to hold valuables. At that time, it was socially acceptable for men to do so, however, had men picked up the needle and thread to make the pocketbook, they would have placed their manhood in jeopardy.

Today the situation is much different. Our culture not only permits both sexes to carry a pocketbook, but to create it. What were once considered womanly arts, are no longer restricted by gender. Women make furniture, and men may weave and sew. We've all come a long way.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

The Cape Cod life you've waited for is here. Now. In Duxbury.

Oceanwoods is selling as fast as it's being built, for a lot of reasons. Cape living, without the battle of the bridge. Quality construction and creative architecture you thought had passed you by. Residents' use of one of the world's great beaches, in one of New England's most beautiful towns.

Choice two-bedroom townhomes and condominiums remain, from 1500 to more than 2000 sq. ft. From $154,000 to $260,000. With a few remaining single-family residences, designed by award-winning architects.

Come enjoy 23 acres of salt air, balconies, ocean view, crickets at night and serenity—only 45 minutes from Boston. But, do it now. So someone else isn't enjoying what you should be.

Oceanwoods

Nearly Native — by Darrell Berger

For the love of one woman

As I am writing this, my wife, Jim Ann Howard, is in Nicaragua. She has been gone nearly a month and will return in a few days.

She was right. I have not been lonely, perhaps because I have known exactly when she would return. Yet before if she was even an hour late getting home, that hour would be very lonely. Time is relative.

She is an artist with a studio in Somerville. She began to think of Nicaragua in the spring when she helped paint a mural in the library of Boston English High School. She assisted a group called "Arts for a New Nicaragua," which had made two visits there to give supplies and support to local artists. The mural featured images from both nations. She painted a girl playing basketball. I suggested her uniform be green with number 33, after Larry Bird's. She also managed to include our dog in the mural, along with Martin Luther King and Sandino, the national hero of Nicaragua from whom the Sandinistas get their name.

The idea of her going frightened me. But the more we looked into it, the more it seemed like the right thing to do.

We discovered there had been no fighting in the capital city of Managua since the revolution ended in 1979, that fighting was confined to the Honduran border, where U.S. supported contras made terrorist raids on villages.

She began Spanish lessons. She took the proper shots. When our administration placed the economic squeeze on Nicaragua, and it no longer became possible to fly there directly, her group rerouted through Mexico City.

I drove her to Logan early in the morning, my old Dodge groaning under enough art supplies, it seemed, to paint a mural on the Great Wall of China, and more than enough to brighten some of Nicaragua's new libraries. Many have been built since the revolution and literacy has skyrocketed. I contributed guitar strings and pencil sharpeners, two items from a very long list of essentials in short supply there, for her to give away upon her arrival.

She told me not to expect a card because the mail is exceedingly unreliable. A week after she was gone I read of increased fighting in precisely the area she was heading. She had said the government would not put her in danger, and would move her if necessary. I had to trust the Sandinistas.

Fortunately, I did receive two cards. Yes, she had been moved to a safer location. Yes, the increased warfare was due to our "humanitarian" aid to the contras.

She had been staying with a retired cellist from the Nicaraguan National Symphony and his daughter. She said people were eager for Americans to visit, to see that Nicaragua was no threat to its neighbors. Her Spanish was holding out. So was her digestive tract.

She also wrote of how every family had been touched by the killing, and that many bore the scars of torture from Somoza's National Guard, the dictatorial regime the U.S. had supported since the Marines left in 1933. The Nicaraguan stamp on her postcard celebrated the birth of Lenin.

In these months since the idea of that trip first came to her, I have become a beginning student of Central America. I read some books. I drew a map. I began to read magazines and newspapers more carefully.

Many people we knew also became more aware. When several Americans from a group called "Visions for Peace" were apparently kidnapped by contras, our friends were concerned for Jim Ann. They knew she was down there, but not where or with whom. I assured them. Had she spent the summer in Maine these same folks would surely not have noted the kidnapping with the same urgency.

Giving faces and names to those who are affected by our policies, getting us to think and feel about what is done in our name, that is the purpose of her visit.

My wife is not a bleeding heart. Her heart is tough and resilient. She thinks for herself and is not easily influenced. She is an artist who believes in life and freedom. She will teach me important lessons when she returns, things I will need to communicate to others if our part of the world is to survive as a civilization.

Much to my surprise, this has been a very romantic month for me, though it is the longest we have been apart since we were married. It's not Casablanca but it's as close as I've been.

There is something powerful about a love between two persons that begins to work in confluence with a greater love. It's a bit hard to express, and is impossible to do so in the terms our government and most of the media have chosen. Her trip, and my response to it, have nothing to do with contras versus Sandinistas, or communists versus capitalists, but rather with love and life versus indifference and death.

As she has done so often before in her art and her life, she has placed before me a vision of reality that is impossible to ignore. For the love of one woman, I have come once again to care more about what happens to us all.

METCO begins 18th year of integration

By Jane Lane

(This is an overview of the METCO program - Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity - in Cohasset. Next week, we will talk with the participating students. Ed.)

METCO coordinator Eileen Mills sits inside her small, neat office on the second floor of Cohasset High School. This is her second year in this community. Never has she so eagerly anticipated returning to a job.

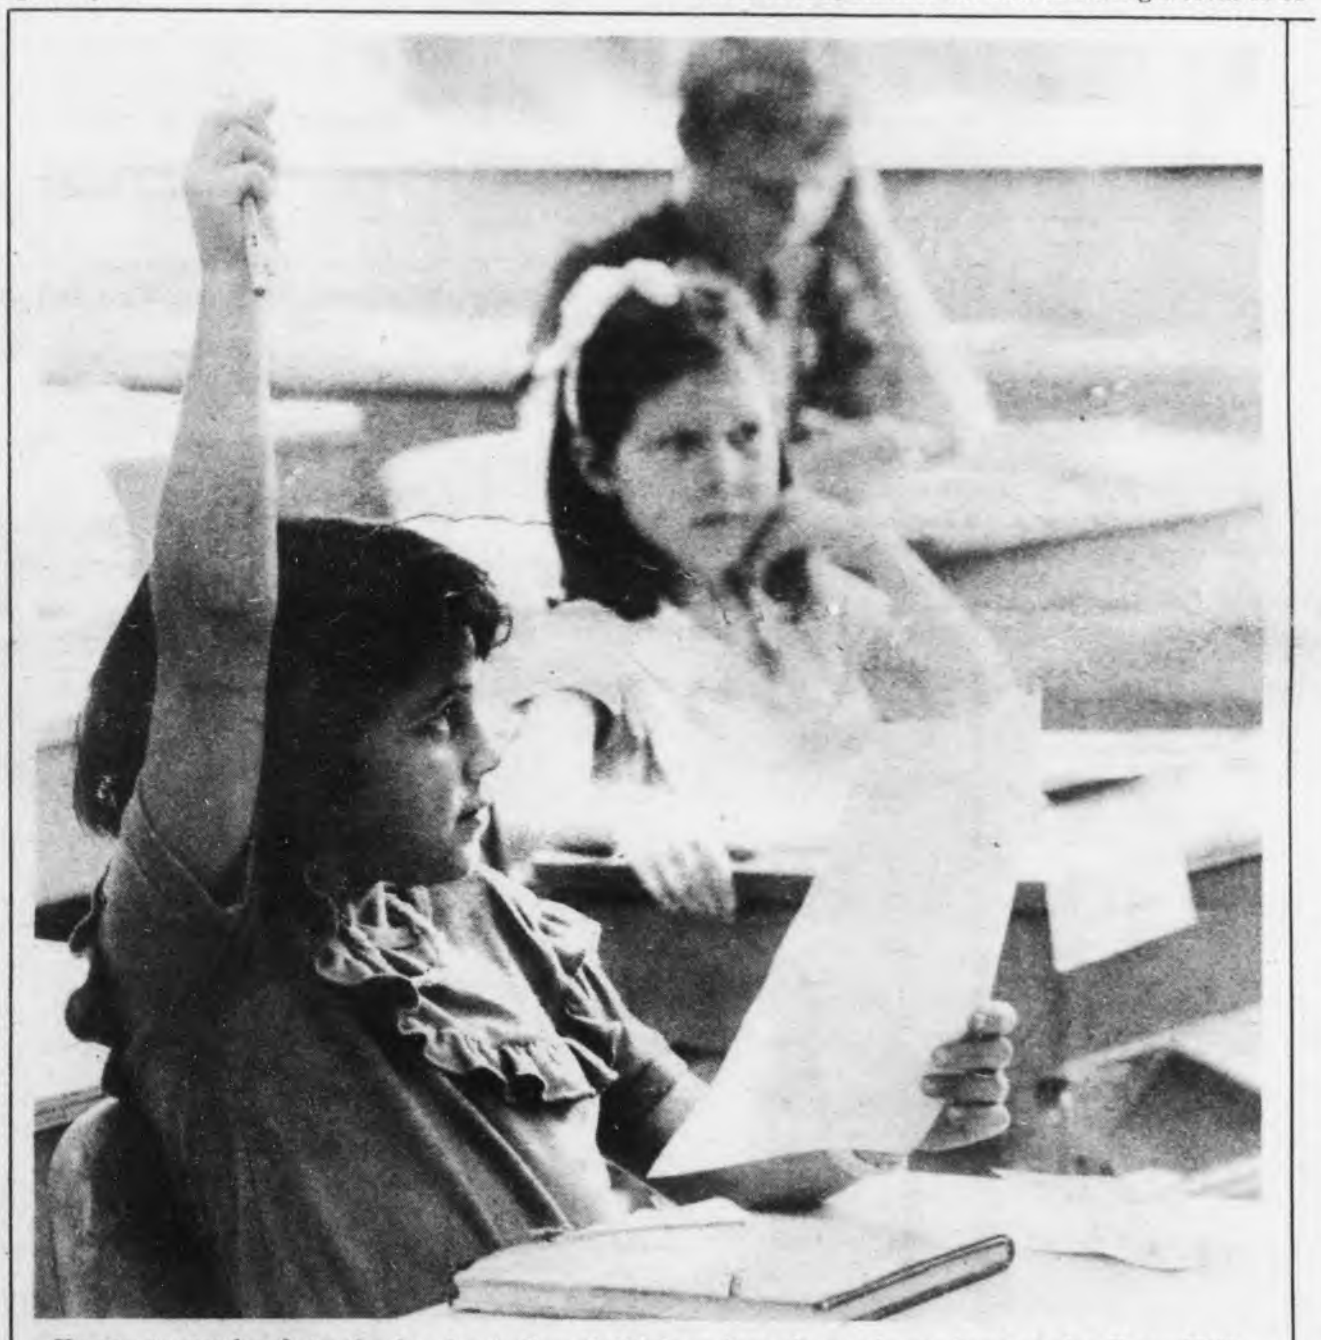
An attractive, slender black woman, Mills arrived in this country as a young girl with her family from Jamaica. Her goal has always been to teach inner city black children in this country.

Young teens rush in and out of her office during breaks after class. Breathless questions fill the room as they ask to sit and talk with her. The phone disrupts her conversations with numerous calls.

She laughs and says, "I have never felt so good about a job before. I never felt so good about returning to my job."

Mills is responsible for coordinating a total of 48 black students from Boston who attend school fulltime in Cohasset. This community has voluntarily participated in METCO for 18 years, only two years after the state program began.

Initially, Mills explains, METCO was an initiative to integrate the suburban school systems in the 1960's. Now, the focus is to bring inner city youngsters to the quality, academically-challenging environment of schools outside the City of Boston.



METCO has faded from the headlines of 20 years past, and many people are unfamiliar with the program. Mills says that may be caused by the transient atmosphere of the town, where executives and their families are transferred from one community to another.

But it is a program which has succeeded in Cohasset, one that has graduated dozens of students capable of achieving in college and beyond. That is the hope Mills imparts to these kids - that above everything else, they work hard here to enjoy the rewards of their efforts later.

There were only nine black students that first year in 1968. This year there are nine at the Osgood School alone. There are 11 children at the Deer Hill and 28 at the high school. Cohasset is still one of the smallest METCO participants in the state.

Mills explains how students are selected for the METCO program. "There is a central METCO office in Roxbury. The placements are done through that office where parents register their children. When we have slots available, we contact the central office, tell them what grade we are looking for, and we interview the child and the parents," she says.

Striders to hit the streets Sunday

Depending on the weather and all other factors, there'll be about 1000 feet running round the streets of Cohasset Sunday afternoon.

Once again this year, Cohasset will be the site of a long distance race as the South Shore Striders host the Late Summer Classic roadrace.

According to one of the race organizers, a field of about 500 participants "would be great" with a figure of 300-400 likely to show. Buzz Hollander of the South Shore Striders says that is a good number, considering this will be the first time the late summer classic has been held here.

The Striders is a group of about 125 amateur racers from towns as far south as Plymouth and Kingston up to Weymouth and Quincy. Each year, the club sponsors three races throughout the South Shore.

For the past five years, the late summer race was held in Weymouth. But club members wanted a new location, something a bit different and more picturesque.

"We have members from Cohasset and Scituate, and we thought this area would be really nice to have a race," according to Hollander.

"We were looking for a town where we could run along the ocean. Cohasset is a beautiful place and the town fathers were receptive to our request. We also needed a nice place to have a start and finish area with facilties to have refreshments and beer. Runners like to drink beer, so that was a necessity and you can't have that on school grounds. Cohasset was the best choice, and we're lucky we can have it here," he added.

All amateur runners are welcome to participate in the race which will begin Sunday, Sept. 15 at 1 p.m. at the town hall.There will be a 3.4 mile race, and an 8.1 mile race for the more advanced runners. Trophies and medals will be awarded the top three finishers in each of the male and female age categories.

Commission asks dump shutdown

Water commissioners have requested the shutdown of Cohasset Heights Ltd., in reaction to the town's "lack of action" following a study which outlined the effects the commercial landfill has on the town's water supply.

The water commissioners voted at a special meeting Saturday morning to request legal assistance in obtaining injunctive relief against Cohasset Heights Ltd., the privately-owned commercial landfill located in the town's designated watershed property.

The request has been given to Town Counsel Richard Henderson who will review it with a special environmental attorney. Atty. Charles Corkin of Boston has represented the Board of Health and the Water Commission in on-going litigation against Cohasset Heights Ltd.

According to Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt, it was the unanimous decision of that board to seek the immediate shutdown of that facility. Their concern was based on the results of a year-long study completed last November by Camp, Dresser and McKee of the town's watershed area. In that report, the CDM engineers made certain recommendations that were scheduled for discussion between the town and the landfill operators. For several months, the commissioners believed certain agreements were being negotiated between the town and landfill owners, Browning, Ferris Inc. But according to Commissioner William Montouri, they found out Saturday that the landfill was proceeding "full blast" despite the findings and recommendations of the CDM report. Montouri noted the results of that study have not yet been made public, because the engineering data was being used as a basis for a contractual agreement between the town and the landfill.

"We just don't know what's going on there," he stated. "We thought everything was going to be resolved months ago, but we just learned it's going full blast over there and no one seems to know what is going on."

It is within the statutory powers of the commission, granting it special police powers to "seek the cessation of such operation ... against the continued operations of the sanitary landfill."

This is not an action the commissioners "take

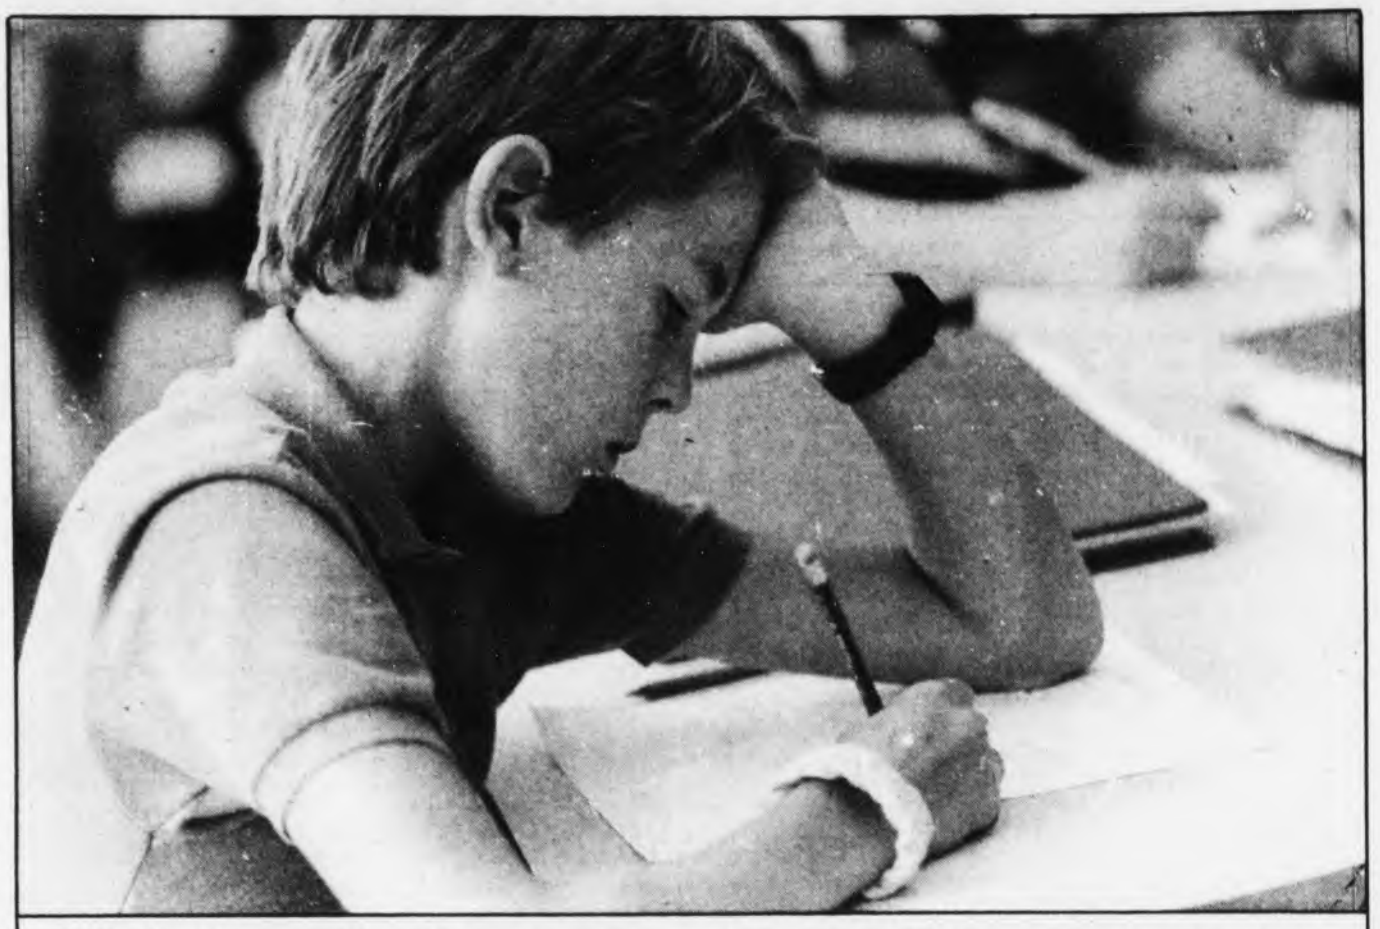
Cohasset's week . . .

Shellfish ban still on

For more than one year, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has issued a monthly prohibition of shellfishing within the breakwaters of Cohasset Harbor.

The cause of the high fecal coloform count has been a mystery for more than a year. Although the pollution count is not extremely high, it is larger than allowed by state standards for shellfish harvesting.

A spokesman for DEQE has stated that tests will be completed this fall to detect the source of the harbor pollution. Although various sources have been discussed, no definitive area has been uncovered by local or state officials.



Fair housing group

Executive Secretary Don Andrew will request that the local Housing Authority take responsibility for establishing a Fair Housing Committee as recommended by the state.

Andrew explained to selectmen this week that "to avoid problems later on," the town sould establish a committee as outlined by the state's Civil Rights Unit of the District Attorney's office.

There is a list of about 25 items the new committee could oversee and discuss, he noted. "I think it would show Cohasset's good faith effort in working toward equal opportunity," he told selectmen.

Selectmen agreed the local housing authority should be asked to have jurisdiction over the new committee.

Studds open meeting

Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-Ma.) will appear Sunday, Sept. 15 at 3 p.m. at the Bates Building on Elm Street.

Congressman Studds will hold an open meeting with his constituents at the hour-long session. Everyone is welcome to attend the discussion session with the Congressman.

After the Cohasset appearance, he will travel to the Barnes Auditorium in Hingham at 4:30 p.m.

Cheese and butter

Government surplus cheese and butter will be distributed by the Social Service League of Cohasset, at the end of September.

Recipients must show their participation in any of the following: food stamps, AFDC, Welfare, SSI Disability, Medicaid, Head-Start, Fuel Assistance, WIC, Veterans' aide, or unemployment, or they may declare that their family size and gross income fall within the current fuel assistance income range, i.e. for one person, $7,875; for two, $10,575; for three, $13,275; for four, $15,975.

If you qualify, call the office before Sept. 20, 383-0771 or 383-0821 to request the food items and arrange for pick-up.

Search Committee looks for a 'fire manager'

The Cohasset Fire Chief Search Committee submitted evaluations of job applicants and discussed scheduling a series of interviews and examinations for the applicants at its Monday, Sept. 9 meeting.

The committee, which has been charged by the town board of selectmen with the decision-making process in finding a new chief, is currently considering eight applicants. Committee Chairman Stephen Bobo said, "I think the difference between the old chief and new chief has got to be an ability to act as a fire manager."

Ths ability to apply management skills would insure that the new chief would have open communication in the department, as well as with town government, according to Bobo. This ability, coupled with technical expertise, are the qualities the committee is looking for in reviewing all the applicants.

"We're evaluating candidates on the basis of a 15-point job description submitted by the selectmen," said Bobo. At its last meeting the committee members were given annonymous information on the applicants which came from a questionaire they answered. The committee members reviewed the information and made out a point-based evaluation sheet.

At this meeting, only four of the committee members had submitted completed evaluations Bobo expected to have the rest of the evaluations to be passed in later this week and would make a final tabulation of the scores after that.

The evaluation portion of the selection process constitutes one third the eventual decision on the new chief. The other two thirds will be determined through personal interviews and a combination oral and written test which will be administered by Ed McCormack, a testing consultant to the board.

According to Bobo, it will take two weeks for the board to receive a sample copy of the chief's test and the committee will then evaluate its questions to determine if it provides the information the committee is looking for.

Joe Dolan and Ralph Perroncello are affiliated with the Cohasset Fire Department and are members of the Committee. Both men will use their fire-fighting experience and knowledge to evaluate the technical questions on the sample exam.

The committee expects to have reviewed and revised the sample test by the end of September and plans on holding the testing and interview session over a weekend in early October. "We ought to do the testing and the interview in one body of time," said Bobo. "We don't want these guys traveling here twice."

Committee member Bob Donahue said the committee's goal is to give the selectmen the names of the five best applicants. This is expected to be completed by the end of October.

Bobo said, "At the selectmen's meeting and at the advisory meeting, we asked specifically if we were to rank the names."

"After the end of the full evaluation period, all the scores of each applicant will be tabulated and the results will be used to rank the candidates from one to five. The final decision will be left up to the selectmen. "They have the right to over-rule us," said Donahue.

New water ferry

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset, Hingham and Hull) is pleased to announce a South Shore alternative to Logan Airport and Downtown Boston.

Due to her efforts and others, a new experimental water ferry has been created. This new shuttle leaves from both Marina Bay in Quincy and Pemberton Pier in Hull. They make a stop in Boston at Atlantic Avenue or Long Wharf; then proceed to Logan Airport, arriving in 10 minutes. Once you get to Logan, an airport shuttle takes you to the terminals free of charge. In addition, there is free parking at both Squantum and Hull. The cost is $6.50 each way and books of ten at $55.

Zoning permits given to CCC

The zoning board of appeals granted two special permits to the Cohasset Community Center for the planned renovation of the center's barn.

The community center, which is in the midst of a fundraising effort to complete major renovations to the barn, presented plans to the zoning board July 18.

The applicant sought a variance because the rear back on the west side of the structure is approximately seven feet less than the required set back. The center board of directors also sought a special permit for the alteration of a pre-existing, non-conforming building.

The renovations are planned so that the center offer an afternoon day care program in conjunction with the nursery school there. That area is currently used in the afternoons by the various gymnastic classes. It is proposed that classes be moved to the barn, which is now used for equipment storage.

The board noted the exterior dimensions of the building will not be enlarged; exterior changes will include new shingle siding, new trim and windows, an enclosed entrance.

According to the applicants, two bathrooms will be added which will connected to the two cesspools on the site. An engineering plan has not yet been submitted to the board of health.

The traffic conditions are not expected to be significantly altered because the number of participants in the gymnastics program should remain substantially the same.

The applicants also noted that the barn is presently in mild disrepair, and the proposed renovation would improve its appearance in harmony with other renovations in the neighborhood.

The Board of Health recommended approval, subject to certain provisions.

The zoning board decided that a variance was unncessary, but issued two special permits allowing a change in non-conforming use, and an alteration to the building. The board determined the proposed alteration will not be detrimental to the public health, safety, welfare, comfort or convenience of the community.

The plan presented by the community center was approved subject to an engineering plan approved by the board of health and ingress and egress patterns approved by the fire department.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

TYPE OF NUISANCE

The basic difference between an intentional and a negligent nuisance is in the matter on intent. In th case of an intentional interference, the person interfering with another's use or enjoyment of his land or property is aware that his neighbor's use or enjoyment is being empaired. In the case of negligent interference, the person may not realize that his activity is having this effect. However, this distinction legally is seldom of very much importance. The person attected by a nuisance usually brings it to the attention of the person causing the nuisance before resorting to court action. Since the offending party has been informed of the effect of his activity and still reiuses to cease, almost all nuisance actions are for intentional nuisance.

Negligent conduct is measured against an objective standard of reasonableness. If you are being sued for negligence consult an attorney. He or she can look into the matter for you, advise you of your rights and your best course of action. For answers to specific problems or to set up a legal review, consult LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

HINT

A petty annoyance with no real damage usually is not enough to sustain a charge of nuisance.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

DEGENERATIVE CHANGE

As a human being gets older, his spine tends to get stiffer. The total range of movement becomes restricted. Tissues in the spine become stiffer, thus reducing their shock-absorbing capacity. Degenerative change begins significantly earlier in people who are engaged in heavy manual labor. It can also begin as a result of injurious athletic activity. Violent exertion and unskilled efforts can cause minor damage to cartilage located between the discs and bodies and/or to the ligaments. If the exertion or activity is repetitive, there is a cumulative effect that leads to a degeneration over the course of time. This is true although none of the incidents may have felt worse than a mometary jarring. Have your spine evaluated if you recognize yourself to be in one of the degenerative-prone categories.

From the young to the young at heart more and more people are discovering the benefits to be derived from a periodic chiropractic exam today. From the adverse results of youthful activities to the discomforts of aging as well as a host of other concerns, chiropractic serves as a logical alternative to continued discomfort. Call COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justic Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today and learn more about how a chiropractic exam can benefit you. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

Degenerative change usually strikes only a segment of the spine.

Water Commission revises moratorium bylaw

A new revised watershed building moratorium bylaw amendment has been developed by the water commission. The more stringent bylaw text has been forwarded to the planning board for a public hearing to be held prior to the special town meeting in November.

Two weeks ago, the state attorney general rejected a bylaw amendment passed by the April town meeting. A delay in delivering the associated moratorium district map to the town clerk's and planning board office in time for a public hearing, resulted in the state's denial of the zoning amendment.

At a special meeting of the water commission last Saturday, members voted to insert a revised bylaw into the special town meeting warrant. That meeting is scheduled for sometime in November.

Several changes were made to the amendment which will now be reviewed at a public hearing. Planning Board Chairman Christine Bassett will likely schedule the public hearing for Wednesday, October 9. "That will give us sufficient time to post the meeting and make sure all supporting documentation is available at town hall," she said.

The text of the revised bylaw amendment states that no building within the watershed district may be constructed or substantially reconstructed, which includes the renovation of fifty percent of the existing floor space of an existing building, or the addition of floor space to the existing building that is an increase of more than fifty percentof the building prior to construction.

No topographical alterations that would result in the the change of drainage patterns, or the installation of impervious surfaces on private ways servicing two or more residential or commercial buildings shall take place until January, 1987.

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt noted any person seeking relief from the provisions of the amendment must submit an application for a special permit with the zoning board of appeals. In order to obtain a special permit, the applicant must demonstrate that the prohibited change will not affect the town's subsurface water supply.

The board of health, the planning board, the conservation commission, the water commission the watershed area protection committee must all review plans submitted to the zoning board which affect the watershed district.

In granting a special permit for construction or renovation within the watershed, the zoning board of appeals must impose several conditions as specified in the revised bylaw amendment. These conditions include placement of the building; type of foundation; elevation of the floors; methods of anchoring the building to the foundation; the design of the drainage system and private sewage disposal system; the area and depth of any excavation; area, depth and composition of any fill; occupancy of building, and certification of performance by a registered professional engineer or land surveyor.

Cohasset selectmen briefs . . .

Independence building sale

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen discussed the value of the former Independence Building on South Main Street. They decided that restrictions on the use of the building should be maintained, and referred the matter to town counsel.

Two local realtors, Tom Hamilton and Juliette Guild, have inspected and appraised the former Historical Society Gown Museum. They suggested the resale value of the building is somewhere between $60,000 and $70,000. There are water problems within the vacant structure, but access to the building is the primary concern of the realtors and selectmen.

The side entrance to this building set upon a wall of ledge, is located about three feet from the street.

Selectmen discussed the matter Monday night, noting that the building would not be adequate for a business that generates traffic. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur noted that a retail business, which would require pedestrian and vehicular traffic, should be restricted from ownership of the building.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle stated "we can't put too many restrictions" on the sale of the building, adding, "I think the price is too high, anyway."

According to selectman Diane Sullivan, the 130 year-old building is similar to those seen on the streets of Nantucket or Gloucester, and suggested it could be converted to an attractive residential property. The building contains proper plumbing and is connected to sewer service.

The board decided that Town Counsel Richard Henderson could devise the proper wording of any restrictions to the sale, including a ban on a retail business.

Bates Building repairs

Selectmen have again delayed any further renovation to the Bates Building while bids are requested for re-clapboarding the structure and repairing the foundation sills.

This summer, selectmen awarded a bid to painter Jack Livingston for $6000 to prepare and paint the Elm Street municipal building. When his workers began to scrape the old paint from the structure, Livingston informed selectmen that several clapboards would have to be replaced and that the paint would only hold for five or six years.

Selectmen requested he halt the job while they discussed what should be done.

Sandblasting the building was suggested, and prices were estimated between $1100 and $3200. But local companies said many of the existing clapboards would not hold up to the blasting process.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew received an estimated price of $11,000 to reclapboard the entire building. He suggested that if selectmen intend to keep the building, or sell it in the future, reclapboarding might be the most economical alternative.

Selectmen agreed, but money for the process would have to be requested at a town meeting. They would have to wait until a special town meeting is held in November.

They decided that they could request bids for reclapboarding the structure, contingent on receiving the money from town meeting. They also told Andrew to solicite bids once again for sill work at the building. Local contractors could be notified the work is available at the site.

Andrew was also instructed to gather prices on the painting or priming of new clapboards. That price might be added to the cost of installing the new clapboards onto the building.

In the meantime, they will ask Livingstone if he agrees to retain his present contract with selectmen until the matter is finalized. They will also ask him to submit prices for painting new clapboards.

No double permit fee

Selectmen decided this week to overrule a decision by Building Inspector Edward Poskus to double a permit fee for the installation of a fence on Fairoaks Lane.

According to Selectman Diane Sullivan, she saw a fence company deliver fencing supplies to the Wolf residence on Fairoaks Lane. She then asked Poskus if there was a permit fee issued for the work.

He answered no, and went to the site where he told the resident to obtain a necessary permit. Mrs. Wolf went to Town Hall and when she applied for a permit, she was told it was doubled from $22 to $44 because work had commenced without the permit.

This past winter, selectmen ruled that if construction work begins without a permit, the inspector is to double the cost of the building permit.

But Selectman Sullivan disagreed with Poskus, saying that no work had begun before Mrs. Wolf obtained the permit. She said the supplies were delivered, but no actual work began.

Selectmen agreed with Sullivan's assessment, and ordered Poskus to grant Mrs. Wolf a permit at the lower price.

There was some discussion as to whether selectmen should become involved in a building code matter. Appeals of zoning decisions are made to the appeals board, but matters of fees may be made to selectmen who set the policy, they decided.

New Veterans' Agent

Selectmen unanimously approved the appointment of Noel Ripley of South Main Street as the town's new veterans' agent.

Of the applications made to selectmen, Executive Secretary Don Andrew said Ripley was the most qualified. He has also made frequent calls to the selectmen's office regarding concerns of local veterans, Andrew said.

In other business, selectmen noted that the Town Garage Study Committee has not met in recent months, and member Jim Gallagher has had problems setting up a committee meeting.

Selectmen requested that all members contact their office and indicate whether they are still interested in serving on the committee. There is one vacancy on that committee, they noted. Anyone interested in serving should contact Andrew at the selectmen's office.

In a related matter, Selectman Diane Suillivan noted that the rental price of housing town equipment in a private garage recently jumped to $300 a month. Selectmen said there is nothing they can do about the increase because they do not have the space to store the equipment, although Rocco Laugelle said he found a location for the winter months at no cost.

In other business, Selectman Sullivan said that an application to the state to assist in the cleaning of inner Little Harbor is progressing, and there is no immediate need to form a Little Harbor Management Committee.

Selectmen noted that there are still three vacancies on the Drainage Advisory Committee, one vacancy on the Town Garage Study Committee, and the town needs another Fence Viewer. Anyone interested in any of these positions should contact Executive Secretary Andrew at the selectmen's office.

Arts Boosters formed

The idea of a "boosters" club for the arts — band, chorus, literary magazine, fine arts, drama — began to solidify last year. The formation of such a group was discussed with the faculty directly involved with these areas of instruction and was met with enthusiasm.

Individual parents and the PSO have helped in the past by hosting receptions for musical concerts, assistng with publicity and chaperoning trips for drama competitions. These efforts have been shouldered by too few and have lacked organization. The time has come for the arts to enjoy the type of backing and assistance that the sports' booster clubs have provided so ably for basketball, hockey, football and soccer. Students and faculty involved in the arts programs deserve support and recognition. The Arts Boosters Club will work to provide it!

The Cohasset Arts Boosters Club purpose will be to coordinate parent volunteers for school arts activities and events, to muster larger audiences for plays, concerts and festivals, to assist with publicity, to act as advocates for the arts, and to raise funds when needed to help defray such costs as those associated with music exchanges, drama competitions, field trips, awards, and so on.

Funds will be needed to lift the arts "payload" off the ground. Please send a donation if you can to the Cohasset Arts Booster Club, c/o Karin Bartow, 48 Sohier St., Cohasset 02025.

New Art teacher honored

The school community's art groups joined forces to welcome Mrs. Colleen Lucas, the new high school art teacher. The Arts Advisory Committee, the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee, and the Arts Boosters Club hosted a luncheon in her honor at Sue McNamara's on August 21.

.Superintendent Eugene Crowell introduced Mrs. Lucas (no relation to retiring art teacher Tom Lucas), as a creative burst of energy totally in harmony with Cohasset's commitment to the arts in education.

Mrs. Lucas expressed delight at the warm reception and at the strong support for the arts in the community.

Representing the South Shore Art Center was Board member and artist Claffy Williams, who described their art programs for children and adults and their reconstruction plans.

The school arts groups are relatively new. The Arts Advisory Committee was organized in 1984, at the adoption of the School Committee Arts Policy, to improve the arts education systemwide and specifically to develop an arts curriculum K-12. Members include Stephen Hart, Barbara Bliss, Eileen Mills, John Packard, Ginny Burbank, Ron Emmons, Marie Price, Jean O'Malley, John MacInnis, Dorothy Wondoloski, Bryan Marks, Jody Wood, Karin Bartow, Jill Crafts and Sue DeMichele.

The PSO Arts Enrichment Committee, established in 1982, is chaired this year by Mary Lou Lawrence.

The Arts Boosters Committee is currently organizing under the leadersip of Karin Bartow and Sue McNamara to promote support for existing art programs at the high school.

Joseph Osgood notes

The Osgood School has become "warm' and intimate once again as the teachers and children have returned and the new year is before us. The children are beautifully scrubbed and polished and filled with that genuine expectation that only little children exhibit.

The teachers, too, are scrubbed, polished and renewed as they look to the new year. As always, we welcome your participation in our school life and ask that you communicate with us should you wish to contribute your services in any way.

We especially extend a warm welcome to the parents of our students who are new to the Cohasset school system and we look forward to meeting with you as the year unfolds.

We will be communicating with you regularly by way of the weekly menu and ask that you look for it every Friday. All at Osgood wish you and your children a happy and productive year.

Recreation news

League play for both divisions will begin Saturday, Sept. 21. Team rosters and schedules will be given out that day. However, your team coach will be calling you to tell you where and when to meet Sept. 21.

Weather permitting, we will plan for a five game schedule plus two weeks of playoffs. If you are in doubt due to inclement weather as to whether your game will be played, you should call the Recreation office any Saturday morning at 8, at 383-6791. In the event of a canceled game, please follow the schedule as indicated for the next week. Make-up games will be played at the end of the regular schedule if time permits. JV Soccer players will not be allowed to participate in the Recreation Department Soccer League.

Grades K through two will not be a part of the regular league. Rather they will meet separately for instructional soccer and scrimmages on Saturday mornings, beginning on Sept. 21. Kindergarten participants and first grade will meet from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m.; second graders from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. (Osgood School Field). All players except grades K to two, will be required to purchase a team shirt. Only sneakers or rubber cleats may be worn. Shin guards are advised. Players should dress as weather dictates.

VOLUNTEER COACHES

Parents who are interested in coaching, assisting coaches, or helping out in some other way, are always in demand. If you feel you are able to spare a couple of hours Saturday mornings,please call the Recreation Department Office, at 383-6791. Your help is greatly appreciated by all!

SKATING LESSONS

Skating lessons for all levels are to begin at Cohasset Winter Gardens during the week of Sept. 14. If interested in details, please call the Recreation Department at 383-6791.

SEAHAWKS INSTRUCTION LEAGUE

Boys and girls, ages four to nine, are invited to join the Seahawks Beginner's Instructional program. The program begins Sept. 14, from 6:10 to 7:10 p.m. The cost is $3 per session, pay as you go. You may register any session.

Staszko presents new plans for Rte 3A market

By Dave Goodsell

The Cohasset Planning Board began public hearing sessions on developer Donald Staszko's revised plans to build a "super" supermarket along Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Staszko, who's original plan to build a shopping complex at the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A was rejected by the board last month, named Stop and Shop as the future tenant of the 46,000 square foot building. Staszko's lawyer, Charles Humphreys, told the board the developers have a binding agreement with the Stop and Shop Company as the sole tenant.

Humphreys told the board the new development plan was based on comments and suggestions made by the board, Sohier Street residents and the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE). Significant changes included in the revised plan include removal of proposed accesses to Sohier Street, moving the entire site in a southerly direction away from the wetlands near Sohier Street, and the addition of the Cohasset Craftsmen parcel as part of the project.

The new building will be 46,593 square feet in size as compared to the original building dimensions of 68,000 square feet. The lot will have only two accesses, both on Rte. 3A, according to Humphreys.

"This plan is intended to meet every single requirement of current zoning by-laws. The property will have a 30-foot belt-line separation from the Sohier Street residential area and 20-foot belt-line along Rte. 3A," he said.

After Humphreys' summation of the revised project, the board began a review of a submitted site plan checklist. Included in this segment of the meeting were the written reaction and commentary on the plans by Building Inspector Ed Poskus and Captain Mark Trask of the Cohasset Fire Department.

Poskus requested that the plans include detail drawings of the position of lightstands in the parking lot and noted that the entrances to the parking lot were 24 feet wide and in excess of the 20-foot limit currently imposed in Cohasset. Humphreys told the board that the developers felt the 24-foot design was superior and made a verbal request for a waiver of that limitation.

In a second correspondence from Capt. Trask, reminders of the fire code regulations, such as posting fire lanes, designing fire lanes that were wide enough for the hook and ladder truck, and provisions for snow removal were made. Trask also told the developers that underground gasoline storage tanks, currently located on the site, would have to be removed.

Major questions raised by the board were in the areas of traffic impact, the design of the loading dock and the landscape design.

Bassett said she thought the traffic from King Street would be adversely affected by the new development, and called the intersection a "problem area." "I'm very concerned about this intersection. I think it's very difficult to get on King Street from 3A, never mind trying to get on 3A from the other side," she said.

The chairperson suggested that a light may have to be installed at the intersection to accommodate the increased traffic. Humphreys replied that this issue woud have to be negotiated at some point.

Water shutoff Monday

The Water Department will be shutting off water to 250 homes in the Beechwood - King Street area, Monday, Sept. 16 beginning at 8 a.m.

The Water Department will be repairing a ten-inch main on Beechwood Street. The work is expected to take about four hours to complete. Residents are advised to draw water before 8 a.m. for use during the morning.

About 1000 residents will be affected by the shutoff, according to Water Dept Supervisor Ben Curley.

The streets that will be affected include: Mill Lane, Bound Brook Lane, Riverview Drive, Hillside Drive, Doane Street, Bates Lane, Aaron River Road, Flintlock Ridge Road, Beechwood and King Streets.

☐ Polly Doggett of Hugh Strain Rd. had the pleasure recently of visiting with her son, Dana, and his wife and children in Provo, Utah, and while there attending Brigham Young University. She became a student in the week-long program "Especially For Seniors" —one of four such programs prepared by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and B.Y.U. especially for "seniors, youth, singles and parents."

It was delightful, Polly reports, to be hiking about that beautiful B.Y.U. campus with the warm sun shining down from above those rugged granite mountains! The group was privileged to be taught by inspired professors on many subjects. They also toured Temple Square at Salt Lake City, the Osmond Studios in Orem, rode the steam train through Provo Canyon, picnicked near Bridal Veil Falls, and did a little genealogy at the B.Y.U. genealogical library.

Physiologist professor, Dr. Garth Fisher spoke to the group on his new approach to weight control; how to "set the set-point down" and to lower your "fat thermostat." "It sounded simple and sensible to me," Polly added. This is accomplished basically in two ways — each necessary to the success of the program. First, by exercise — aerobic, using the large muscles, daily; and second, by changing the type of food you eat, not the intake! Dr. Garth's research proves this method works; whereas dieting, he says, seldom does. It adds up to a longer, healthier life!

☐ Sarah Luisa Lualdi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Lualdi of Deep Rd., Cohasset, will be a freshman at Simmons College in Boston this fall.

☐ Cohasset makes the news again, this time on the cover of Boston Magazine. Willemina Gobes is the pretty gal in the tux, and she is a resident of Fern Way. She, her husband Hans, and their children have lived here for some time, its just that special attention is always paid to the cover model of Boston. Little trivia for you: who was the last gal to be on the cover of Boston that lives in Cohasset?

☐ And, while we're on the subject of Boston Magazine, its time to congratulate the Kahn family . . . Curtis Paul Kahn is the most recent addition to their family. He joins a brother and sister and, Mom, Rose, and Dad, Terry, couldn't be prouder if they tried! Perhaps Curtis will be an editor like his Dad, his name is certainly wonderful in print!

With a look toward the future, this canine waits for his ship to come in.

☐ This Saturday will be a fun time in Cohasset village. Sharon's Chocolate Factory is having its opening, complete with a clown, homemade fudge and candy. There will also be baking and candy making items for sale . . . the best of both worlds; if you don't know how to make it, you can buy it! If you know how to make the fudge or candy, Sharon will have all of the latest equipment to sell to make your candy even better. Nifty cake molds too. Stop by on Saturday, and be sure to bring the youngsters to see the clown and have a nibble of homemade fugde . . . yummy!

☐ Cohasset made a big hit in Hingham last Sunday, the float was a real success. A lot of men and women made it possible, and none want their names mentioned . . . suffice it to say its the same crew that are there whenever anything needs doing, they do it well, and Cohasset was nicely represented once again. If you didn't see the float you missed a grand treat, ask all that were at the parade. Again, hats off to all of the workers, you know who you are!

☐ All teams at the high school are working hard and shaping up nicely for the fall season, which begins next week. Be sure to do your part and support these athletes who work so hard for our school . . .

☐ Congratulations to Martha L. Magnuson on her recent election as treasurer of the Plymouth County Wildlands Trust. This will be her third term, and she serves with 16 other volunteer officers.

☐ The Soccer Boosters kicked off their season with their annual pancake breakfast, an always popular event with the best cooks in Cohasset doing the honors.

☐ Its almost time for the event that has become part of fall in Cohasset . . . Sunday, Sept. 22, will be the Historical Society's walking tour of Elm Street and the Harbor. All that our town has done to contribute to history will be discussed, and points of interest will be pointed out.

Charles Fink (Harbor Committee) and David Wadsworth (Historical Society curator) will conduct the tour, it promises to be informative and fun.

☐ Have you noticed the "Buckle Up" signs posted on poles and trees throughout the town? Don't forget, and don't let the kiddos forget either! Saw one mother buckle herself in while letting the child run all over the back seat . . .

☐ Take a peek in Cohasset Clayhouse's window, its so "ducky" you'll love it.

☐ Lots of locals enjoyed Rosemary Clooney and Artie Shaw (Vic Damone too, of course) as the South Shore Music Circus wound up last week. One gal went to the afternoon show on Saturday and liked the performance so much she went back that night! As the saying goes, "That's entertainment."

☐ Isn't it nice to see the Holt family back in town? Cohasset certainly missed them!

☐ Happy Birthday to Karen Pompeo (and to Jeannine, who was 21 recently).

☐ Another reminder . . . don't forget the Jimmy Fund tournament, whether you are going to play or donate a prize for the fun raffle to follow . . . contact a member of the committee for details! The date is Monday, Sept. 23.

☐ Enid and Bill Gorvine are off on another buying trip to England Sept. 20 for their store, Hampton House, in Norwell. This time they will attend the Harrogate Fair—the largest clothing show in Europe. They will also spend time in Edinburgh and a week in London.

☐ Registration for Junior Girl Scouts will take place at their first meeting, Monday, Sept. 16 from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. For more information call Mrs. Smullen at 383-1327.

The eleven day, multi-national exercise took place in the central and eastern Mediterranean Sea and was designed to improve the operational effectiveness of maritime forces, land-based air forces, and land forces.

☐ That is the news from here, but there is certainly plenty more out there! Get it to me, and read your name in print.

Water Bd. looks to court to resolve problem

lightly," according to Chairman Pratt. "We've been concerned with Cohasset Heights in excess of three years. This is a new threshold of action for us."

"Based on the assessment of what the water commissioners saw was going on there, based on the CDM report, significant progress to eliminate problems within that landfill have not been made," Pratt continued. "We feel it is our responsibility, under Chapter 111 of the General Laws to press vigorously to protect our water supply."

Member Montouri agreed the commissioners are "completely disastified with the lack of action by town authorities in pursuing action against Cohasset Heights. I don't know what is going on and we've been lead to believe that the landfill is going full blast. Evidently, the agreements we thought were being worked on, were never signed or put into effect. No one seems to know anything about this," he added.

About one year ago, the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) gave interim approval to Cohasset Heights to continue operation and expand into a third section of the landfill for a limited amount of time.

The board of health has been concerned about the procedures followed by the landfill, which coincides with the water commission's concerns that contaminated leachate may be flowing from that area into the town's watershed area.

If certain restrictions were to be placed on the operation of the landfill as recommended by the engineering study, it would be the responsibility of the board of health to ensure those procedures were followed.

The DEQE is the only agency, according to Commissioner Pratt, whose authority can supercede the water commission's police power to protect the town's water supply. "And if they do not see things our way, if push comes to shove, the commissioners could petition the governor. At some point, some action has got to be taken by the town to protect our water from the pollution and corruption from this landfill," Pratt said.

He continued, "I think with the moratorium knocked out last week, it said to us that even though these people have tremendous financial resources, the town has got to get tough to protect the resources we have. For months we have answered people's concerns about Cohasset Heights by saying our attorneys were working on it. But Cohasset Heights is a problem that can be overlooked no longer. It is not being properly monitored and we feel selectmen and the board of health have not pursued this vigorously enough to the level of protecting our water supply."

The commission chairman added, "This is a major undertaking, we know. We intend to cooperate fully with selectmen and the board of health. We do not intend to disrupt what those boards have done to date. But the water commission has independent police powers only overruled by the executive branch of the government."

"Based on the assessment of what the water commissioners saw was going on there, based on the CDM report, significant progress to eliminate problems within that landfill have not been made," Pratt continued. "We feel it is our responsibility, under Chapter 111 of the General Laws to press vigorously to protect our water supply."

Member Montouri agreed the commissioners are "completely disastified with the lack of action by town authorities in pursuing action against Cohasset Heights. I don't know what is going on and we've been lead to believe that the landfill is going full blast. Evidently, the agreements we thought were being worked on, were never signed or put into effect. No one seems to know anything about this," he added.

About one year ago, the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) gave interim approval to Cohasset Heights to continue operation and expand into a third section of the landfill for a limited amount of time.

The board of health has been concerned about the procedures followed by the landfill, which coincides with the water commission's concerns that contaminated leachate may be flowing from that area into the town's watershed area.

If certain restrictions were to be placed on the operation of the landfill as recommended by the engineering study, it would be the responsibility of the board of health to ensure those procedures were followed.

The DEQE is the only agency, according to Commissioner Pratt, whose authority can supercede the water commission's police power to protect the town's water supply. "And if they do not see things our way, if push comes to shove, the commissioners could petition the governor. At some point, some action has got to be taken by the town to protect our water from the pollution and corruption from this landfill," Pratt said.

He continued, "I think with the moratorium knocked out last week, it said to us that even though these people have tremendous financial resources, the town has got to get tough to protect the resources we have. For months we have answered people's concerns about Cohasset Heights by saying our attorneys were working on it. But Cohasset Heights is a problem that can be overlooked no longer. It is not being properly monitored and we feel selectmen and the board of health have not pursued this vigorously enough to the level of protecting our water supply."

The commission chairman added, "This is a major undertaking, we know. We intend to cooperate fully with selectmen and the board of health. We do not intend to disrupt what those boards have done to date. But the water commission has independent police powers only overruled by the executive branch of the government."

Editorial

How do you feel?

Once again, the water commission is in the thick of the action as they continue their efforts to protect the town's water supply. It probably never seemed to anyone that preserving water would be so complicated and expensive.

But as the commissioners have remarked, it is the inaction of past and present officials that has culminated in such drastic action now. The latest situation involves the town's efforts to shut down Cohasset Heights Ltd.

This is an attempt to close down the facility through the courts, until and if a series of agreements can be negotiated between the town and the landfill owners regarding the operation of the commercial dump.

This has been a matter of grave concern for several years. It is something past water commissioners, board of health members and particularly selectmen, should never have allowed in town, Commissioner Peter Pratt has stated.

Allowing a private landfill into this town, without proper monitoring devices and procedural guidelines established by the town, is the sin of past selectmen, he has said. Their mistake has resulted in prolonged, technical litigation that has proved costly for all town taxpayers, and the town's water supply.

What commissioners fear is that leachate, a liquid form of refuse, is leaking from that commercial landfill into the town's adjoining watershed district. A recent study completed by an independent engineering firm, at a cost of $30,000 to the town, showed what commissioners had feared. The only alternative - shut down the facility until proper operational guidelines can be agreed on by the state, town and landfill owners.

That study, which has been used as a basis for the town's litigation against the landfill, has not been publicly released. It will be available to the public in a few days, we are told.

It should prove interesting reading.

Some people may feel it is solely the responsibility of our elected officials to meddle in such affairs. We think not. This is an important issue which should be of concern to all our residents.

This is our water supply we are talking about. This is one of the most valuable resources we have. It is the responsibility of everyone to help preserve it.

What if no one was concerned? What if any type of commercial operation was allowed alongside our water supply land?

Look what this has cost us thus far. Not just the exorbitant cost of guarding our water supply, but the time that has passed, and the possibility of continued pollution while we complete studies and initiate lawsuits.

Water, in every community, is a precious commodity. It is a resource too easily taken for granted. Now we are witnessing what can happen if we continue to look the other way.

It is time for everyone to take notice and become aware of what is happening to our community. Don't leave the decisions to others. Ask questions, be concerned and offer your opinions. Dialogue is needed and action is imperative.

We believe the water commissioners' latest action is drastic, but necessary. How do you feel?

Does anyone feel a draft?

By Claire McDonough

"The feminist movement has gone too far," the Dragon told me.

"I support equal pay for equal work. I can even see the logic in equal pay for comparable work. But I simply cannot sleep peacefully knowing Breida will be keeping our nation safe. You know she drops everything. You don't suppose they'll let her get her hands on "The Bomb," do you?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," I sniffed, "but I get a distinct feeling that whatever it is you'll find some way to blame me for it. I don't know who 'they' are, but I assure you I've never given Breida a bomb of her own in my entire life."

The Dragon handed me an official looking piece of paper. "You may not have to give it to her," he said glumly.

"Read this."

The paper had a letterhead proclaiming it to be from the Selective Service Board. It was addressed to Breida C. McDonough, 49 Cobb Lane, Scituate, MA and it began,

"Dear Mr. McDonough: Our computer has identified you as a man who has not registered for the draft . . ."

"Do you suppose the Draft Board gets its lists from St. Elizabeth's Hospital?" I mused.

"Remember? For two years after the birth of one of our daughters they kept sending us bills for her circumcision?"

"You always blamed me for that, too," I added.

Skip looked over my shoulder and read the letter. His expression brightened.

"Hey, let's not be hasty," he advised.

"Maybe if Breida goes, I won't have to."

He thought a minute, then his smile broadened. "Perhaps we can talk them into taking another one of my sisters, too, and Jason can stay home."

Breida shot him a look of pure disgust. "I am not into physical violence," she informed him. "And anyway, I thought you admire 'Rambo'."

"I admire Ghandi," Skip retorted, "but I'm not going on a hunger strike. I admire the Statute of Liberty, but I'm not about to stand in New York Harbor."

He pondered the situation for a minute. "Actually, the one I feel sorry for is Ralph. All this time he thought he was dating a girl. But who can argue with the federal government? And its computer? Ralph's the one with the problem."

"No one has a problem," I said firmly. "We don't even have a draft any more. It's just a simple error. Come to think of it, Meave and Deirdre Foley got draft notices a few years ago. Maybe the government's computer just can't cope with Gaelic names.

"But I'm sure there's nothing to worry about. When I get around to it, I'll send the federal government a letter explaining the whole thing. I'll include a copy of Breida's birth certificate. The Selective Service people will probably have a good laugh when they learn what happened."

The Dragon looked doubtful. "Maybe," he admitted. "But whenever the federal government laughs, I get nervous. And sometimes it takes a long time to straighten these things out. In the meantime, who knows what they might give Breida to hold. That she could drop."

I considered. "Then again," I said, "maybe I'll mail them her birth certificate tonight. Special delivery."

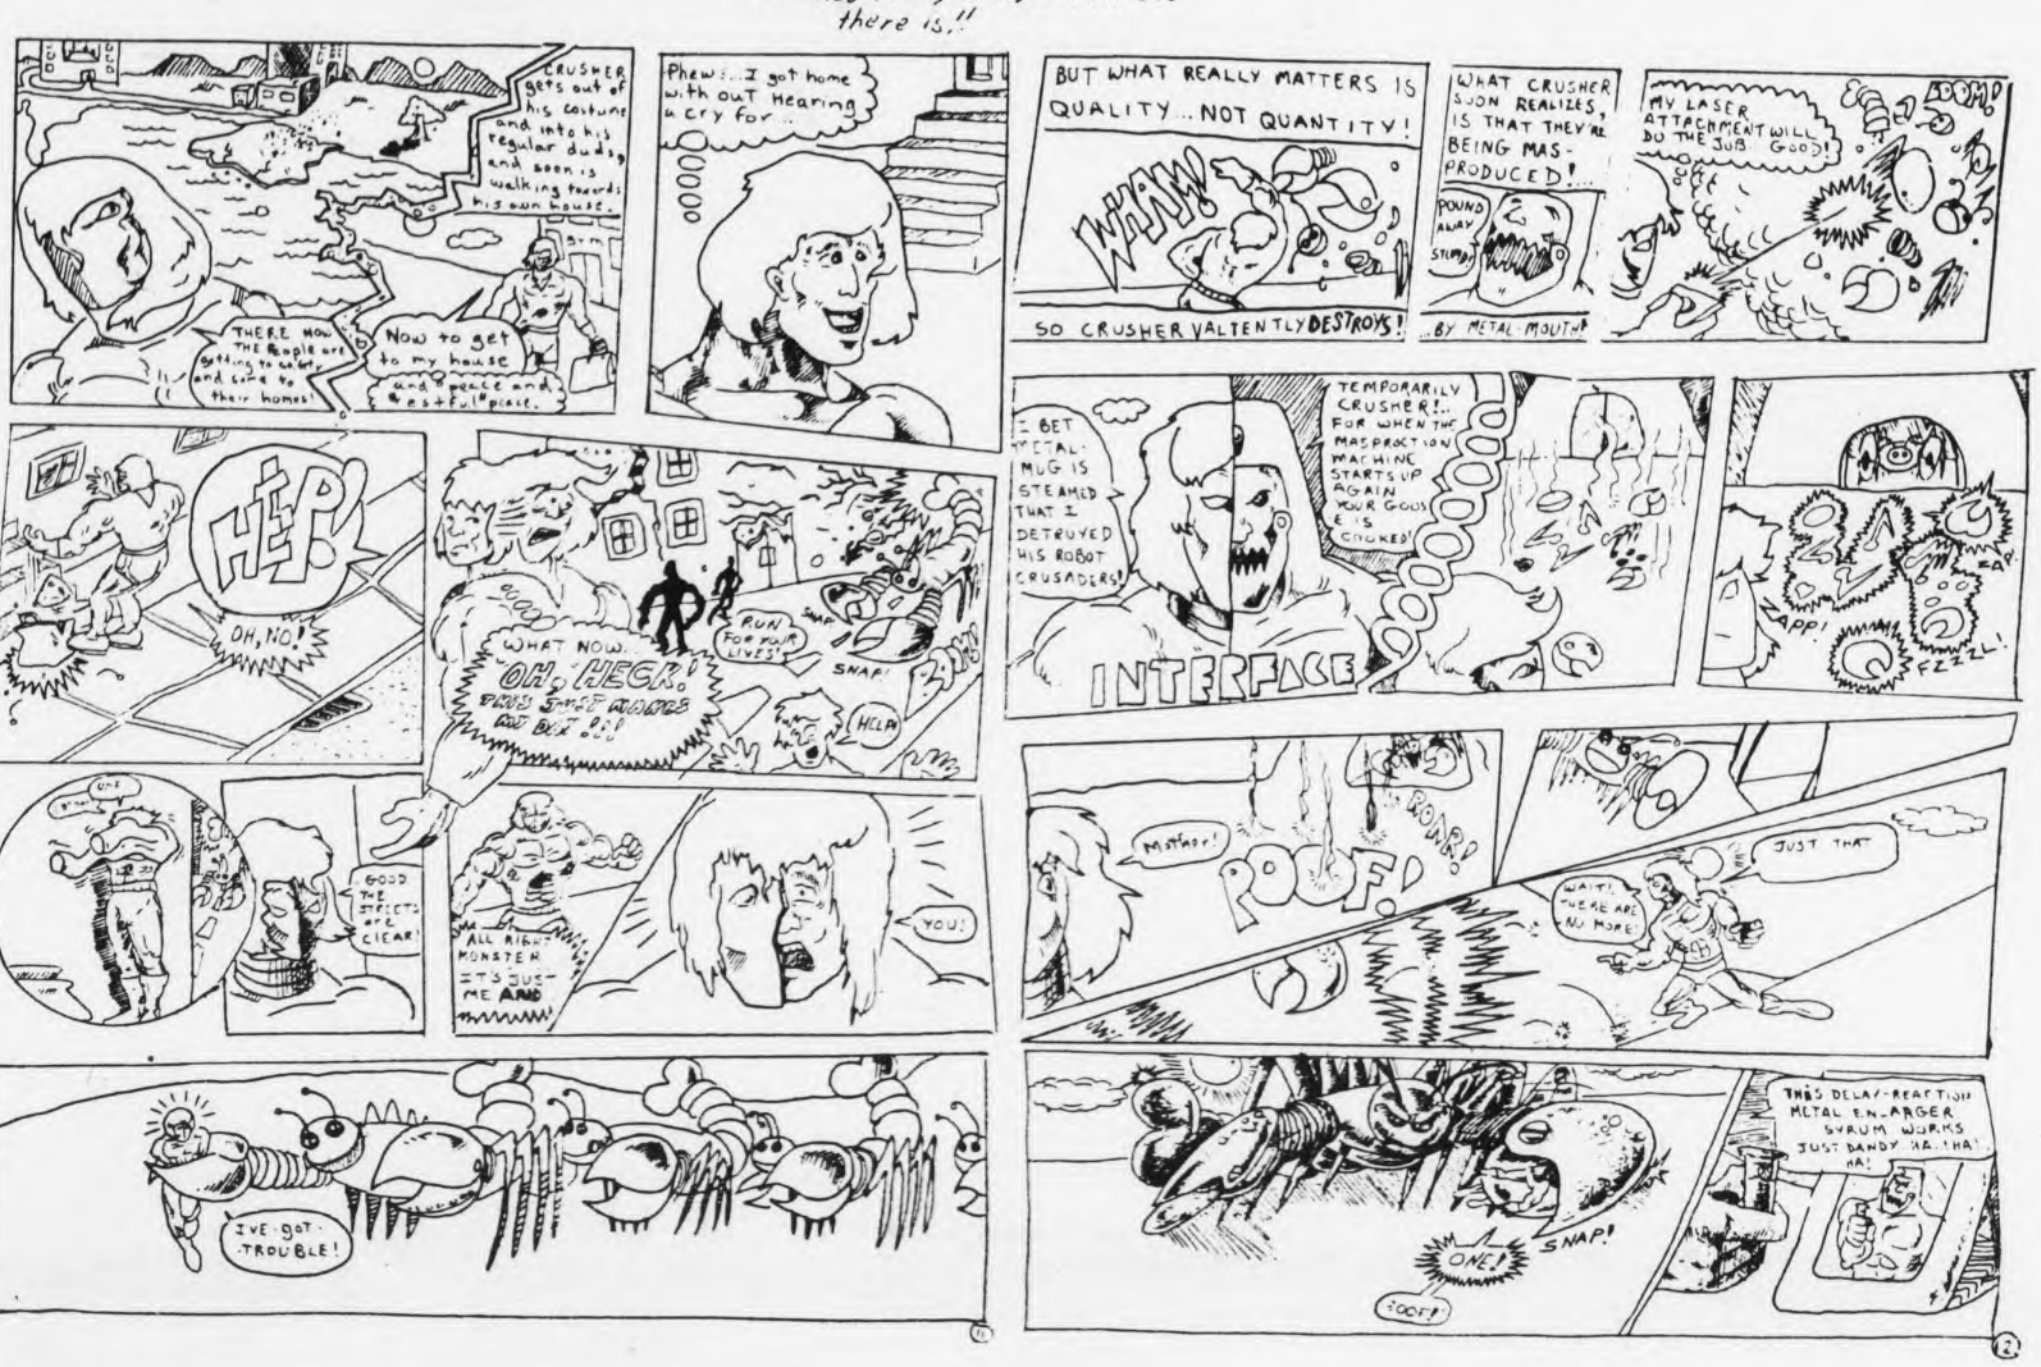
Letter

Anderson thanks rep. on tax repeal

(This letter was sent to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. Ed.)

Thank you for your votes this year to repeal the 7 1/2 percent surtax. As you probably know by now, Citizens for Limited Taxation has filed a petition to repeal the surtax and limit the future growth in state taxes to no more than the growth in Massachusetts wages and salaries.

Several legislators have already offered to collect signatures for this petition, which we expect to place on the 1986 ballot. We are delighted that members of the political establishment will be working with us on this project so that, unlike the Proposition 2 1/2 campaign, it won't be Us against All of You. Knowing that many of you have been trying for years to repeal the "temporary" surtax, we see our petition as the logical next step for All of Us.



We are extending this invitation to all House members who voted to repeal the surtax on both May 15 and June 20. Anyone who has not already clearly indicated his/her desire to get involved in this initiative campaign as either a petitioner or a co-ordinator for his district should call the CLT office as soon as possible and talk with Chip Faulkner, who is in charge of the petition drive.

Thank you again for your constant support of surtax repeal; we look forward to working with you.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

Massachusetts will be represented in a most unique way on television this fall. Our state will have the distinction of being host to one of only two television series to film entirely outside of Hollywood. "Spenser: For Hire," a detective series based on Massachusetts author Robert B. Parker's novels, is currently filming in Boston and will premier on ABC in September.

In addition to this, Boston will also make TV history in another way this fall. "Spenser" brings the number of series set in Boston to four, the others being "Cheers," "St. Elsewhere" and, on cable, "The Paper Chase."

Much credit for Boston's rise to prominence as a setting for television shows and films, such as "The Verdict' with Paul Newman, goes to the Massachusetts Film Bureau and its efforts to bring projects here since its inception in 1977.

The work is now paying off for Massachusetts in a most profitable way. After some initial difficulty in generating interest in Boston within the film community, the film bureau, under the direction of Mary Lou Crane, now finds that producers are actively seeking out the city as a featured location.

In addition to "Spenser," other projects filmed in Massachusetts include two major films soon to be released: "My Summer Vacation," starring popular teen actors Demi Moore and John Cusak, and "Where are the Children" starring Jill Clayburgh. Other productions featuring Vanessa Redgrave and Karl Malden are also currently filming in the state.

"The ripple effect is quite substantial," says Roger Burke of the Massachusetts Film Bureau. "This has resulted in economic development which is very good for the state."

"Spenser: For Hire" illustrates the impact of filming in Boston on the state's economy. According to Burke, each episode will cost about $1 million and 1/4 to 1/3 of that will be spent in Massachusetts. Also, 40 percent of the crew is from within the state and hundreds of local actors and extras will be hired. "Spenser" will also extensively utilize Boston's first Hollywood-style sound stage, Filmarts, located in Brighton, and is giving this new facility a big boost.

The producers of "Spenser" have referred to Boston as one of the stars of the series. We can all hope that the network executives give the show, and its "star" city, a fair chance. It is scheduled, unfortunately, to be shown Friday night opposite two popular series.

If "Spenser" does find itself in need of a boost, maybe Massachusetts' own Doug Flutie could be featured in a few episodes. Possibly he could even help Spenser solve a few cases while the injury that has kept him off the football field heals.

Watch out Hollywood, Boston is looking over your shoulder.

Selectmens' Observations

What a wedding !

Monday night, selectmen were reviewing a very ordinary request to use the Little League field Sept. 21. Nothing extraordinary about playing a few innings of softball at the field, they stated, and quickly approved the request.

Then someone noted that Beverly McLaughlin, daughter of former Selectman George W. McLaughlin was scheduled to be married after the ballgame.

It seems, selectmen were told, Beverly, her fiance and members of their wedding guest list, will play a few innings of softball prior to the ceremony.

They will begin the game at 10 a.m. and conclude about 1:30 p.m. Beverly will be married about a half-hour after the final out.

What happens if the game goes into extra innings?

No Red Sox lovers

Prior to Monday night's meeting, Selectman Diane Sullivan took several tickets for Tuesday night's Red Sox game from her briefcase. She explained the box tickets would not be used, so they were free to the first takers.

Members of the sparse audience looked at each other and then at the tickets spread across the table. There was not a mad rush to grab the generous offer.

Have the Red Sox sunk to such a low level of respect that people will even reject free tickets? Perhaps it was the rainy weather that dampened our spirit and team loyalty, after all it is the end of the season.

Finally, about four of the tickets were taken, leaving several unwanted and untouched. These days, you can't even give things away.

Riding Club members receive annual awards

At the 1985 Annual Riding Club Banquet and Awards Night several junior members were recognized for their participation in the 4-H program. Those junior members receiving their First Year Pins were: Michele Babin, Sarah Barrow, Julie Bowdoin, Sara Corbett, Michele Hart, Meg Cosman, Julie Nussdorfer, Hilary Proodian, Jennifer McKenna, Sarah Douglas, and Missy Wetzel.

Second Year Pins went to: Lisa Harris, Karen Marks, Amy Mitman, Cindy Spooner, Tanya Stein, and Jennifer Powers.

Recipients of Third Year Pins were: Jill Hamilton, Ann Marie McKenna, Erin Powell, and Heather Ripley.

Fourth Year Pins went to: Laura McKenna and Jennifer Ellingwood.

The only member to receive a Fifth Year Pin was Jean Garvey.

Several junior members also successfully completed their 4-H Horsemanship Ratings. Ratings are based on written and oral tests of many aspects of horsemanship, as well as a test of riding ability. Members also had to pass a barn inspection to demonstrate proper barn management techniques.

Another requirement is completion of specific mounted activities at increasingly difficult competitions determined by the National 4-H Council. The writtentests and barn inspections were administered by Sally Davenport of the Cohasset Riding Club. Oral exams and riding tests were given by Priscilla Lawn, who is an Equine Studies graduate of Cazenovia College and a local and state 4-H advisor.

Riders who passed Level 1 of the ratings were: Sarah Barrow, M. Babin, Julie Bowdoin, Sara Corbett, Jennifer McKenna, and Hilary Proodian. Level 2 riders were: Jill Hamilton, Cindy Spooner, and Jennifer Powers. Members completing Level 3 included: Ann Marie McKenna, and Heather Ripley. The only member to successfully complete Level 4 was Erin Powell. In the past, this level has been attained by only two other members who have both gone on to compete on the state and national level.

A few special awards were given to junior members. Jill Hamilton and Jean Garvey were recognized for their participation in several regional 4-H activities. Cindy Spooner and Hilary Proodian received awards for being the most improved riders of the year. The awards for the most improved horses of the year went to Amber, owned by Cindy Spooner, Flag, owned by Lisa Harris, and Apple Jack, owned by Ann Marie McKenna.

The ninth annual Cohasset Riding Club Horse Show will be held this year on Sept. 29 at Wheelwright Park. The show will begin at 9 a.m. and is open to Riding Club members and residents of Cohasset.

Lynn Briggs Mielke will be the judge, with Tom Gormly as ringmaster. the show will feature a variety of classes including equitation, jumping, pleasure, and trail. There will be divisions for both junior and adult riders.

The admission is free. Plan to stop by and enjoy the show!

Kjer attends Relocation conference

John Reardon, board of directors vice chairman at the Jack Conway Company, and Relocation Division manager Michelle Kjer of Cohasset were featured speakers at the mid-year conference of the RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service in San Francisco.

Reardon spoke on the RELO computer program and was a member of the Mergers and Acquisitions panel. Kjer was a member of a panel on Specialized Assistance to Transferees. She also represented New England RELO members on the national coordinators council.

As experts in real estate and relocation services, Reardon and Kjer discussed new trends and concepts to better serve families that are relocating from one community to another.

With nearly 1,100 member companies and more than 3,300 member offices, the RELO network of independent real estate brokers specializes in helping families to sell a house in one geographic area and buy a home in another.

Past church school teachers - Please look around for past editions of Teacher's Guides you may have used. We would like to use some of them.

An invitation - Remember our choir rehearsals every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Bates Hall. Here's an opportunity for you to take an active part in your church and you'll find the rewards amazing. Everyone is welcome. Please volunteer.

First Parish

Services - resume at the 10:30 a.m. hour on Sundays.

Old fashioned church picnic - will be held Sunday, Sept. 22 in the field between the Martins' and the Ellises'. Everyone should plan to attend and have fun! There will be a band between 3 and 5 p.m., and a second band from 5 to 6 p.m. There will be root beer on draft, plenty of refreshments, family relay races, volley ball, badminton, croquet, and horse shoes.

Parish personals - We note with sadness the death of Jack Duncombe, Aug. 26. Jack was a people person, a loyal friend, especially to the young people of our community. A memorial service for Jack was held at the Meeting House Aug. 29.

Music notes - If there is anyone out there who likes to sing and enjoys good company, we cordially invite you to join us.

Youth group - An opening meeting is being scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 15. A letter will be sent to all 9-12th graders with more details. I hope to have an active group this year with a calendar prepared by the group of all the activities. I have already looked into a ski trip which involves long range planning. Read the newsletter next week for more information.

Getting to know me - Any South Shore persons interested in learning more about themselves and their relationships to others in the framework of C.G. Cohasset Worship . . .

Stephen's has been prepared. We hope you will take advantage of the full program of Christian education that is being offered.

Senior high travel - The Senior Highs of St. Stephen's will head for an enjoyable weekend at the Bells' farm in Alexandria, New Hampshire, leaving at 9 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 21. There will be fun and prayer, games and planning for the year ahead - amid the beautiful countryside of rural New Hampshire. The youth will return Sunday around 5:30 p.m.

Earl Chamberlain retires - Earl Chamberlain stepped down as Carilloneur for St. Stephen's after 47 years. For much of that time he was also organist-choirmaster. Earl has been appointed Carillonneur-Emeritus so that even in retirement he will be associated with the magnificent instrument he has cared for and played for so many years.

The recitals given each summer are the longest, continuing series of carillon recital in the country. Earl has directed the carillon program here longer than anyone else in the country, and put his mark on a unique instrument. The lovely peal of bells are a blessing not only to St. Stephen's but to all of Cohasset. Thank you, Earl, for all you have given and for your continued care and guidance.

Choir weekend in New Hampshire - St. Stephen's Choir, under the leadership of Richard Hunter, which provides such fine music for our worship (and has such fun doing it) as well as special musicial programs throughout the year, will go off on its annual weekend to the Bells' farm in Alexandria, New Hamsphire on Sept. 28 and 29.

Anyone who enjoys singing and would like to join the choir, it is open to all and now is a good time to come on board. You don't have to be an expert in music to join. Rehearsals are Thursdays at 8 p.m. If you would like to sing and learn something too, speak to Rick Hunter about joining the choir.

Course for seniors - The Social Service League will sponsor three evenings of education in the area of drugs and alcohol at St. Stephen's beginning Wednesday, Oct. 2 at 7:30 p.m. Films plus experts in the field will discuss the most up-to-date information. The first session on October 2 will be for parents of all ages. The final gathering on October 16 will combine both groups. Don't miss these informative evenings on a topic that is timely and affects us all.

City mission invitation - Sunday, October 6 after the 10 a.m. service, a bus will leave St. Stephen's for the Dorchester, Roxbury and Jamaica Plain communities of Boston where the Episcopal City Mission has supported low-income housing efforts over the last 15 years. We will learn something of these neighborhoods and the mission of the Episcopal Church to strengthen them. If you would like to know more about the important work of the Episcopal City Mission, reserve a seat on the bus for October 6 by calling Carole at the church office, 383-1083.

Appeal from treasurer - Every year our pledge falls off during the summer. This year however, we find ourselves in a real cash flow bind. It would be most helpful and indeed is necessary for each parishioner to attempt to bring his/her pledge up to date if possible. Prepayments would also be welcome.

Council on Aging - The Council provides meals to senior citizens at the Unitarian Parish House every Tuesday at noon. All are invited and the group hopes to swell the numbers from the dozen or so who now attend. The meals are prepared by the high school and the fellowship is always enjoyable.

If you would like to help serve a meal once amonth (all the churches in town try to take one of the meals), let the Rector know.

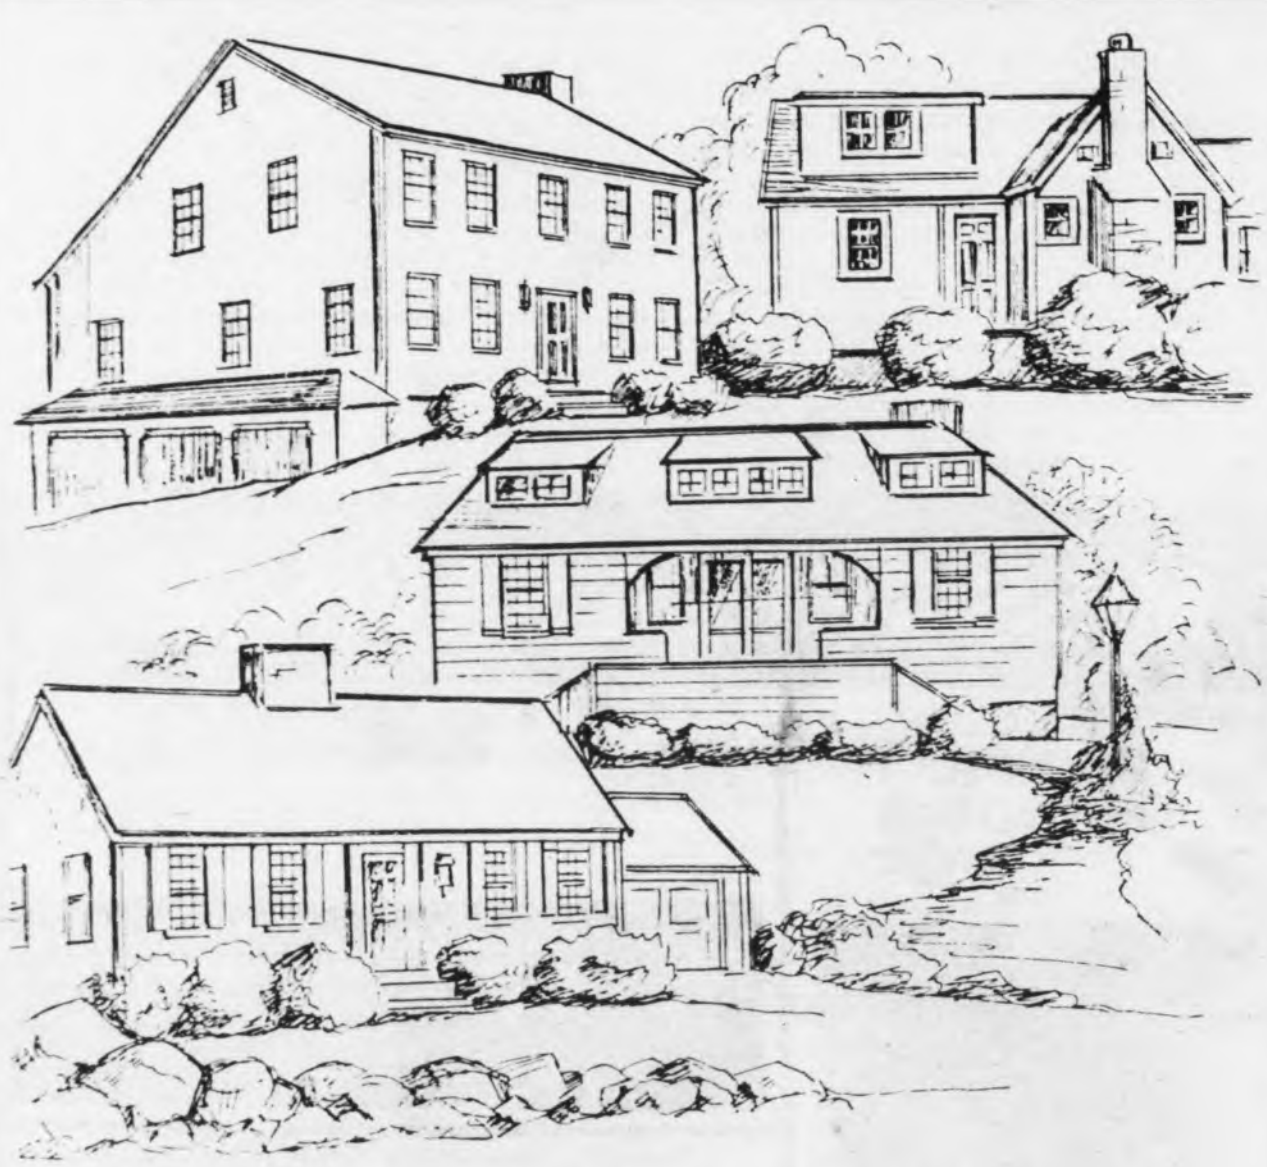
Public Notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 85P2319E1

Estate of JOHN S. DUNCOMBE late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that SUZANNE H. DUNCOMBE of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.



If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on September 25, 1985.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the third day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty five.

Appel-Jensen featured in Art Center exhibit

A two-person exhibit—featuring forms in clay by Judy Rossman and monoprints by Joan Appel—has been selected as the first exhibit of the fall season at the South Shore Art Center.

Works by these two South Shore artists will hang in the Center's gallery, 103 Ripley Road, from Sept. 16 through Oct. 12. An opening reception will be held Sunday, Sept. 22 from 5 to 7 p.m. immediately following the annual fall open house for meeting instructors and enrolling in courses.

Both artists view their work as an expression of their lives. For Rossman, she celebrates the human form in all its moods and activities through her clay forms and with these forms "there are people stretching, celebrating, dancing, loving," she described of her work.

Her early childhood experiences in an active household with people coming and going have seeded her lifelong artistic inspiration in celebrating the human form. And as "I grew, my art became my order, my peace in a world of bedlam," she said.

Rossman, a graduate of the Massachusetts College of Art and Wayne State University in Detroit, owns the Country Way Pottery in Scituate. Her exhibits include Metro Arts Gallery in Springfield, Federal Reserve Bank groups show, Golden Gull Gallery in Plymouth, South Shore Art Invitational Art Festivals and other group and invitational exhibits.

Her work may be seen at Spectrum Galleries of New England, Newton Pottery House, Alexander's Pottery in Rockport, Zoo Gallery in Ft. Walton, Fla., the Gold Place, Southfield Minn., and other galleries. She has taught at the South Shore Art Center, the Scituate public schools and in Michigan.

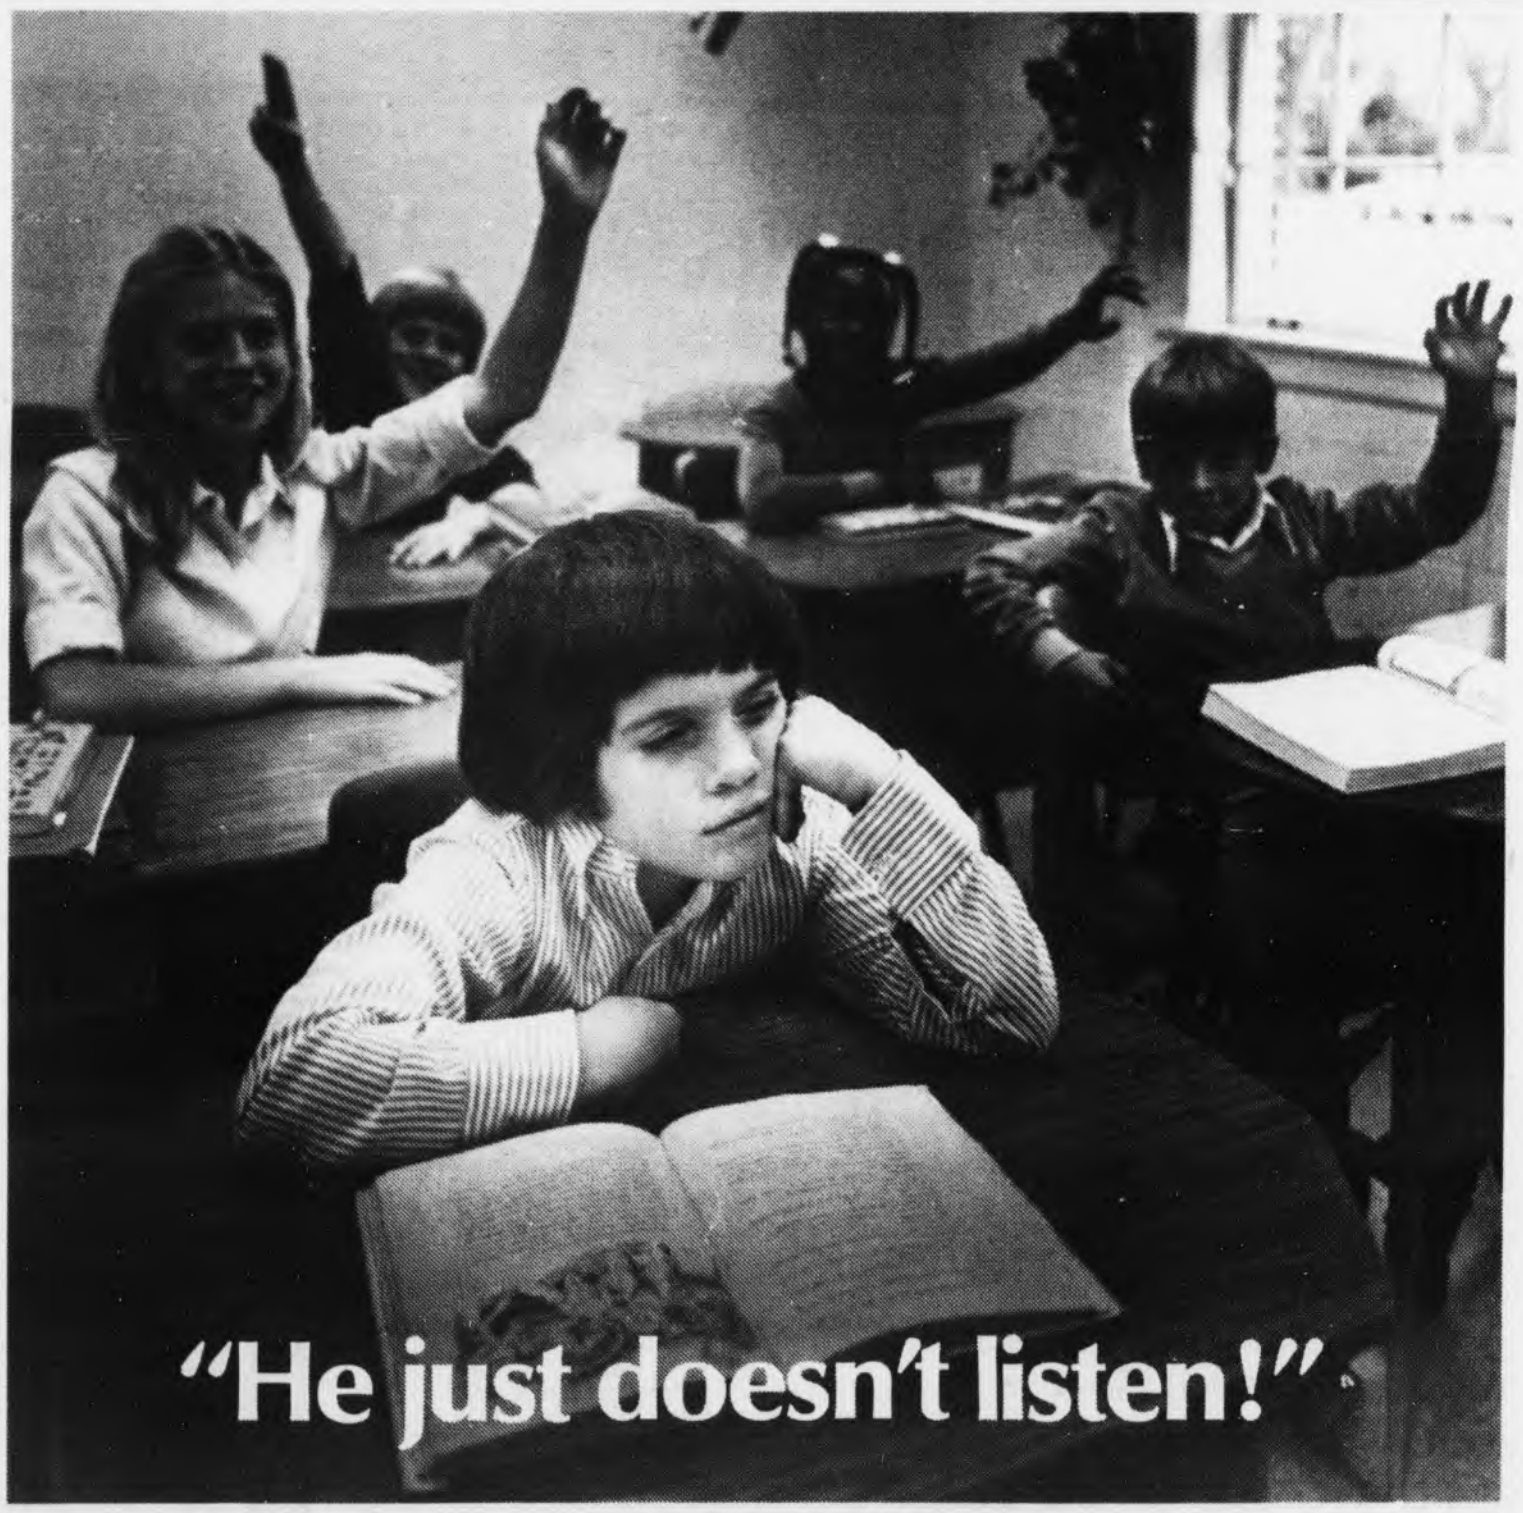
Joan Appel-Jensen demonstrates technique of monotyping.

Jensen describes her work as "an extension of myself. As I work through my life and am affected by the heights and depressions which life offers, my experiences are reflected in my art and my poetry."

Working with monotypes impels Jensen to work fast so "the thoughts which are the most free, bubble up and burst free on the surface," she said. She sees herself as working best when she does not have too long a time to think, plan, shape and control her thoughts.

Jensen, currently working as the development manager for the South Shore Art Center, has a diverse background dotted with art, music, business, acting and foreign language translating. Her one-person shows include Benjamin's Art Gallery in Tampa, Fla.; Anderson-Marsh, St. Petersburg; South Shore Art Center's President's Choice exhibit; South Shore Conservatory and the Frame-Up Gallery.

Educated at Syracuse University, Paier School of Art and the New England Conservatory of Music, Jensen has been affiliated with art associations in Florida, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Her awards include Boston Globe Golden Key, honorable mention in the South Shore Arts Festival, second prize in both the Duxbury and the Scituate Art Associations and honorable mention in the Cape Cod Art Association. She was invited to show in the National Women's Exhibition at the Gallerie Triangle in Washington, D.C.



The words of these two artists, Rossman and Jensen, presented together in the South Shore Art Center Gallery, may be viewed Monday through Friday from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, contact the Center, 383-9548.

Could be, he just can't hear well enough. If you think that's impossible, listen to the facts. Over 11 million Americans are estimated to have uncorrected hearing handicaps. And when hearing slows down, so does the learning process.

It isn't always easy to detect hearing problems in young children. One sign may be a child who doesn't learn to talk by the age of two. Or a child who begins to make sounds and words, then stops. And certainly, any mother who had three-day measles while pregnant should watch her child's hearing cautiously.

If you think your child might not be listening for a reason you haven't heard, call your physician. He may recommend a hearing test.

It could keep your child from joining some pretty deafening statistics on hearing disabilities.

At the South Shore Science Center . . .

The South Shore Natural Science Center will celebrate the Plymouth County Tercentennial at the Corn Festival, Saturday, Sept. 21, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Science Center, Jacobs Lane, Norwell.

The Corn Festival will feature traditional New England music and dance with the Green Mountain Volunteers, just returned from a seven-week, eight-country European Tour. Indian Chief One Bear and friends will present Indian dancing and drumming. At 5 p.m. there will be a New England Bean Hole Dinner (pre-purchased tickets required).

There will be numerous craft demonstrations; colonial, harvest and nature crafts for sale, guided fall nature walks, a Farmers Market and an Agricultural Fair (save your outstanding fruits, vegetables, flowers, herbs and preserves to enter).

Demonstrations by local crafters will include: tinsmithing by David Williams of North Marshfield; rughooking by Faye Jordan Titus of Duxbury; leatherwork by "Skiddy" Cassoni of Whitman; apple pressing by Barney Corrow of Marshfield; bird carving by Dick Barke of Scituate; cut and pierce lampshades by Linda Nicholson of Holbrook; dried flower arrangements by Lavalie Hoss of Rockland; basketmaking by Susan Pithie of Norwell; flintknapping by Ray Seamons of North Carver; slab pottery by Diane Brakely of Scituate; weaving by Nancy Latady of Norwell; sunviewing through solar scopes with Rolf Egon of Weymouth; herbal vinegars with Darlene Beauvais of Norwell; rug-braiding by Adele Innis of Hull, and honey extraction by Rollin Bailey and Morris Richmond of Norwell.

Rory O'Donohue, an immigrant Irish stonemason has travelled to the festival from the year 1847. Hear anecdotes and observations from this unusual character at 1:30 and 3:30 p.m.

Goodies, including muffins, bread, brownies and cookies will be available from the Farm Kitchen. Heartier fare will be found during the day at the Kernal's Snack Bar.

Admission: adults, $1.50; children under 14, $.75; under 3, free.

For more information, call 659-2559.

Historical Society Harbor Tour Sept. 22

Sunday, September 22, the Cohasset Historical Society will hold its fall walking tour to Cohasset's historic harbor, known in past times as "Ship Cove."

The tour will meet at the Society's Maritime Museum, Cohasset Center, at 3 p.m. Society Curator David Wadsworth will conduct the walk down Elm Street, itself once known as "Ship Cove Lane," to the head of the Cove. Elm Street, until recently, was a shaded road, narrower than it is today, lined with stately elms.

Through the 18th and 19th centuries, it also was lined with the homes of sea captains and shipowners. Elm Street is one of the town's "ancient ways," dating to the earliest settlement of Cohasset in the 1600s. The town's second Post Office was located near Ship Cove Lane, its first centralized school, the Osgood School, was constructed there in 1890, and a bustling small seaport could be found at its eastern terminus a century ago. From Elm Street the Historical Society's walking tour will move to Border Street. There the town's largest fishing and maritime mercantile businesses were located, starting with Samuel Bates' wharf and buildings in the 1750s, Abraham Tower's wharf and store before 1790 and Elisha Doane's wharf and fish-packing shed perhaps at about the same time.

On Border Street was the home of Deacon Abel Kent, one of Cohasset's most prominent early citizens. Later his house was lived in by seafarer and salvage diver Michael Neptune Brennock. Further along Border Street, as one approaches the reversing tidal falls at the entrance to the Gulf, is the site of Elisha Doane's tidal grist mill.

Today a boat yard occupies the site, but from 1792 to 1862 the grist mill and its adjacent mill dam were well known landmarks. Resting astride a natural sluiceway, the mill ground corn for the citizens of both Cohasset and Scituate. The mill itself burned down in the year 1862, and for many years thereafter Abraham H. and Newcomb B. Tower's lumber wharf was located at the old mill site. Charles Fink of Cohasset's Harbor Committee will speak to the walking tour at Samuel Bates' wharf; his subject will include a carefully researched talk on the subject of Cohasset's 19th century fishing business, and Historical Commission Chairman Noel Ripley will lead the walkers to the final stop, Government Island.

Following the wind-up of the Historical Society's walking tour of the Harbor, a shuttle van will be available for those who wish to return to Cohasset Center. Visitors also are invited to tour the Society's two museums at the center; the Maritime Museum and the Capt. John Wilson Historical House.

For the walking tour a small donation will be requested. Plan to join the Historical Society for this unique fall event to Cohasset's historic waterfront.

Studds open meetings

Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) will return to the South Shore the weekend of Sept. 14 and 15 to begin his 20th round of town-by-town Open Meetings.

Sunday, Sept. 15, he wil hold Open Meetings from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. at the Memorial School Cafeteria in Hull; from 3 to 4 p.m. at the Bates Building at 43 Elm Street in Cohasset; and from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the Small Barnes Auditorium in the Hingham Town Hall.

These meetings begin the 20th round of informal visits by Studds to each community in the Tenth Congressional District. The Congressman holds Open Meetings in each of the district's 45 cities and towns roughly twice a year.

A look at Cohasset's association with Metco

The child's grades, standardized tests and the interview help the coordinator decide which child should be placed within the community. Mills insists they do not select "only the cream of the crop."

We are not that selective," she adds. "We try not in way to eliminate those students who may need special education. We try to match the student who we feel will survive in this educational system."

A lot of emphasis is placed on a strong commitment by the parents to assist the student through that educational process. "We need to know the parent will be fully committed to this. . . that they will be willing to get up at 5 a.m. and get the child on the bus. . . and will be willing to participate in this community. We like the parents to be involved here," according to Mills.

Another goal of the coordinator is to start each child in the system as early as possible. Last year, for instance, one girl who graduated began her METCO involvement in the first grade at the Osgood.

"I like taking them at an early age, not just at the seventh or tenth grade levels. If they haven't been in Cohasset during their earlier years, it becomes increasingly difficult for them to keep up in the later grades."

She continues, "If they start at a younger age here, they are going to be competitive with the other students. If we get them in as senior high students, it may be that much harder for them to survive academically."

The kids in the Cohasset METCO program are from Roxbury, Mattapan and Hyde Park. A typical high school student catches a bus in Boston at 6:15 a.m., while the elementary student will leave at 6:45 a.m. The high school student returns home by 3:30 p.m., and the younger child will be home at about 4:30 that afternoon.

It's a long day, Mills concedes. For that reason, host families in Cohasset are sought for each child. Friends of the METCO students are requested to serve as host families in an emergency situation, be it a medical reason or if a child failed to make the last bus trip home.

Athletics pose a perplexing problem for Mills, who must help the student juggle his class schedule, practice time, and transportation home. Late vans will be available for those students who participate in athletic team pratices or METCO youngsters who have stayed afterschool for tutorial assistance.

"We don't allow a student to stay after school just to fool around. They must be involved in athletics or are receiving help from a teacher," Mills says.

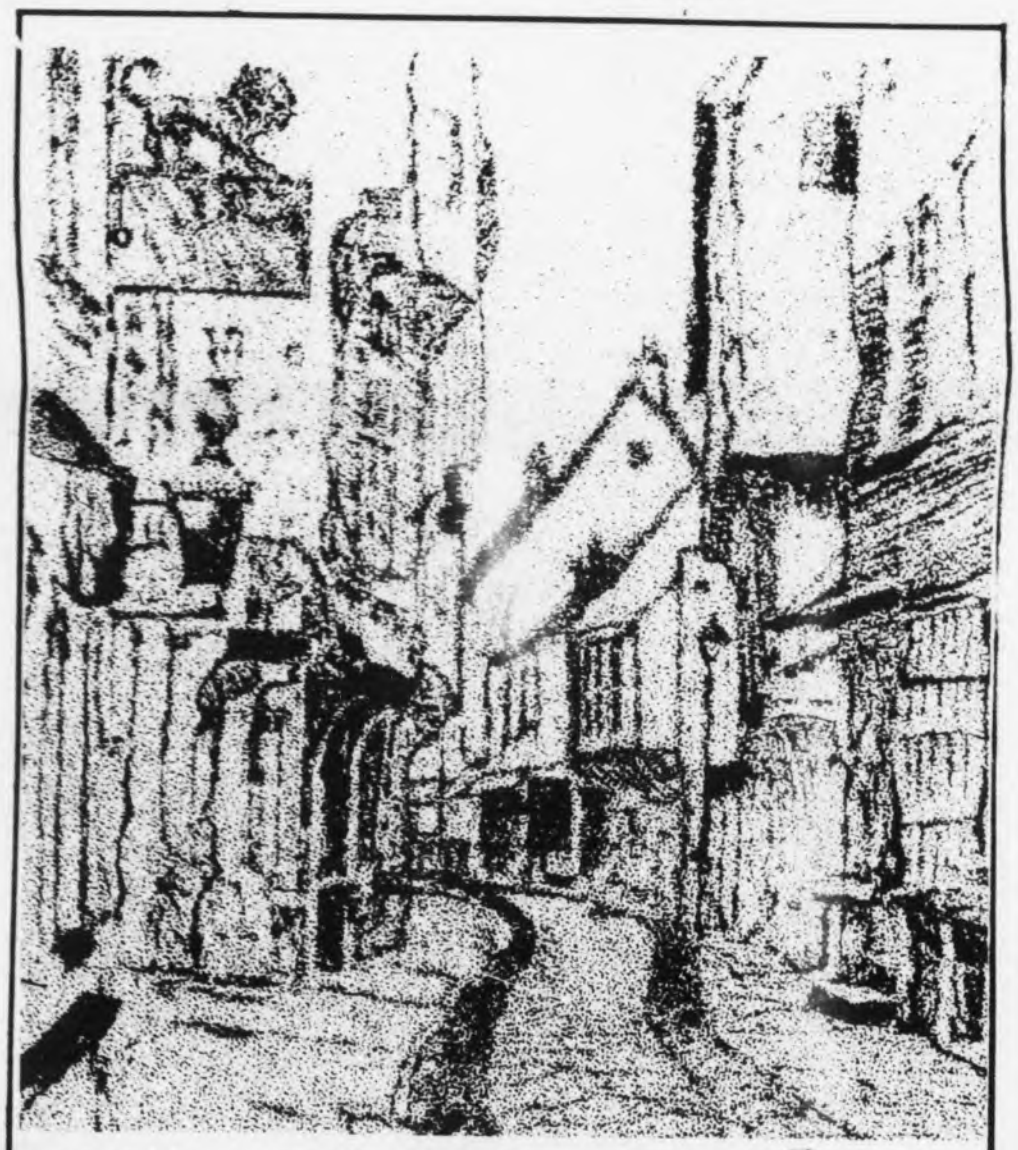
There was some indiscreet talk last year that METCO was the source of team members for last year's championship basketball squad, and the football team. Mills flatly denies any type of "recruitment" practice in Cohasset.

"If the coaches did any type of recruitment, they didn't do it through this office, and I'm the only person here who does the selecting. I suppose that type of talk always happens when you're on top, but it's absolutely untrue.

"Most of the kids began in the elementary grades. One basketball player entered in the ninth grade and one in the eighth grade with previous coordinators. There's no way you can say any of these kids have been recruited," Mills adds.

She is adamant that above athletics, students must concentrate on academics. "I always tell them that they're here, number one, for an education. No matter how well you play here, no matter how much publicity you get here, that will not be the deciding factor in what the future will hold for you. If you can't keep up in college with the minimum requirements there, you're going to be flat out with nothing," she states.

Some recent critics of the state METCO program have charged that the program should be abolished and the money poured into an ailing Boston school system. Mills likes things the way they are, and figures that just by sinking a lot of money into a system that has declined through the years will not create an instant cure.



"I think that if the program was eliminated, most of these parents would not put their children back into public school," she says, "but would carry their education into private schools.

"If you ask any of the kids here," Mills continues, "I'm sure they'll say they prefer what they get here to what they would get anywhere else. These kids want to stay where they are now."

Fall programs for Cohasset Troop 28

The Court of Honor for Troop 28 was held Sept. 9. David Farrag received his First Class Badge and Camping Skill Award. Jim Long received his Basketry Merit Badge. Mark Lavange received Personal Fitness, Citizenship in the World, Indian Lore, Orienteering and Conservation Merit Badges. Anthony Bonano received Swimming and Canoeing Merit Badges. Ed Grafton earned his Safety Badge.

Congratulations to Jeff Brown, son of Merle and Joan Brown, who received officially his Eagle Badge. Jeff's Eagle Project provided a very worthy service to the Cohasset community. Jeff along with other scouts and friends refurbished the several rooms in the lower level of the Cohasset Town Hall. They spent many hours repairing, plastering and painting the walls to bring the area up to standard. This area can be used in the event of an emergency disaster.

The Troop Committee would appreciate anyone donating any Merit Badge Advancement Books their sons may be finished with. The troop wants to update their collection and will purchase any necessary ones.

Thanks to Joe McElroy, Advancement Chairman, and his wife Mary, the troop will be more organized and scouts will be encouraged to earn their badges to advance rank. Each scout will have a Merit Badge Councellor. They are: Eagles, Arthur Lehr; Life, Charles McLaughlin; Star, Peter Lelecas; First Class, John Bryant; Second Class, Jane Long and Tenderfoot, Paul Almeida.

Peter Lelecas is our Trip and Activity Chairperson. Two years ago he helped organize the trip to Washington D.C. Next year we would like to have another trip possibly to Niagra Falls in N.Y. and Canada, or Gettysburg. Any suggestions by parents and scouts will be greatly appreciated. The expenses will depend on our fundraising or the cost per scout. Please call 383-6195 for your ideas to Peter.

New Membership Chairperson is Jane Long. Any boy interested in joining may call her at 383-1281. Troop Committee chairperson is Chuck McLaughlin. Scoutmaster is Merle Brown. Assistant Scoutmasters are John Bryant and John Pape, and Transportation Coordinator is Dick Caffrey.

Calendar of Events:

Sept. 14, Sat. In the morning scouts interested in earning waterskiing, fishing, or boating Merit badge contact Mr. McElroy at 383-0505.

Sept. 14, Sat. Scouting in Wheelright Park—time to be announced (2 hrs. in afternoon).

Sept. 15, Sun. On local cable stations interviews with local Scout leaders and video from 1985 National Jamboree in Va. will begin at 12 noon. Promotion for Scout awareness.

Sept. 19, Thurs. School Night for Scouting. Sign up for Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts at First Parish House at 7:15 p.m.

Sept. 23, Mon. Regular Boy Scout Meeting at Osgood gym at 7:30 p.m. Future schedules will be distributed to each scout.

Sept. 27—29 Mt. Cardigan N. Hampshire trip. Scouts will leave about 6 p.m. from Osgood parking lot. Cost: $7.50 per scout for food expenses. All Sat. will be devoted to mt. climbing trail. Bring adequate gear for cold weather.

Oct. 6, Sun. Troop Committee meeting at Merle Brown's house, 546 Beechwood St., (near Church St.) at 7:30 p.m. All parents are welcome to attend and to share ideas and help structure a good scouting program. Any questions call Merle at 383-1625.

Oct. 7, Mon. Regular Scout meeting, 7:30 p.m. at Osgood Gym.

Oct. 11—14 Massachusetts Jamboree at Tewksbury, cost: $6.25 per scout, time of departure to be announced.

Explorers Post 28: There will be a meeting for the Explorers and those interested in joining the program can attend at Arthur Lehr's house at 200 North Main St., Cohasset on Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. Any person ages 14 to 21 can become an explorer. The Explorers are charted for Emergency preparedness, emergency medical first aid, search and rescue, and high adventure, including camping and rock climbing.

Any questions call Mr. Lehr at 383-0388.

Cohasset Girl Scouts earn honors

The following girls have earned their wings and have "flown up" from Brownies to Junior Girl Scouts: Allegra Snyder, Ann Lindgren, Lara Martin, Christa Angsberg, Kim Ward, Bonnie Kruger, Julie Larabee, Renee Prisble, and Vicki Maynard—all members of Troop #4615 sponsored by Mary Ann Hansen and Fran Lindgren.

Also Lauren Almeida, Sarah Atherton, Kate Brown, Marnie DeMichele, Cilla Goff, Becky Golden, Julie Good, Mandy Hahn, Johanna Horn, Alison Killilea, Courtney Schultz, Megan Staunton and Lindsey Tibbetts are proud new Girl Scouts from Troop #4616, lead by Carolyn Horn and Regina Schultz.

The girls received their official wings and girl scout pins from senior scouts at a ceremony at the Second Congregational Church. They were formally inducted into Girl Scouts by Mrs. Louise Smullen and Mrs Rebecca Bates-McArthur.

Scouts can register for this year's program at the Monday, Sept. 16 meeting at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., from 6 to 7:30 p.m. For information call Mrs. Smullen at 383-1327.

United Way program kicks off

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay kicked off this year's fundraising campaign on Sept. 5, with General Campaign Chairman William L. Brown announcing that a record $7,828,763—or 20 percent of the 1985 goal of $29 million—has already been pledged.

Brown, chairman of the Bank of Boston, addressed more than 600 volunteers who gathered at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel for the kickoff event, "Breakfast of Champions." He saluted the 30 United Way Pacesetters, local organizations that ran employee campaigns in July and August to set the pace for the annual fall campaign.

United Way's South Division, chaired by volunteer David B. Lynch, chairman, Multibank Financial Corporation in Quincy, is attempting to raise $838,000 during this year's campaign.

United Way agencies serving Cohasset include: South Shore Chapter, Red Cross; South Shore Day Care Services; South Shore YMCA; and Visiting Nurse Association of the South Shore.

WEEKENDS ARE MADE FOR MISHAPS.
For reasons unknown to mere mortals, most minor illnesses and injuries requiring immediate medical attention strike on weekends, holidays and other singularly inconvenient times.
So you find yourself in the hospital emergency room waiting for someone to look after your sprained ankle, lacerated foot, burned hand, sore throat, fever, or other semi-serious condition.
No more.
Because now the HealthFirst Walk-in Medical Care Center in your community is open 7 days a week, from 8:00 a.m. until 10:00 p.m. (Weymouth facility 8:00 a.m. – 8:00 p.m.)
That includes weekends and holidays. Which is when most mishaps choose to occur.
So, the next time your weekend is punctuated with a minor disaster that can't wait until Monday office hours for attention, bring it to HealthFirst right away. Bring this ad with you and get $5.00 off your visit. But be careful clipping it out, we wouldn't want you to suffer two mishaps in one weekend.
And please. Don't call for an appointment. We don't believe in them.

Scituate residents fear possible development

Residents of a quiet dead end street in North Scituate are worried their neighborhood may become an alternative traffic route to Cohasset.

Although no specific plans to develop land abutting Gannett Pasture Road have been filed with the Cohasset Planning Board, and no deeds have recently passed through the assessor's office, residents have seen signs pointing to possible development of this vacant property. Perc tests, not filed with the Cohasset Board of Health, have been taken in recent months, they say.

These residents are concerned that the single-family homes they purchased years ago will no longer be located in a quiet cul-de-sac. They fear that a new development in the Cohasset property will cut through to their street, opening the way to increased traffic and noise.

What these residents want to know is if there is any way they can stop a development from cutting through that property which abuts their dead end street with the Ledgewood Estates of Cohasset.

So far, they have not received the answers they wanted.

Cohasset Planning Board Chairman Christine Bassett said no development plans have been filed with that board. But, she noted, "every developer has certain rights and if he meets the subdivision control requirements of the town and the state, they have a right under law to put up a commercial or residential building, depending on the zoning requirements of the land."

Certain conditions may be attached to the board's approval of a subdivision, she noted, but if a developer meets all the requirements specified under law, the planning board is obliged to approve the plan.

There are various area, zoning and traffic regulations pertaining to all subdivisions, she noted, and the developer must meet all the requirements. But if the board were to deny a plan which did meet the subdivision control law requirements, the developer will likely seek immediate relief by enjoining that decision in superior court.

Bruce Westcott is one Gannett Pasture Road resident who has expressed concerns for the future of his neighborhood.

He is not against someone developing the property, noting that a property owner has certain legal rights. He simply wants to know if the roadway can be opened into Cohasset, and if so, "let me know so I can sell my house," he said.

"I prefer not having this issue hang over my head every couple of years," he said, referring to repeated rumors of development that have persisted for about 17 years.

"Every once in a while, steam shovels are backed up on our street and perc tests are done in the fields at the end of the street, opposite my home," he noted, describing the test engineers complete to study the drainage flow of property.

The latest tests were conducted the morning of Aug. 7, he informed the selectmen of Cohasset. "I suspect that the owner of this property intends to build on his property and that furthermore his intentions include physical changes to what is currently a cul-de-sac, in that Gannett Pasture Road would be extended and connected to another roadway," he stated.

"I don't want my street to become a short cut to Cohasset, or an extension of 20 more homes. There's at least ten acres there and a lot of unofficial perk tests have been done," he added.

He continued, "I am not against the development of that area. I wouldn't mind low income housing there, or cluster developments which are allowed in Cohasset. But I just want to know what's going to happen to my street before it's too late to get out of here."

Building Inspector Edward Poskus said he has seen no plans to develop the land, and has not been requested by the planning board to review any plans. He said his office has received many inquiries regarding the property.

Westcott said he had heard rumors that perhaps the town of Scituate holds the deed to the property at the rear of Gannett Pasture Road, with the restriction that it never be developed. He said it will be up to concerned neighbors to research that area.

Scituate Realtor George Kelly said there have been previous landowners he has represented who were interested in developing the property, but nothing was ever accomplished. He never heard anything about a restrictive deed held by the town.

One rumor which has circulated through the neighborhood is that Spensley Chevrolet of Chief Justice Cushing Highway has recently purchased the property abutting Gannett Pasture Road. No deeds have been registered with the Cohasset Assessor's office, and the Mariner's attempts to contact a Spensley spokesman were unsuccessful.

"I'll do whatever is necessary to prevent the development of this dead end street," resident Westcott said. "But no one has yet answered my concerns. I want to get out while I can."

Having a grand time on some go-carts are Dave Campbell and son, Corey, 3.

Cohasset High School fall sports preview

By Lisa Shumaker

Cross Country

The cross country team got off to its best start in several years. Not only did ten boys show an interest in running for the squad, but an amazing six girls also went out for Cohasset, enabling the Skippers to have an official girls team.

Coach Paul Narkiewicz says that once again his team is very young consisting of mostly seventh, eighth, and ninth graders, but that many of these runners are returning after a full year's experience and should show remarkable improvement over last year.

Narkiewicz was pleased with the running of the two seniors on the team, Brian Leary and Mike Greiner. Both boys are in very good shape according to Narkiewicz and should provide the leadership the team has been lacking. For the girls, Narkiewicz cited veteran Stephanie Endris and newcomers Lisa Gallagher and Karine Hortiaux as looking good. Cohasset had its first meet on Wednesday in Cohasset against Norwell. Monday, the team will be traveling to Scituate and take on both Scituate and Hanover as well.

Girls Field Hockey

The field hockey team had their biggest showing in years as about 53 girls participated in the preseason tryouts being held the past two weeks. Coach Gino DiGirolamo has narrowed the varsity team down to about 19 and the rest will probably play J.V.

DiGirolamo has been very pleased with the way in which his team has played the past couple of weeks and feels confident that Cohasset will qualify for the State Tournament in November. DiGirolamo attributes his team's overwhelming improvement over last year to the fact that many of the girls attended field hockey camp this past summer.

Lee Sullivan and Maria Cahill lead the team on both ends of the field. On offense, DiGirolamo will be looking toward Maureen Farren, Cindy Spooner and Julie Baudoin for goals. Sara Dickerman and Jill Shockman back up the entire team on defense. The girls open their season away on Wednesday as they face their arch rivals, Hanover. The game will undoubtedly be quite a challenge for the Skippers. On Friday, Cohasset plays Middleboro. This team has not posed much of a threat in the past, but Cohasset must keep on its toes and make sure it doesn't allow any letdowns.

Striders to hit the streets of Cohasset Sunday

The longer course begins on Highland Avenue and continues down South Main Street to Gannett Road in North Scituate to Border Street, and along Atlantic Avenue, Jerusalem Road and back to the town hall.

There will be coordinators available to give the runners their "splits" at each mile, and there'll be four water stops, Hollander said.

The organizer noted that entry forms have been available at running clubs and stores and at recent local roadraces. There is no age limitation, he said, so runners from five years to senior citizens will likely attempt the course.

The club will also have two members who will video tape the course and the actual race. "We will have a replay ready so the runners will be able to see themselves after the race," Hollander explained.

Among the other races sponsored by the club is the annual South Shore Hospital race, and in the fall the club organizes the annual Ed Henley Memorial Race. Hollander noted the proceeds from that race are given to a scholarship for a track athlete from Weymouth North or Weymouth South High School.

Henley was the club's founder and a former physical education instructor and track coach in Weymouth, Hollander said.

All provisions, including police, will be provided for Sunday's race. If the weather is cool and clear, Hollander said up to 500 runners may take part.

"This is a new race and some people are unaware of it," he added. "There are also a couple of other roadraces that day. But if all goes well, and we're sure it will, up to 500 people will be there. We certainly hope this becomes an annual thing."

When asked if this race conflicts in any way with the Cohasset Rotary's annual Race-by-the-Sea, Hollander quickly stated, "No. This race is in late summer and their race is in early spring. There's no interference with their race, and there shouldn't be any conflicts."

Weddings and engagements . . .

Mrs. James Hagler

Carroll - Hagler

Heather Grace Carroll and James Allen Hagler, Jr. were married at 3 p.m. at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church Saturday, Sept. 7. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alf Lindsay Carroll Jr. of North Main Street, Cohasset.

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler performed the ceremony.

Heather was given in marriage by her father and was attended by Lauren Roy, Newburyport, as maid of honor. Vicky Sesin of Dover, NH, Susan Chellis of Cape Elizabeth, ME, Diane K. Orlando, Nashua, NH, Susan F. Trezise of Duxbury and Michelle Towle of Great Falls, VA were bridesmaids. The groom's neices, Katherine S. Colpitts and Carol E. Colpitts of Nashua, NH were flower girls.

Robert Pfaffman served as best man. Ushers were Joseph Colpitts, James Fenno, Winthrop Sargent, John Martin, Stephen Bobo and Karl Webb, and John Fenno, nephew of the groom, was the ring bearer.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School, class of 1980. She graduated from the University of New Hampshire in 1983 with a degree in Mechanical Engineering. Heather is employed by General Electric Company in Lynn. She is a design engineer.

Mr. Hagler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hagler, North Main Street, Cohasset. He attended Derby Academy, and graduated from the Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, NH and Ithaca College in Ithaca, NY. He is a lieutenant in the United States Naval Reserve and stationed at the Naval Air Station, South Weymouth.

Evans - Bodner

Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Evans of Cohasset have announced the engagement of their daughter Elizabeth Hendrik Evans to Randall Wayne Bodner, son of Elsie M. Bodner of Danville, KY, and Jack K. Bodner of Corning, NY.

Miss Evans graduated from Milton Academy and Dartmouth College, magna cum laude, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She has been taking premedical courses at Harvard University and plans to attend medical school in September, 1986.

Mr. Bodner is a judicial clerk for Judge Ellsworth A. Van Graafeiland of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Mr. Bodner graduated from the St. James School, St. James, MD, and Dartmouth College, summa cum laude. At Dartmouth he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He received his law degree from Harvard Law School, magna cum laude.

CCC aerobic class

The Cohasset Community Center announces that Joanne Lehr's popular Aerobic Dance Class will be starting Sept. 23. Class will be held Monday and Thursday evenings from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. for six weeks.

Cost of this class is $36, and you may bring a friend for an additional $10. Please call the center at 383-0088 Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to register.

Amateur gardeners meeting

The first meeting of the new season of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will be A Walk in Wompatuck Park on Tuesday, Sept. 17 at 1 p.m.

Refreshments and a meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Evelyn Pearson on Church Street. She will be assisted by Mrs. Jean Koopman, Co-hostess.

All meetings of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset for the 1985-86 season will be on the third Tuesday of each month.

Newcomers Club

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club newly elected President, Mary Moberg recently announced the club will hold its first meeting of the Fall 85 season on the usual third Monday of the month, Sept. 16 at 9:30 a.m. at the Scituate Town Library on Branch St.

Mrs. Moberg wishes to welcome its present membership and any new residents to Scituate or Cohasset to enjoy the rewards of meeting old and new friends; who all have the common bond of re-location.

People are welcome to choose and set-up varied social and informative activities and clubs within the club. The Gourmet Club, The Bridge Club, beginner and advanced, Stitch and Chat, Tennis, Golf, the Luncheon Adventure and the Explorers Group (investigating all the wonderful sites of New England) and the Baby Sitting Co-op.

For further information on the Club in Cohasset call Linda, 383-6849 and in Scituate, Jean 545-6654.

Monday, Sept. 23, there will be an informal coffee for new residents of Scituate and Cohasset. Please call for time and place.

Mass for healing

Rev. Joseph Maguire, C.C.S., will be celebrating a Mass for Healing at St. Mary's Church, Hanover, on Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 7:30 p.m.

Often referred to as a healing priest, Rev. Maguire is also a teacher and preacher who has conducted parish renewals and healing services throughout the world.

It was while ministering to sick and dying patients at a hospital in Dover, NH, that his gift of healing was recognized publicly. At present, Rev. Maguire is the director of the Espousal Center in Waltham.

Rev. Maguire welcomes all ages — infants, teenagers and older — to all his services.

Taoist Workshop

Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset will host two special workshops Sept. 21 and 22 at the academy on Rt. 3A in Cohasset.

Rylin Malone, a psychotherapist and teacher of body/mind integration, and Gunther Weil, Ph.D., will conduct the two day courses on Taoist Meditation: the Microcosmic Orbit and Fusion of the Five Elements Level 1.

Ms. Malone and Dr. Weil each maintain a practice in Cambridge and Gloucester.

The Microcosmic Orbit meditation course will use a method that awakens and circulates life force (chi) through the primary acupuncture meridians. It is the foundation for healing and martial arts and is important in cultivating increased personal energy.

The fusion of the Five Elements meditation is the second stage of the Taoist system, in which one realizes the use of the five elements, (earth, fire, wood, water, metal), in the body in order to create a deeper level of internal cleansing of the vital organs and a transformation of negative emotions. This meditation has a particularly powerful and purifying effect on the nervous system.

The cost of the workshops is $90 for one or $160 for both. For reservations or further information call 383-6822.

Auction party benefit

An "Auction Party" with guest celebrity auctioneers will be held at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 5 at the Jewish Community Center at 600 Nantasket Avenue, Hull.

Families gather as Jewish holidays begin

By Marc Sperber

Next week the world's 17 million Jews will celebrate the High Holy Days, ushering in the year 5746 and asking God's forgiveness for past sins.

Rosh HaShona (translated as 'head of the year') begins on Monday. It is a two-day holiday that marks the close of the old year, and the start of a new year. The liturgical emphasis is on the cyclical nature of God's creations, and the promise of renewel and spiritual growth.

Perhaps the most striking feature of this holiday is the blowing of the Shofar (ram's horn). In ancient times, the ram's horn served a clarion call. On both days of the holiday, a total of 100 shofar blasts are sounded.

Because it is a joyous holiday, Rosh HaShona is a time for families to gather.

To celebrate both the bounty of the earth and symbolize the sweetness of God's judgment, apples dunked in honey are eaten. Special round Challas (braided bread) are baked, symbolizing the 'head' of the year and the cycles of nature.

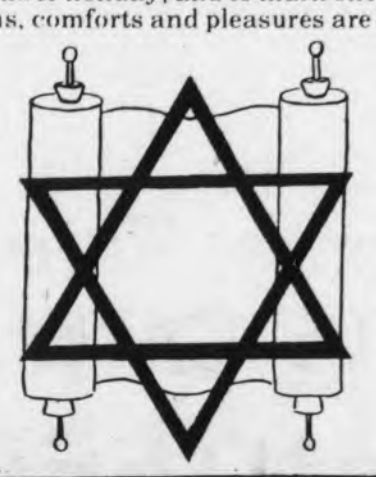
A symbolic casting away of sins precedes Rosh HaShona. The service, known as Teslach, involved casting bread (symbolic sins) upon the waters of a lake. The ritual was performed on Saturday throughout the world.

The first day of Rosh HaShona marks the beginning of the Ten Days of Penitence, a time of self-examination and contemplation.

The tenth day marks Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), the holiest day of the year.

It is a somber holiday, and to mark one's remorse at one's sins, comforts and pleasures are eschewed. Jews above the age of 13 are required to fast from the sundown before (an eve of a holiday is known as Erev) to sundown of the next day. Use of water is forbidden, as is the wearing of leather or finery.

In the spiritual framework, Rosh HaShona marks the time when each person's fate for the coming year is inscribed in the Book of Life, and Yom Kippur marks the time when the fates are sealed.



Kol Nidre, a hauntingly beautiful dirge filled with sorrow and fear before God, is sung on Yom Kippur. Legend has it that Beethoven was so impressed with its melody that he adapted if for the cello in one of his string works.

After the day of prayer and introspection, God's praises are sung for a final seven times. Then, as night approaches, the Shofar is sounded for one long blast. The new year has begun.

Breaking the fast is generally celebrated with friends and family. Because one has not eaten for a whole day, a light dairy meal is served.

The end of the month and the beginning of October also mark two other important holidays: Simchat Torah (celebrating the completion of a year's reading of the five holy books) and Sukkot (Feast of the Harvest and the Tabernacles).

During this latter holiday, Jews erect Sukkot (wooden booths), symbolizing the 40 years' sojourn in the desert. Fruits and vegetables, a symbol of the harvest, decorate the booths.

Rosh HaShona services

Rabbi Stephen Karol of Congregation Sha'Aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, will lead the congregation at High services beginning with Rosh Hashannah on Sunday.

Cantor Rivka Isachar Benjamin, will assist Rabbi Karol at the following times:

Sunday, Sept. 15 (eve of Rosh Hashannah), 6:30 or 8:30 p.m.

Monday, Sept. 16, (Day 1 of Rosh Hashannah), 8:45 or 11:30 a.m.; Children's Service, 3 p.m.

Tuesday, Sept. 17, (Day 2 Rosh Hashannah), 10 a.m.

Tuesday, Sept. 24, (eve of Yom Kippur), 6:30 or 8:30 p.m.

Wednesday, Sept. 25, (Day of Yom Kippur), 8:45 or 11:30 a.m.; Discussion Group, 1:30 p.m.; Children's Service, 2:45 p.m., and Afternoon Service, 3:45 p.m.

Yiskor and Neilah will follow the afternoon service. A community break the fast celebration will start at approximately 7 p.m.

Please call the temple at 749-8103 for more information.

Golden to speak at Conn. conference

State Senator William Golden of Weymouth will be a speaker at the Caucus of New England State Legislators in Mystic, Connecticut Sept. 30.

The caucus will co-sponsor with the New England Governor's Conference, a joint conference on rail transportation Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

Sen. Golden will convene a seminar on the Future of Rail Passenger Service in New England, to be moderated by Louis S. Thompson, associate administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration.

Panel members for the seminar will include James Barber, a director at Amtrack, James Stoezel, general manager of the Boston and Maine Railroad, and Russ Capon, executive director of the National Association of Railroad Passengers.

Sen. Golden, who sponsored ballot referendum questions last spring in his district, has supported the restoration of commuter rail on the South Shore of Boston.

Golden will comment on the unique transportation issues in his district, and how commuter rail can become a necessary component in a multi-model transportation system.

World of Weather

By Warren Waitkus

September is a transitional month, often starting with scorching heat, ending in the chill of fall. In 1983, unmercifully high temperatures reached record-breaking levels as a September heat wave drove thousands of residents to beaches, seeking relief in the cool Atlantic waters. In fact, Sept. 11, 1983 was the hottest since 1870 when the National Weather Service started keeping records. Boston, Hartford, and other stations in New England recorded 99 degrees. Providence reached 100 degrees, while Westfield, Massachusetts was the most torrid spot in the region with a searing 102 degrees.

The highest temperature ever recorded for the month of September was 126 degrees (F) on Sept. 3, 1950 in Mecca, California. The lowest reading ever recorded occurred at the Riverside Ranger Station in Yellowstone National Park on Sept. 24, 1926 when the thermometer fell to nine degrees (F) below zero.

The Autumnal Equinox will occur at 10:07 EDT on the 22nd. This is the time when the sun is directly overhead at the Equator, and this also happens on or about March 21, which is known as the Vernal Equinox. The revolution of the earth about its axis is the explanation for the four seasons. If it were not for the fact that the earth is tilted on its axis at an angle of 23.5 degrees there would be very little seasonal change.

Weatherwise, the southward retreat of the sun produces less solar heating to the Northern [our] Hemisphere, and the nights start to become longer than the days. The official heating season begins on Sept. 1 and ends on May 23, so this month you can expect the furnace to start eating away at your pocket.

September also brings the Harvest Moon, which is the full moon falling nearest the Autumnal Equinox. The moon will be full at 8:09 p.m. EDT on the 28th. It is called Harvest Moon because early settlers engaged in husbandry [farming] took advantage of the extra light the moon provided to extend the day's work in the fields beyond the regular twilight hours. It will rise close to the same place and time for several nights in a row. You will notice that it gives an extended period of light sufficient for working in the fields. You may have to use your imagination to invision its effect in your area, because of modern development, but in years gone-by it was a desirable occurrence for our hard working forefathers.

AUGUST SUMMARY

June through August is considered the "Meteorological Summer," for climatological data compilation, while the astronomical summer ends on September 22nd. The three month period was cool and wet throughout New England, and in Boston and most coastal areas it was also the cloudiest in 93 years.

August began with torrential rain during the early morning hours of the first. Two inches of rain fell on Boston between 2 and 3 a.m. with a total for the day of 4.63 inches. A narrow band of similar amounts of rainfall extended to the West and North of Boston, while the suburbs to the South and Southeast received lesser amounts. The storm caused flooding that closed major roadways to Boston at the height of the morning commute. This intense rainstorm also caused flooded cellars and sewage-clogged streets as far west as Worcester, where 3.9 inches was recorded.

The next several days saw partly cloudy skies with daytime temperatures in the eighties with night time readings in the fifties and low sixties. On the 8th, rain, generally one-half to one inch, arrived in the form of heavy showers, followed by widespread fog lowering visibilities to zero in some areas.

The temperature climbed into the nineties on Aug. 14 as the month's highest reading occurred on the 15th. Boston reached 93 degrees while areas to the south and west saw the mercury rise to 96 degrees.

On the 19th the remnants of Hurricane "Danny," which went ashore on the gulf coast, deposited 2 to 4 inches of rain on the Cape as a low center passed out to sea.

Another period of frog strangling rain began on the 25th and continued on the 26th. Very heavy rain fell on the Cape with amounts being reported between 3 and 5 inches with Wellfleet receiving a staggering 7 inches. From the Cape Cod Canal north to about Marshfield, 2 to 4 inches was recorded. Although the rain amounts were generally lighter north of Marshfield, power was knocked out by the storm in parts of Stoughton, Canton and Weymouth.

The month of August ended with a vigorous "Northeaster" which brought wind gusts of 40 to 50 mph along the coast, and heavy thunderstorms with substantial amounts of rain, on the 30th and 31st.

August was very wet throughout New England, except in the far northern regions, and near normal temperature wise, with widely spread fluctuations of one or two degrees above or below the average.

Hynes pushes bill for commuter subsidies

By Mike Berger

State Rep. Frank Hynes of Marshfield is optimistic his $12 million transportation budget amendment in the state Legislature will provide more money for area commuter transportation and community highway projects.

Hynes expects a decision this week from the Joint House-Senate Transportation Committee.

Hynes is concerned a state subsidy will end Nov. 15 and unless more money is approved, transportation alternatives which were provided during the Southeast Expressway Reconstruction Project will also be terminated.

He hopes money will be provided to continue commuter boat as well as bus services from Boston-Scituate-Marshfield and Hanover.

Unless funding is developed to continue these transit alternatives, many commuters who have sought and become accustomed to modes of travel other than the Expressway will be forced to get back onto this roadway.

"Excluding the MBTA Red line and van and car pooling arrangements, there are over 6,000 passenger seats presently used and subsidized by the DPW on the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts which will end in mid-November," Hynes said.

The funding is absolutely necessary, he added, "if the state is to have any credibility with the good faith efforts of South Shore and Southeastern Mass. commuters during the past two years."

The near $12 million bond amendment would run for nearly 20 months, from Nov. 15 to June 30, 1987 and provide money for private contracted buses, added MBTA buses, commuter rail and boat and police and tow trucks for the Southeast Expressway.

The following are specific budget requests.

Private contracted buses: $1,118,542. These 10 routes would serve area towns such as Plymouth, Pembroke, Kingston, Marshfield, Hanover, Hull, Quincy, Bridgewater and Middleboro.

Added T buses: $682,500. Hynes is proposing that buses be added to eight MBTA routes serving, Wollaston, Hingham, East Weymouth, Weymouth Landing, Randolph, Braintree, South Weymouth and Quincy. Until now 855 new seats were made available with a 64 percent ridership usage.

Commuter rail: $3,315,000. Theses funds would aid commuter rail on the Attleboro-Stoughton and Franklin-Norwood branches. Ridership has increased 25.8 percent in the two years of the Expressway Reconstruction Project.

Commuter Boat: $1,248,000. Three subsidized vessels from Hingham to Boston would carry nearly 1,500 people per day on 22 trips.

Police and tow trucks: $5,256,500. Hynes is proposing four tow trucks, five days per week, 13 hours per day from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. and five police officers, for five days per week, 14 hours per day. During the Expressway project, 800 vehicles per month were serviced.

For the Rte 3, 128 intersection, Hynes is proposing eight trucks and 10 police officers, 14 hours per day, five days per week.

COMMUTER BOAT

Part of the Hynes proposal calls for a $1.2 million subsidy for the Boston Harbor commuter boat service out of Hingham.

Speaking for one of the Hingham-based commuter boat services, Dana Goodell said he's looking on the sunny side.

"I don't see how the state can drop us now. We're successful but successful with a subsidy. The cost of operating these boats is so much greater than our gross income."

Commuter boat service operates three boats from Hingham to Boston with an additional leased boat put on for summer ridership. The service carries 1,500 people a day on 22 trips.

Goodell didn't see a decrease in business last winter when construction temporarily ceased on the Expressway and he doesn't believe the commuter boat traffic will drop when the road reopens in November.

"Right now, I'm planning for the future. I'm working with companies in Texas and Louisiana, looking at new boat designs."

Goodell said he's definitely looking for a third boat to replace the Capt. Joseph, the current summer lease and the possible addition of a fourth boat to be added to the commuter service next spring.

"If there's no subsidy, then I'll have to sharpen my pencil a bit. It's impossible to survive without a subsidy. If we have to increase fares, we'll definitely lose ridership. The commuter boat is far cheaper, faster, and a lot less nervewracking than driving into Boston but we would lose some commuters to the T," Goodell said.

(Valerie Kroon also contributed to this report.)

Golden fundraiser attracts 800

Over 800 supporters attended a fundraiser brunch for state Senator William Golden Sept. 8 at the Ridder Country Club in Whitman.

U.S. Senator John F. Kerry was the featured speaker at the event, which included supporters from Sen. Golden's seven district towns: Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Sen. Kerry commented on the importance of a close working relationship between state and local officials and applauded Sen. Golden on his success in the Boston Harbor Cleanup Program and his recent campaign to clean up hazardous waste sites.

Among those in attendance were dozens of state, local and county officials from around the South Shore.

Sen. Golden, in short statement, thanked his many supporters and friends, and told them he remained committed to cleaning up hazardous waste sites around the state, and working to improve transportation on the South Shore.

Sen. Golden noted significant progress had been made on his campaign goals of strengthening the regional identity of the South Shore and of increasing the political clout of the South Shore in order to obtain sufficient state resources to solve regional problems in his district.

Sen. Golden also honored his mother, Elizabeth Golden, on National Grandparents Day, saying she has been a grandmother to all the people who worked with him on his senatorial campaign.

'CONWAY COUNTRY' UPDATE

OFFICE #33 opened over Labor Day weekend in Wareham. Things got started on the right foot with a $215,000 sale reported on Monday.

'CONWAY COUNTRY' PERSONNEL have been quoted in many recent newspaper articles and seen on several television newscasts. Connie Mitchell (Scituate) was quoted in an Associated Press release that went all over the country. A friend on the west coast sent us an article from the San Francisco Examiner that mentioned our own John Reardon (Scituate) commenting on the tranferree market. Pat Fahy (Plymouth) and Jon Bond (Norwell) were quoted in recent Boston Herald articles. Channel 56 did a news spot with Gracie LeVasseur (South Weymouth). Channel 7 was in our Hingham Office interviewing Sandra Logan and Carolyn Aaron. And earlier this summer Channel 4 did a three part series on the housing market with Sally Koss of our Canton Office.

CAREER NIGHT. Over 20 people attended a real estate career night we held recently at our Hull Office on Nantasket Ave. There seems to be many people interested in the real estate business. If you'd like more information about getting onto the business call Denis Lilla, our education and training director, 826-5144.

A shining talent shines our schools

By Charlotte Carney

There exists a galaxy, trillions of light years from ours . . . in which there is a planet. On this planet, there are superbeings with unique powers and strengths. The only difference between their and our earth is one being . . . unique in all the universe. His strength and abilities are matchless. This one person is . . . Crusher - Defender of Justice.

This inventive, original comic strip character was conceived and artfully drawn by Dudley Bryan of Dorchester, an unassuming, 13 year-old eighth grade student at Cohasset Junior High School.

Exerpts from Dudley's unique comic strip were seen through the summer in the Mariner, much to the creator's surprise and amazement.

It was not until August that Dudley's sister Lisa, who is a tenth grade Metco student at the high school, was told by a friend in Cohasset that Dudley was a "star."

"He was really thrilled," said Lillie Bryan, Dudley's mom, who was equally surprised and thrilled.

"Dudley started drawing at a young age," said Mrs. Bryan. "Wherever we went, he carried a pencil with which to draw. People always remarked at how well behaved he was, because he kept himself busy with his drawing."

It was Mr. Lucas, the art teacher at Cohasset High School, who recognized Dudley's talent, sent the comic strip to the editor of the Mariner, who also realized that this was no ordinary work of art, and felt it deserved exposure.

Dudley had been unaware of all this, he said, "because late last spring I had lost my notebook which also had my comic strip book in it. When I found my notebook in the shop room, it was covered in saw dust and my comic book was gone."

Apparently, surmises Mrs. Eileen Mills, Metco coordinator in Cohasset, someone must have found the notebook, and noticed the comic strip and took it to Mr. Lucas.

This was not the first time that Mr. Lucas has promoted Dudley's art work. "One time," said Dudley, "Mr. Lucas took one of my pictures and entered it in an art contest and I won an honorable mention."

Dudley, who began the Metco program in the first grade at the Joseph Osgood School, felt as many children do in a new, strange environment. But he now views Cohasset as his "home away from home. My friends are here and I just love it," he explained.

"I started drawing comics in the fourth grade," said Dudley, "when I tried to sketch from a Hulk magazine. I also used a 'how to draw Garfield' comic book to learn. Garfield was my favorite

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Let's chuck the Federal Highway Administration

The two main components in the beginnings of fragmentary solutions to the South Shore's transportation crisis are the road and the railroad. We need some combination of a better Route 3, better east-west access to Route 3, and comprehensive commuter rail. But the way to progress with respect to the road component differs from what the rail component calls for. So let's look at the road first; the railroad requires a column of its own.

With the Southeast Expressway rebuilt and marginally improved (the State Department of Public Works has done an excellent job coordinating this project), and with breakdown lane travel decriminalized at certain points in space and time, we can live with Route 3 as is for a few years. (Whether we can or not, we shall.)

The environs of exits, then, become the biggest present practical headache both for the Boston commuter and for her house-husband's local comings and goings. If we can do nothing else in this decade it would be awfully nice to decongest Queen Anne's Corner (don't ask me how), to rig Route 3 directly in and out of Hanover Mall, and to add a Marshfield/Duxbury exit that would permit Pembroke to go on developing its Las Vegas Strip along Route 139 without forever holding the town of Marshfield hostage.

If such relatively modest projects were left entirely to the Departments of Public Works in Hingham, Hanover, Norwell, Pembroke and Marshfield they would be done sometime during the middle years of President Ford's administration. Throw in the state D.P.W., Mike Dukakis' hatred of shopping malls, and Transportation Secretary Salvucci's tendency to think that the South Shore is where he goes when he attends a fundraiser at Anthony's Pier 4, it is perhaps reasonable to hope for progress on these projects by 1990.

But, throw in the Federal Highway Administration, and the progress gets gummed up from here to apparent eternity. You see, Route 3 isn't a federal highway, for it doesn't have those red, white, and baby blue shields said to have been designed by one of the artistic geniuses of the Eisenhower years. Ah, but think again. Route 3 isn't an interstate highway per se, but it is paradoxically part of the interstate highway system, and therefore (illegitimi non carborundum) subject to the whims and harrows of outrageous Washington.

One such harrowing whim is that exits on non-interstate interstate roads (I guess that's what we have to call Route 3) shall not be less than such and such a number of kilometers (that from a Carter era order to go metric) apart. Suffice it to say that a rational plan to redesign the Marshfield/Pembroke exit would violate the aforesaid whim. Any additional exit would have to go well to the south, in Duxbury, a plan that, with good reason, would not set well with town fathers there.

Similar prescriptions and proscriptions stand in the way of rationalizing other exits along Route 3, and the point to be made is a fundamental one about the centralization of power in the country over the last 25 years. The Federal Government has set itself up as chief bursar and dispurser of highway building funds in the land. Therefore (and quite logically) it reserves the right to lay down prescriptions and proscriptions relating to the spending of those funds.

But the result is a complexity of process that boggles the mind. The redesign of one of our Route 3 exits has to pass muster at the local, state, and federal level with an exponentially ascending order of Red Tape. And that is why the prospects of completing relatively simple redesigns of our exits and access roads in this decade are glo o my to nil.

There is a fundamental misconception here, it is the snobbish, fallacious assumption that state officials can design better local roads than local officials, and that federal officials can do the job better than either of the above. Not only is the assumption false, 99 percent of the time the very opposite is true.

For example, did you ever notice those hideous, nine-story sodium vapor floodlights that make intersecting interstate highways look like something out of Dante? These outrages give Greater Phoenix and Great Pensacola the same accursed 24-hour glow that you see at the junction of the Mass Pike and Route 84 in Sturbridge. Why? Because of a Federal Rule. Early in his first term, Gov. Dukakis discovered that each of these blasphemously ugly towers cost $15 thousand 1974 dollars to install. Flush with recent political victory, he matter-of-factly ordered that they cease to be built, and that those already built never be turned on.

They of course continued to be turned on and they continued to be built. He repeated his order cum annoyance to Sec. Salvucci, then to jack-of-all problems Frank Keefe, and so on down the chain of command. But the things continued to be built, and at great length he discovered to his dismay they were mandated by the Federal Rule, and that the governor of the Commonwealth was powerless to do anything about them.

It is thus that we have an interstate highway system that is economically efficient but equally colorless in all parts of the land. I wouldn't argue that the creation of the system under Eisenhower was wrong or that at that time a federal effort was not necessary despite the centralizing implications of the enabling legislation.

But (and this is my point) when today we can't redo a few cloverleafs to suit our needs without citations from the all-mighty federal bureaucracy, it is time to call a halt. The Federal Highway Administration today should be chucked. The federal gasoline tax should simply be turned over to the states where it is collected. Federal input at this juncture in highway building is unnecessary and it is obviously detrimental to progress. It comes down to the fact that the Federal Government treats states and localities like a bunch of half-witted serfs, a treatment that sometimes turns the victim into the assumption, for the federal dependence tends to rob state and local officials of their natural initiative.

The issue, of course, is larger than road building. We have created a society in which "grant writing" can be studied in alleged graduate universities and seriously pursued as a career. The centripetal force in our politics is constant, and it constantly threatens our long-term liberty and well-being. President Reagan has always been right that our strength comes from the initiative of our people, it isn't doled out by government. That after five years of his presidency power stays so tightly centralized is a measure of the fight we are in to defend individual liberty, free enterprise, and local government from the encroachment of federal domination.

From the kitchen

by Joan Pinkham

Chances are, not too many of us know why Sunday, the 8th, was rather special. For want of the hoopla that usually precedes Mother's Day and Father's Day, the fact that last Sunday was Grandparents Day was of little interest to most. Having reached that delightful stage in life, I was amused to read that a fourth grader wrote of her grandmother: "A grandmother is a lady who has no little children of her own. She likes other people's." "Grampy" (as he is known in our household,) "is a man grandmother." Put them both together and this 10-year-old observes: "Everybody should try to have grandparents, especially if you don't have television, because they are the only grown-ups who have time to listen." One of our senior citizens who takes time for a lot of home-cooked goodies is Sally Bergin and at this time of year when we're looking for ways to use up zucchini, here is her recipe for

ZUCCHINI BREAD

4 C. coarsely shredded zucchini
3 C. flour (all purpose)
2 1/2 C. sugar
1 1/4 C. vegetable oil
4 eggs, beaten
1 T plus 1 tsp. vanilla
1 T. ground cinnamon
1 1/2 tsp. each salt and baking soda
1/2 tsp. baking powder

Heat oven to 325. Grease generously bottoms of two loaf pans, 9x5x3". Blend all ingredients on low speed one min., scraping bowl constantly. Beat on med. speed one min. Pour into pans. Bake 50 min. to one hour. Cool 10 min. before removing from pans.

One grandchild was heard to say that grandmothers don't grow gray, they grow blonde. Unlike our memories of a plump, elderly soul in cotton housedress, sensible oxfords, and apron, knitting in her rocking chair as a brief respite from filling the cookie jar, today's grandparents are more likely to be found on the golf course, or ski slopes. Those who garden know that freezing is the easiest means of preserving home-grown veggies and fruits. Peppers are one of the few vegetables that can be frozen without blanching, so it's simple to take advantage of their zesty taste and nutritional benefits all year round. Small packets of frozen chopped peppers can add extra flavor to any number of dishes and here is Diane Pearson's way with

STUFFED GARDEN PEPPERS

4 large bell peppers
1/2 lb. ground beef
1 C. cooked rice
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 T. butter
3 T. minced onion
2 well-beaten eggs
1/8 tsp. paprika

Preheat oven to 350. Remove stem, seeds and membrane and parboil in boiling water, about 10 min., until tender. Plunge into cold water. Melt butter, add beef and onion. Saute until meat is browned. Add remaining ingredients, mix and stuff pepper. Bake 10 to 15 min. and freeze for a later meal.

Merilyn Dunn has miles to go before reaching the grandmother stage in life, now swept up in all that goes with raising a family, working part-time and tending their organic garden. From Marion Morash's "Victory Garden Cookbook," Merilyn finds this way of using their cukes. "The greatest," she told me. "They taste better than any deli pickle and you can't eat just one."

DILL PICKLES

1 1/2 qt. water
1/4 C. ea. cider vinegar and kosher salt
Pick 2 1/2 lb. cukes . . . they don't have to be pickle cukes, just "runty ones."
Throw cukes in pot and boil 3 min. Cool to room temp. Slice leangthwise and stand on end in a crock or large glass jug. Cover with the brine and add:
1 tsp. ea. dill seeds, pickling spices
1 tsp. garlic powder, or
1 large clove of garlic flattened with back of knife.
Keep at room temperature overnight in crock, or put in the glass jars covered with brine and weight down the top.

"Then later I started making up my own characters with my friend Orande Bynone. That's when I came up with 'Crusher - the defender of justice.' He's rash, mean and the best there is," said Dudley. "He's my ultimate super hero."

Dudley's comic strip character is by no means his only artistic achievement. His artistic talent was recognized early by his elementary school teachers, said Mrs. Mills.

As is the case with most talented people, "Dudley does not realize his own abilities," said Mrs. Bryan. "He takes it all very lightly."

Recently, Mrs. Bryan, who works for the Boston while serving on a committee. "I really had no idea of what to present," she said, "so I asked Dudley for some assistance. He went right to work on the project."

Mrs. Bryan explained further that when she took the finished poster back to the Marriott, they were so impressed with the work, they had it placed in a showcase in the Gift Shop so that it would be protected.

Because of Dudley's outstanding work, he was commissioned to do other projects for the Marriott Copley Place and the Long Wharf Marriott.

Dudley, who also likes sculpture and painting, has taken several summer courses at the Massachusetts College of Art in Boston. His parents are looking forward to having him enroll in a class at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

Fortunately, Dudley gets a lot of support at home. His father, Dudley Bryan Sr., is no stranger to the art world. A former portrait painter, "he," according to Mrs. Bryan, "is Dudley's coach." Both Mr. and Mrs. Bryan devote a lot of time encouraging Dudley's artful endeavors.

Presently, Dudley, like most other children, is enjoying getting back to his school routine and renewing old friendships.

He has yet to comprehend the excitement of his "art work." But that's part of what makes Dudley Bryan such a nice, young man.

Desmond testimonial

A testimonial dinner will be held for Muriel Desmond, who is celebrating her 25th year with the Jack Conway Company. Desmond has been among the top brokers and the Cohasset office has been the flagship of the 32-office company under her management.

For many years, the real estate industry was dominated by men. But Jack Conway's partner and father-in-law, the late James V. Carroll, was a former department store executive who was convinced of the great marketing abilities of women.

"Muriel became our first female sales associate and set an enviable record for the next 25 years," said Conway.

Desmond has been one of the top salespersons in the Cohasset office and led the company in sales during many years. "When she took over management of the Cohasset office it had slipped from first place to sixth place, but it didn't take long for her to get things humming and the office working as a team. And the office has kept its first place position ever since," Conway said.

There are seldom openings for sales associates at the Cohasset office. "Very rarely does anyone leave because they do so well here," Desmond said. "Mary Pecce has been here 22 years, Mary Ellen Neagle 17 years, Julie Gailinas 15 years, and Gloria Ellis for 13 years." All are top-selling associates who have accompanied the President's Gold Club on many trips.

The Cohasset area has many higher-priced home and sophisticated buyers. "It's a difficult place for a new associate to get experience which is why I'm very selective," Desmond said. She introduced her newest associate, Janet Walden. "I liked her attitude and enthusiasm. She was brought up in Hingham, lives in Scituate, is involved in many activities and know a lot of people. She has a great sphere of influence and will be trained not only through the Conway classes but just by being here," Desmond said.

Muriel Desmond

Besides choosing and keeping capable associates, Desmond prepares all of the advertising for the office. She is familiar with homes in the area since she has sold many of them over the past 25 years, some several times.

Besides more than 75 business associates, her husband Henry, Desmond's daughter, Barbara Cox and her husband, son Robert and his wife, plan to attend the event which will be held at the Satuit Restaurant Sept. 17.

Real Estate

The Cape Cod life you've waited for is here. Now. In Duxbury.

Oceanwoods is selling as fast as it's being built, for a lot of reasons. Cape living, without the battle of the bridge. Quality construction and creative architecture you thought had passed you by. Residents' use of one of the world's great beaches, in one of New England's most beautiful towns.

Choice two-bedroom townhomes and condominiums remain, from 1500 to more than 2000 sq. ft. From $154,000 to $260,000. With a few remaining single-family residences, designed by award-winning architects.

Come enjoy 23 acres of salt air, balconies, ocean view, crickets at night and serenity—only 45 minutes from Boston. But, do it now. So someone else isn't enjoying what you should be.

Oceanwoods

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. VII, no. 51 | 383-6731/545-7060 | thursday, september 19, 1985 | 2 sections | 35 cents

A big game set for Saturday

Saturday's the big one - the season's opener for the Cohasset Skippers against last year's South Shore League Champs, Norwell High School.

All the action begins at 1:30 p.m Saturday, Sept. 21 at Milliken Field.

This year's football squad is ready and rearing for some fierce competition, according to Coach Phil Pisano. With seven returning veterans, he and his team are looking forward to a bit of revenge for last year's loss to the league champions.

"Because we are playing against Norwell who beat us last year, and it being our first game, the boys are really excited about this one," Coach Pisano said. "A lot of the kids have gone to summer football camp in Norwell, so they know each other. It's a good rivalry."

Some observers have said the outcome of this game could forecast the league's next division winner. Coach Pisano won't go that far in his predictions, but he's confident Cohasset is in for a good year.

Last year, the Skippers ended with a 4-5 record. Pisano said their primary objective in 1985 is to better that statistic.

"The kids have been working hard at practice and during the off season," he said. "They're really anxious to get this season underway.

"We have Floyd Hardwick starting at left halfback, Bob Durkin returning in the backfield, and Shawn Corkery had some experience last year as quarterback. Four of our five interior linesmen are returning, Liam Stanford, Jeff Soltesz, Pat O'Connor, and Jeff Lydon. With this experience, I'm sure we're a stronger team than last year," Pisano stated.

"We're looking forward to a real competitive battle Saturday," he said.

That is an understatement.

METCO overview

Students accepted from start

(This is the second part of our look at the METCO -Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity - program in Cohasset and the students who are participating in it. Ed.)

Floyd Hardwick remembers his first day of school in Cohasset. His bus was late and as he entered the fifth grade classroom, all faces turned toward him.

"It was like a commercial," he recalled this week. "Everyone in the room stared at me. It wasn't until that very moment that I realized I was the only black kid in the class."

A momentary silence was followed by a hearty welcome from his teacher and classmates. Floyd knew he would be okay.

"I never had one complaint since I've been here. I was accepted right from the start," he stated.

Now he is a senior at Cohasset High School. He is an outstanding athlete, has many friends, and is grateful for the experiences of the past eight years.

Joy Turner is 14 years old. She is a pretty girl who has made many close friends in Cohasset.

"Right from the start, the children in Cohasset were nice to me," she said. "Now, we are very close -like brothers and sisters."

Joy was only six and a half years old when she began her education in Cohasset. Her family had moved to Dorchester from St. Kitts, British West Indies where she was born.

Her older brother, Jerome, and sister India, had also attended Cohasset schools through the METCO program. "But I still didn't understand what I was getting into," she laughed. "I came to Cohasset the middle of second grade. I didn't know what METCO was all about. I thought I was just going to another private school, as I did in the British West Indies.

It was a bit different, though. In my other school, you had to wear a uniform, and here we did not. In the other school, there was a mixture of black and white students, and here it wasn't like that."

Academics never posed a great problem for Joy. She was accustomed to the rigors of a competitive education in her former homeland. In fact, she was double promoted into the second grade when she arrived in Cohasset.

Education, according to Joy, is the reason she is here. And she works hard to reap the benefits.

"When I get home, I automatically start my homework. Most of the afternoons, I spend at home in the house studying. I have a lot more homework than the other kids in my neighborhood," she explains. "In the summer, I just hang out with my friends. We like to play double dutch a lot. This summer I also spent a couple of week with relatives in Buffalo, N.Y."

The neighborhoods of Cohasset and Dorchester are vastly different, but Joy has found friends in both areas. She considers her girlfriends in Cohasset among her best, along with the kids she associates with back home.

"I have a lot of friends here and at home. My father is the pastor of our church, so I also have a lot of church friends. My best friend is a METCO student here, Twilda Shennette, " she noted.

Some old and new feet ran this race

It was a perfect day for running, so they say. And the 200 or so participants in the South Shore Striders Late Summer Classic had nothing but superlatives for the race and the view along the course.

It was a "disappointing" crowd at last Sunday afternoon's race. But not totally unanticipated, according to several of the Striders organizers. The Late Summer Classic is usually held in Weymouth, and this was the first time the Cohasset site was selected.

But after listening to the reaction of some of the runners, the Striders were confident they would return next year.

Kevin McCarthy, 37, of Cohasset, was the first to finish the 8.1 mile course. His time was 46:21. The weather, he said moments after crossing the finish mark, was "almost ideal," with sunny skies and warm 70 degree temperatures.

"The course," he noted, "was a bit hilly. I am personally satisfied with my time, although this race was not quite competitive."

McCarthy participated in the Rotary's spring event and finished "about 19 or 20 for my age category," he said. He's been running for about 15 or 20 years "as a way to relax. It's an efficient and convenient way to exercise," he claimed.

About two years ago, McCarthy was house-hunting in Cohasset. When he arrived in town, he noticed the Rotary race was set for the same day. "So I jumped into the race, and eventually I also bought a home here," he laughed.

The Striders sponsored two courses, a 3.4 mile race (by actual measure it was 3.5 miles), and the longer 8.1 mile event. Both races attracted runners from near and far, old and new.

One person who may have qualified as the newest road runner in Cohasset was Ellen Marquette. As her son George explained during the event, his mother literally "woke up this morning and decided to enter." When asked how long she had trained for such an event, George answered, "never. She never so much as ran around the block."

And soon, there she was, jogging up the crest of Highland Avenue, nearing the site of the Town Hall. Face flushed, but with a wide smile, she crossed the finish line. And she wasn't even last!

She was anxious to talk about this most daring effort.

"What a nerve I have," she said later, still breathing hard while holding a plastic cup filled

Is 'show biz' coming to Cohasset?

Cohasset has long been noted for its breathtaking ocean views, its plush homes and the quaint appeal of a picturesque New England town.

Residents never envisioned their community as the Hollywood of the east coast. But there are indications we are not being ignored by the entertainment industry.

During the past winter, several scenes for the new television series Spenser: For Hire were filmed along scenic Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue.

And now, a production crew has proposed to film a "major motion picture" in Cohasset this spring and summer. What could evolve into the Summer of '86 for Cohasset is a film centered on the lives of 12 young apprentices at the South Shore Music Circus, "the story of their adventures in a small New England town, a story of innocence, music and maturity," according to producer and writer Tony Mich.

He appeared Monday night before selectmen requesting permission to film along several streets in Cohasset. The town officials postponed any decision on the matter until they discuss the proposal with Bruce Cameron, chairman of the board of directors for the Music Circus.

Selectmen were reluctant to give their blanket approval without knowing how the Music Circus directors feel about the project. Many of the scenes within the film are scheduled for the Music Circus, and the board members' permission is therefore required.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England had a few more concerns about the movie. He wasn't thrilled with the way certain fictitious characters within the film, namely the town officials and the summer theatre management, were portrayed.

"I don't want this to end up like that TV show a

Health board hearing

The Cohasset Board of Health will conduct a public hearing Monday, September 23, at 8:30 p.m. at the offices of the Board of Health, 43 Elm Street, to discuss increasing the 1986 fee schedule for trash haulers rates.

Under consideration is a proposal to increase the fee for compacted trash to $5 per cubic yard, and an increase to $2 per cubic yard for loose. New rates will take effect January 1, 1986.

Independence Building issue

Selectmen will decide the fate of the Independence Building at their next meeting.

They will discuss with the town counsel what restrictions they can place on the building before they sell it. According to Executive Secretary Don Andrew, any restrictions on the use of the building must be renewed by the Board of Selectmen in thirty years.

Because there have been discussions of widening North Main Street at the curve where the building is located, selectmen also discussed the possibility of razing the structure.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said she thinks there is a market for the 130-year old building, and would not approve selling it. But Selectman Mary Jane McArthur questioned whether the town should continue to maintain it until and if someone purchases the building.

Selectmen said they will discuss their options with the town counsel at their next meeting.

Correction

There was a mistake in last week's Mariner article regarding the public hearing two weeks ago on the proposed supermarket on Route 3A.

The plan to develop a Super Stop and Shop has never been reviewed or denied by the planning board, as stated in that article. This is an entirely new plan proposed by local developer Donald Staszko.

The planning board first saw that new plan two weeks ago and was scheduled to hold a second hearing on the project Wednesday, Sept.18.

Many people witnessed this week a lone man walking in front of Autohaus along Route 3A. He is carrying a placard stating "Autohaus will not account for faulty workmanship."

James Boyd of Holbrook Avenue in Braintree said he had his car serviced at Autohaus in the fall of 1981. The car's engine subsequently seized, and the car was rendered useless. Autohaus would not stand by its repairs, he said, and Boyd hired an attorney.

The attorney did not accurately represent the consumer, and Autohaus was not held liable for the repairs, according to Boyd. His only satisfaction has been to picket the business and acquaint passers-by with his message.

Apparently, some people are listening. Boyd said about a half dozen people stop by daily. The freelance film editor said everyone he has talked with expressed support for his cause.

Autohaus spokesman Bob Guarino said the service manager there is on vacation this week and no one else has records of the alledged repairs to Boyd's late automobile.

He said not much notice has been paid to the picketer, except that occasionally traffic is snarled along the highway. Guarino said police have been notified that Boyd is creating a traffic hazard at the entrance to their business.

"We've never had anyone do this - nothing like this before," Guarino said. Autohaus has been in Cohasset 18 years.

South Shore Publishing Company changes owners; no layoffs

By Mike Berger

South Shore Publishing Company, one of Scituate's largest employers, will change owners but the current president says there is no danger of any employee layoffs.

Owner Chester Catler of Cohasset said he is negotiating with Treasure Chest Advertising Inc. of California to buy the Country Way company.

However, Catler intends to still retain ownership of the land and the building. He is negotiating a long term lease with Treasure Chest.

Treasure Chest like South Shore Publishing is noted for printing advertising circulars for many large retail chains.

The company posted over $500 million in annual sales for the last fiscal year and owns 17 plants across the country; but only one other plant in New England.

"There will be no change with the employees," Catler said. "Effectively it will be the same business with the same people. They like our plant, our clients and like our personnel. They are very impressed with our plant."

"There won't be any layoffs. In fact it will be just the opposite. There could be more work," he added.

The ownership change could either happen quickly or take time. "Right now nothing's been sold and attorneys for both sides are talking to each other. These kind of changes could take time or it could come quickly," Catler said.

South Shore Publishing has a year-round workforce of about 200 employees. A year ago, the company spent several thousands of dollars to install a new anti-pollution control equipment to meet Scituate health board standards.

Selectmen also approved a right-of-way access for additional truck space at an earlier town meeting.

Congressman Gerry Studds visited Cohasset last Sunday. A group of about 20 residents attended the open meeting. Story on pg. B-1.

Homeowners discuss concerns about plaza

The Fair Oaks Homeowners Association met Monday, primarily to address certain issues which concern them about the proposed Stop and Shop on Route 3A, and its impact on the community.

And, in a letter addressed to the planning board, the association members have asked the town officials to defer action on the project until "definitive solutions to these problems have been identified."

John Bishop, current president of the organization, stated the "association is concerned that the proposed (Stop and Shop) shopping plaza would threaten the direct water supply of our town."

The reports we have received, he said, in addition to a review of the proposed plans of the supermarket, indicate that drainage will be inadequate. "The oil interceptor catch basins proposed within the watershed area will not adequately protect the wetlands from the added direct surface drainage," he noted.

Bishop also expressed concern with the projected traffic patterns into and out of the plaza, noting "it will only add to the surface pollution going into the watershed area."

Bishop is apprehensive about the added "traffic impact" the shopping plaza would have along Sohier Street and Route 3A as well as King Street.

Richard Senechal A.I.A., presented a study to the group which outlined the impending problems that a shopping plaza could create. According to the proposed plans, said Senechal, "it is a very real possibility that the customer parking provided on this site would be inadequate. The number of parking spaces required by the zoning bylaw is 494, however, 125 of these are in a gravel area behind the building. Thus, there are only 369 effective parking places. As well as phantom parking places," he continued, "according to the footage on the plans, there are built-in bottle necks in the parking lot."

Senechal noted that the traffic report submitted by the developer did not indicate any real problems, but as one homeowner stated, "given the result of the present study, the developer's results are hard to reconcile."

Senechal's report indicated that the green belt area proposed by the developer, between the plaza and the residents, was also inadequate.

Along with the water pollution and traffic problems, Bishop addressed the possible health hazards to the community. "It is alledged that problems with rats had occurred at the Stop and Shop in Cohasset and Quincy, he said.

"Any time you have dumpsters and food in trash, you can attract rats," another resident stated.

"Hopefully," said Bishop, "someone will be at the planning board meeting Wednesday (Sept. 18) to substantiate these allegations.

"We have a chance to have our views heard on Wednesday," he continued. "The Homeowners Association hopes that as a reasonable corporate citizens, the developer will respond factually and in detail as to how the problems will be solved, before the plans are approved."

Senechal added that, "we have reasonable public concerns and we should voice them prior to the granting of public approval."

It was a unanimous decision by the members of the Fair Oaks Homeowners Association to present their concerns at the planning board meeting Sept. 18.

In a letter addressed to the board, the association outlined many of these issues of concern.

Among the areas the residents listed for review by the planning board are: inadequate parking spaces; elimination of Wetlands area E, and the concern that no future development be allowed on the Rosano property which abuts this proposed development; question whether oil interceptor catch basins within the watershed will protect the wetlands area, and a request that the matter will be subjected to full public review of the engineering studies involved; legitimate concerns of noise and light pollution, as well as security for the surrounding area have a different significance during late night hours; consideration should be given to insure that no light whatsoever spills beyond the property boundaries into adjacent residential occupancies.

Also, the proposed plan provides no effective green belt screening whatsoever; the loading and receiving areas and the trash collection area are clearly visually objectionable; the impact of this projected traffic in the surrounding area will be significant and will either create or exacerbate serious circulation problems at certain times of the day; the study does not address on-site traffic circulation; the plan proposes no solution to reduced travel speed and longer delays in the area, other than a potential future traffic signal or police officer at the main site entrance; a visualization of the traffic situation at the main site drive to the project under peak conditions may be instructive; a signal is definitely warranted for summer peak conditions, yet the traffic study recommends that one not be provided without giving any explaination as to why the developer should not be required to provide the signalization or one at Sohier Street.

The association noted in its conclusion, "from our review of these documents, it has become apparent that there are a number of crucial issues which have not been fully and completely addressed in the planning of this project. We believe it is imperative that the developer respond with solutions to all such reasonable public concerns prior to the granting of all public approvals."

Postermaster Fonseca promoted to Marshfield

No sooner did he become a millionaire, than Postmaster Edward Fonseca departed from our town.

No, he hasn't taken up residence along the shores of Monte Carlo, nor has he driven his new Mercedes into the sunset. Fonseca has been promoted and is now serving as Marshfield's Postmaster.

It was a promotion he had been seeking since June, months before he hit the winning Megabucks numbers. He transferred to the Marshfield Post Office last week.

Fonseca made local headlines last month when he claimed the winning weekly Megabucks number for $2,572,820. He will receive $96,480 for the next 20 years.

"I'll probably invest the money," he has stated, "so I can eventually stop working."

Until a new Cohasset Postmaster is named, the position will be filled by an officer in charge. The vacancy has just been posted and names are being taken for consideration.

Fonseca began his postal career in 1968 in Cohasset. He stayed at the Ripley Road office until 1972. He returned in 1980 and left in June, 1982. In December, 1982, he was named Cohasset's Postmaster. All together, he spent about seven years in this community.

"I think I know most of the townspeople," he said from his new command this week in Marshfield. "I made some great friends in Cohasset."

Continual promotion has been the goal of Fonseca since he joined the postal service 17 years ago. The transfer to Marshfield was a natural transition for the man who was raised there and has brought up his children in that town.

He has resided in Marshfield since 1948 and now lives with his parents, Edward and Mary, and his two children, Denise, 21, and Butch, 18.

"In Cohasset, I worked with a great bunch of people. Everyone on the staff was wonderful," he said. "This is a promotion to a larger facility. There are about 35 staff members here, compared to 23 in Cohasset."

The new Postmaster noted, "every three or four years I tend to re-evaluate my goals. I want to go higher and this seemed a good step in that direction."

The 36-year resident of Marshfield said he will miss the many close friends he has made the past years in Cohasset. "I'll be back to Cohasset. I plan to visit all my friends, often," he said. "I made some good friends in Cohasset and I will miss them."

Day care survey

The Parent Student Organization (PSO) will be assessing the needs in Cohasset for extended day care facilities.

The organization intends to determine how many latchkey children there are in the town, and what services are provided for them afterschool.

The PSO has begun to distribute surveys to all parents to determine if there is a need for extended day care in town.

PSO President Caludia Story is heading the committee which is assessing this need.

Campbell at Chamber

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce met at Hugo's Sept. 11. The speaker was Murray Campbell, a consulting engineer with 35 years experience in engineering and project management of electric-generating plants.

He was project manager for the first years of the Beaver Valley nuclear plant in Pennsylvania and for the first six years of Millstone III in Connecticut.

In his spare time, he is president of Mass. Voice of Energy, a citizens organization to promote constructive energy action to reduce oil imports and ensure adequacy of supply.

A resident of Cohasset, he explained that the United States has the smallest percentage of nuclear fuel in use of all the industrialized nations. Since there are few plans for expansion of nuclear energy Campbell said by the year 2000, there will be derprivation, lack of opportunity and lower economic development and growth.

The next scheduled speaker at the Chamber of Commerce meeting in October will be Paul Monteil of Yankee Oil.

State Floor Hockey invites local participation

The state Floor Hockey Association is planning final registration dates for the upcoming 1985-86 Fall-Winter season. This will apply to all teams as well as individual players who desire to participate in this exciting, competitive sport.

All games will be played in the new indoor street hockey facility to be constructed inside the existing South Shore Sports Center located just off Route 3, Exit 13, on Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

Teams and individual players from all of Eastern Massachusetts are invited to join in on the action in our new modern facility.

Games will be played on weeknights and weekends as well, with all teams playing at least once per week, with a second game a week every third or fourth week.

Age classes currently in effect are the Beaver Division (10-12), Cadet Division (13-15), Freshman Division (16-19) and the Senior Division (18 and over). Currently in discussion stages is 18 and over Roller Hockey Division to support rollerskating enthusiasts.

Everyone is eligible to join — experienced and inexperienced. Extensive additional training and coaching are planned. Everyone who joins will play.

The final registration dates in person will be conducted at the Sports Center in Hingham Saturday, Sept. 14 and Sunday, Sept. 15, from 4 to 8 p.m.

Final registration for all teams must be completed at the first major coaches meeting to be held at the Sports Center Monday, Sept. 16, at 7 p.m. It is imperative that a coach or team representative of all prospective teams, new and old alike, attend this meeting to complete your registration in advance.

Information can be obtained by writing to MFHA, P.O. Box 392, Weymouth, MA 02188, or by calling Mark, 834-4862, or the Sports Center, 740-1105.

The Sports Center is located on Recreation Park Dr. in Hingham, between the Liberty Mutual Building and the Pilgrim Arena. Recreation Drive is just beyond the Hingham Plaza off Exit 13 on Route 3.

Reception Sept. 22 for art center exhibit

A two-person exhibit - featuring forms in clay by Judith Rossman and monoprints by Joan Appel -has been selected as the first exhibit of the fall season at the South Shore Art Center.

Works by these two South Shore artists will hang in the Center's gallery, 103 Ripley Road, from Sept. 16 through Oct. 12. An opening reception will be held Sunday, Sept. 22 from 5 to 7 p.m. immediately following the annual fall open house for meeting instructors and enrolling in courses.

Both artists view their work as an expression of their lives. For Rossman, she celebrates the human form in all its moods and activities through her clay forms and with these forms "there are people stretching, celebrating, dancing, loving," she described of her work.

Rossman, a graduate of the Massachusetts College of Art and Wayne State university in Detriot, owns the Country Way Pottery in Scituate. Her exhibits include Metro Arts Gallery in Springfield, Federal Reserve Bank group show, Golden Gull Gallery in Plymouth, South Shore Invitational Art Festivals and other group and invitiantional exhibits.

Her work may be seen at Spectrum Galleries of New England, Newton Pottery House, Alexander's Pottery in Rockport, Zoo Gallery in Ft. Walton, Fla., The Gold Place, Southfield, Minn., and other galleries. She has taught at the South Shore Art Center, the Scituate Public Schools, and in Michigan.

Appel-Jensen describes her work as "an extension of myself. As I work through my life and am affected by the heights and depressions which life offers, my experiences are reflected in my art and my poetry."

She is currently working as development manager for the Art Center, has a diverse background dotted with art, music, business, acting and foreign language translating. Her one-person shows include Benjamin's Art Gallery in Tampa, Fla.; Anderson-Marsh, St. Petersburg; South Shore Art Center's President's Choice exhibit; South Shore Conservatory and the Frame-Up Gallery.

Educated at Syracuse University, Paier School of Art and the New England Conservatory of Music, Appel-Jensen has been affiliated with art associations in Florida, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. Her awards include Boston Globe Golden Key, honorable mention in the South Shore Arts festival, second prize in both the Duxbury and the Scituate Art Associations, and honorable mention in the Cape Cod Art Association. She was invited to show in the National Women's Exhibition at the Galerie Triangle in Washington, D.C.

The works of these two artists, Rossman and Jensen-Appel, presented together in the South Shore Art Center Gallery, may be viewed Monday through Friday from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, contact the Center at 383-9548.

Memories of a summer at Paragon Park

By Tom Henshaw

One weekend it was there, towering over Nantasket Beach like the bleached bones of some reconstructed prehistoric monster.

The next weekend it was gone, dismantled piece by piece to make way for the curse of the 1980s — condominiums. Or is it condominia?

I speak, of course, of the great roller coaster at Paragon Park.

Paragon Park is gone, too, reduced to rubble behind a chain link fence, patrolled, I suppose, by men in three-piece suits with walkie talkies.

It's a shame.

I worked in Paragon Park for two summers while I was in college and I feel a little sorry for the folks who are going to lay out a hundred grand or so to live there.

They'll never get to know the place and the people like I did.

We had a three-part concession in the park, skee ball and pokerino at a nickel a game and, the aristocrat of our little fun empire, a greyhound race at ten cents a try.

I say "we" loosely. Larry and Abe owned the concession. Red and Harold managed it. Red was Larry's man; Harold was Abe's brother. I always assumed that Red was there to watch Harold and vice versa.

In answer to your unspoken question, yes, it was possible to rig a greyhound race.

I'm not saying it ever happened but if I was the guy calling the race on the mike and a mark won, say, three races in a row on the Number Two dog, I could say something like "Chauncey Depew on Two" and my helper, Bobby Rosenberg, Johnny Condon or Caleb Whiton, could disappear through the curtain, ostensibly to get more prizes but actually to turn down the rheostat on that hot Number Two dog.

(By definiton, a "mark" was an individual player; a "tip" was four or more, the required number to start a game.)

I met a future movie star at Paragon Park.

Harold had a girl friend named Beverly. Beverly's niece, Nat, used to hang around the park. Later she turned up as Natalie Trundy, a starlet whose chief claim to fame was a fistfight with Marlene Dietrich at the Cannes Film Festival. Even then Nat was something of an actress. "Star of stage, screen and skeeball," we called her.

I met Joey Bishop, the comedian, at the park, too.

I was hanging at the time with the catcher in the Flying Lamarrs trapeze act which was in the park for a two-week engagement. Catcher knew Bishop, who was performing at the Showboat on George Washington Boulevard. We went down to have a drink with him.

"He in the act?" Bishop asked, nodding at me.

"Park help," said Catcher.

Joey Bishop lost interest.

Park help, as we were called, were very important people one day a year. That was the day before the park opened and they tested the safety of the roller coaster by filling the cars with park help and sending them over the rails for the first time. No sense risking paying customers when park help was exp ndable. I never volunteered. That's probably why I went to college.

Working the ticket booth at the roller coaster, I was told, was a particularly lucrative job, although I can't vouch for this story.

When a guy bought tickets to ride the coaster with a girl, his date usually preceded him through the turnstile. If the turnstile could be made to stick (and it could) the guy would bump into the girl. One out of four would become so excited by the contact that he would forget to pick up his change. At least that's what I was told.

The giant roller coaster isn't the only memorial that has fallen to change.

The Palm Garden Grill was a restaurant at the back of the park. It was run by a man named Owen Brides, who for some reason was nicknamed "Kither." Kither gave park help a cut price on beer on the assumption that we would help him with obstreperous drunks at closing time. Sometimes we did.

The Chateau was a little used ball room over the Palm Garden Grill. It is best remembered as the site of after hours mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and occasionally a bout of free-style wrestling with new found friends of the female persuasion. We called them girls in those days. Seemed like they were easier to pick up then, too.

Strictly speaking, Cohen's Diner was not a part of Paragon Park but it's gone, too. It was on the Boulevard near the MDC circle. Red and I could be found there many a morning at 3 or 4 o'clock, huddled over coffee cups. Only that wasn't coffee in the cups. Seagrams was the popular brand at Cohen's Diner that summer.

Another well-frequented after hours spot was a little room at the back of the park marked "high voltage". The highest voltage in there came in liquid form. Ross Lertora, the boss of the back end of the park, lived in the room during the summer season. I don't know when he slept. We were with him often, arguing, sometimes even throwing punches, until sunup.

The most fascinating people at the park were those who appeared for periods of a week or two at a time to perform on the sway poles, the trapezes and the high wires. We never got to know them very

☐ This must begin with a special greeting to a special fella. . . Happy Birthday to Brendan McCarthy of Pleasant St. fame. Hope it was a good one, and that you have many more happy birthdays!

☐ Don't forget the Cohasset Historical Society's Flea market that will be held a week from Saturday (Sept. 28). If you come across anything while fall cleaning that you can't use any more, please call 383-0773 or 383-6930. This helps the Historical Society continue its community programs.

☐ Congratulations to Muriel Desmond, who had a testimonial dinner held in her honor to celebrate her 25th year in business. She was Jack Conway's first female sales associate, and the rest of her record speaks for itself . . . she is a wonder. More than 75 business associates and her husband Henry, her daughter Barbara and son Robert all had a wonderful time, in honor of a wonderful gal.

☐ The CHS football team had a day off last Saturday, so the Gridiron Club treated them all to the Boston College game held at Foxboro, followed by a huge cookout in the stadium. Everyone had a grand time, including the chef, Patrick McCarthy.

☐ After you finish reading this edition of the Mariner, put it down, pick up your pencil, and circle Saturday on your calendar (Sept. 21). That is opening day for our football team, don't think they haven't worked long and hard to do their best! They play Norwell, and word has it that whoever wins will probably win the small school division championship. Nothing like a big crowd behind you to help boost your confidence, so be there and give your support. The Gridiron Club will even cook your lunch for a very reasonable price.

Looking out the front window of the new Sharon's Chocolate Factory on South Main St. The store opened Saturday with a clown, balloons and lots of goodies.

☐ Sounds like Mary Jeanette Murray has come up with another winner . . .through her efforts a new water ferry has been started, which leaves from Marina Bay in Quincy and Pemberton Pier in Hull. The ferry makes a stop at Atlantic Ave. or Long Wharf, then goes to Logan Airport (where an airport shuttle takes you to your terminal for no additional fee). Parking is free in Hull and Squantum, and you don't have to go through the tunnel!! A commuting alternative that is sure to please.

☐ Congratulations to Noel Ripley he was recently appointed the town's Veterans' Agent.

☐ The Recreation Department is looking for parents that can help out with the Saturday morning soccer program. It only takes a couple of hours each Saturday, and coaches, assistants or other helpers are needed. Call the Rec. Dept. at 383-6791 for more information and to volunteer.

☐ Wonder if Beverly McLaughlin will make a hit at her wedding on Saturday?

☐ The ninth annual Cohasset Riding Club Horse Show will be held a week from Saturday (Sept. 29) in Wheelwright Park. Its as much fun to watch as it is to be in, plan to drop by. The Show begins at 9 a.m.

☐ Its nice to have the "Indian Summer" season upon us! There were more cars at Sandy Beach last Sunday than there were all of the last week in August. Should be the same all week long.

☐ South Shore Striders sure had a good day and a good turnout last Sunday . . . it is so much fun to see a lot of people around the common.

☐ Congratulations to Jeff Brown, who officially received his Eagle Badge recently. Many hours were spent earning this award, and our town certainly was the beneficiary . . .the Town Hall never was better! Jeff is the son of Merle and Joan Brown.

☐ The oceanfront home of Bob and Carol Riley is the setting for some heavy detective drama on ABC-TV's new series, "Spenser: For Hire," debuting on Channel 5, Friday, September 20 at 9 p.m.

Starring Robert Urich (the hero of the "Vegas" TV series), Chuck Connors and Barbara Stock, a segment of the two-hour pilot film was shot last February on a blustery day in Cohasset. Neighbors remember that Warner Brothers TV vans lined Jerusalem Road for a fourteen-hour shooting session, including scenes of Black Rock Beach, the exterior and interior of the Riley home (the Patterson domain in the movie) and a sleek, white Ferrari parked in the Riley's driveway which was rented from Autohaus for Spenser's chief protagonist, Hawk, played by Avery Brooks.

The new TV series, based on Robert B. Parker's excellent detective novels, is being filmed entirely in the Boston area.

☐ That seems to be the news from here . . . keep it coming, there should be a lot now that school is in session. After all, who doesn't like to see their name in print?

Decisions pending on film

few years back with the black sheriff and the idiot mayor. I'm concerned with the way the town's government and the theatre management look in the script you sent us," he said to Mich.

Noting he took "dramatic license" in portraying the characters in the town, Mich said the film would not mimic the farcial quality of that late, less-than-great television program.

"This (film) is about innocence - it is a time of innocence and growing. There must be conflict within the storyline, so we created a mythical mayor," Mich responded, noting that Music Circus producer Ron Rawson had indicated his support of the project.

For the past year and a half, Mich, who grew up in Dorchester and was a Music Circus apprentice in 1970, has talked with local officials and residents about the project. He is eager to gain approval and begin shooting in Cohasset by mid-May.

An actor who has worked in all phases of the entertainment industry, Mich said Monday night this is a story he had longed to produce on film. "The idea was actually born when I was an apprentice at the Music Circus in 1970. I have been actively pursuing this for about a year and a half," he said.

What he plans is exterior filming along Rocky Beach, Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue, Sohier Street, Ripley Road, North and South Main Streets, Elm Street, the police station and the downtown area. Interior shots will be made within the jail cells at the police station.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew has already agreed that his office may be used to depict the mayor's quarters.

In an effort to mask any connection between Cohasset and the community portrayed in the film, the name has been changed to Middleton. The name of the summer theatre will be called the Carousel, according to the producer.

He assured selectmen his film crews would attempt to disrupt the town as little as possible. "We hope to leave the town a little bit better than we arrived," he said. Mich also offered to donate some amount to a charity designated by town officials, as his thanks for the town's anticipated cooperation in the ten-week effort.

According to Mich, who has acted in small television parts on programs such as General Hospital, local people will be employed as actors and 'extras' during the local filming.

Selectmen Mary Jane McArthur and Diane Sullivan were a bit more receptive to the proposal. "I recognize this won't be a documentary," McArthur noted. "Even if there is a negative light cast on the Carousel in Middleton, it won't bother me too much."

Sullivan agreed, adding, "I think it's kind of exciting. I think the townspeople may enjoy this."

They decided to postpone any definitive action on the matter until they could discuss the proposal with Cameron of the Music Circus board of directors. Since production must follow a rigid schedule, selectmen promised they would have a answer soon for the producer and his crew from ANKH Productions.

Editorial

Make the movie

Someone wants to make a movie in Cohasset.

Selectmen were asked Monday night by a Dorchester production company for permission to begin filming in May.

What ANKH Productions intends to film are scenes throughout Cohasset and at the South Shore Music Circus. The movie will describe a summer in the lives of 12 Music Circus apprentices, their activities and adventures in and around Cohasset.

Although we have not been given a script to read, selectmen expressed concern that the local town government and a thinly-veiled summer music theatre management are not portrayed in a favorable light.

The producer, Tony Mich, acknowledges that he has taken certain dramatic liberties in his original script. But what would a story about teens be without a bit of conflict from the local authorities?

Selectmen are hestitant to give full approval to film along our town streets, until they have discussed this further with the Music Circus board of directors.

Noting it will not be us they are inconveniencing in any manner, we still say, let's do it. Unless this is going to be some X-rated project (would someone look into that?), we see nothing wrong, and a lot right with this request.

It will be fun for the town to get involved in this. Townspeople may be used as extras, perhaps some of our more talented residents will be hired for small parts.

This may be our chance at immortality. Our town may be forever remembered for the proposed film (gosh, we hope it's good). And what if it turns out to be a great piece of art? Let's take the chance, give this production company a break, and let them do it.

Obviously, Mich was so impressed with his experience at the Music Circus, he feels compelled to develop it into a major project for all to see. Cohasset has left an indelible mark in his memory, and it could do the same for thousands of movie-goers.

Okay, maybe we're getting a bit out of hand. But we see no reason why this project can't get the approval it seeks to begin. They seem eager to start and a quick response from the town would enable them to begin on schedule.

You know, it won't be such a bad thing for Cohasset's economy, either. Income from crews staying at local inns, eating at local restaurants, and purchasing items from local shops, are some of the monetary benefits we could derive from this.

Let's review the situation carefully and anticipate all possible problems. We hope selectmen can give this a positive reply. It will be a unique experience for everyone.

Career counseling by horoscope

By Claire McDonough

Have you ever noticed how many people are in the wrong line of work? Like that bank robber who tried to hold up the Rockland Trust from the drive-in window?

Clearly, these individuals are in desperate need of career counseling, and what better time than September, when everyone is trying to decide what courses to take?

So I rushed over to Madame Zolar's chic little ashram and asked her what careers members of the various astrological signs should prepare themselves for.

After I had crossed her palm with considerable silver, Madame said that I was not doing too well myself, as I should have posed this question before all the colleges had reopened. She did, nevertheless, deign to pass on the following information.

ARIES (March 21 - April 20): Aries natives are born leaders. The problem is that so few people want to follow them. If you don't feel you will find sufficient financial security as a boy scout leader or a drum majorette, why not prepare yourself for life as a master criminal? Every law enforcement officer on the east coast will be right behind you.

TAURUS (April 21 - May 21): Taureans tend to have thick necks and torsos. They love money and nice possessions, but they are gentle souls who never want to really hurt anyone. You just might make it as a Federation wrestler.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21): It's hard to tell a Gemini what to study. Half of him wants to be a doctor — the other half wants to be a patient. Half wants to be an actor - the other half wants to be an actress. No matter what you choose to do, you'll be half happy and half miserable. You might do well as a marriage counselor. And you can get all the miserable stuff out of your system at work.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23): Whatever profession you select, you'll be happiest if you can surround yourself with meals, mattresses and Mother. If the idea of a motel that serves home cooking doesn't appeal to you (after all, we can't all be Anthony Perkins) give some thought to becoming a chef in a maternity hospital.

LEO (July 24 - August 23): Like well-known Leo NapoleonBonaparte, Leos are meant to conquer and to rule. Enroll at any college, and allow yourself to be recruited by the CIA.

VIRGO (August 24 - September 23): Virgos are happiest when they're cleaning up the messes the rest of us make and shaking their heads and telling us what slobs we are. If you're interested in a lifetime of bliss, get yourself a degree in marine biology, then get to work on Boston Harbor.

LIBRA (September 24 - October 23): Librans love weddings so much they will marry as often as they are asked. You would do well to embrace a career as a wedding consultant. Your own myriad trips down the aisle will give you a wealth of experience to draw from.

SCORPIO (October 24 - November 22): Don't wait another moment — enroll in a course in law enforcement. Scorpios make the world's best detectives. Just take a word of advice from your astrologer and follow an Aries. But bear in mind that he might turn out to be a boy scout leader and not a master criminal.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 - December 21): The symbol of Sagittarius is the Centaur — half man and half horse. This makes you uncomfortable in certain positions, and should immediately rule out a career as an airline pilot or a bus driver. Good luck in the Kentucky Derby.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 20): The symbol of Capricorn is the Goat, who plods his way up the mountain, smashing his head into anything or anyone in his way. This mindless ascent toward a goal should make you a marvelous politician and give you a high tolerance for dull, interminable meetings. Study poly sci.

AQUARIUS (January 21 - Februay 19): Ah, Aquarius! Zany, fun-loving Aquarius. You can go far if you will learn to stop robbing banks from drive-in windows and study something more suited to your talents — like understudy for Elvira, Mistress of the Dark.

PISCES (February 20 - March 20): Pisces natives are sweet, shy, gentle and unassertive. This is why everyone dumps on them. I foresee a great future for you in your local landfill.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Ignore some terrible advice you will receive from a sun sign astrologer. She is clearly in the wrong line of work and would benefit greatly from career counseling.

Can't stand the heat

To the Editor:

Sewer Commissioner DeSantis and I were scheduled to present our views to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce the evening of Sept. 11. A change in flight assignments forced Mr. DeSantis to postpone the date. The other two commissioners refused to substitute for him. Can't they stand the heat?

'I never felt the kids here would not be my friends'

During weekends, she often stays overnight with classmates in Cohasset. Her host families, who care for Joy should she miss the bus or have a late school activity, are the McCarthy's and O'Grady's. "They treat me just like I was a part of their family," she beams.

Her after school activities are limited at the moment because Joy is concentrating her efforts in academics.

"I made the honor roll twice last year, and the high honor roll twice. I'd like to be a computer engineer," she said, adding that she likes mathematics courses in particular.

"I've been in Band, because I play the flute. But this year, I can't do it because I have an honors Spanish class and I would have to drop that to take Band. I want to keep up with Spanish. There are a lot of Spanish-speaking people in Boston, and when my family goes to St. Kitts, we stop by Puerto Rico," she explained.

Joy, she insists, is not an athlete as her brother and sister were. "I'm original. I'm myself," she answers to people who once asked if she was following in their footsteps.

Joy Turner

As for the future, Joy is looking forward to college. And one day, if her children were offered the chance to participate in METCO, she would emphatically approve. "They would have the chance, just as I have, to meet all kinds of people. I have really enjoyed it," she said.

Floyd is now 17 and at the end of his involvement with the Cohasset METCO program. He is not exceptionally large, but has an athlete's build. He is muscular, handsome and thoughtful.

As Joy exited the METCO conference room, he wondered aloud, "You're 14. I can't believe it. Boy, I'm getting old."

It was difficult for Floyd to concentrate during this early morning interview. Besides an upcoming examination, he was thinking of Saturday's big game against Norwell.

"Every time I think about it, I get real nervous," Cohasset's left halfback said, holding his hand to his chest. In a moment's notice, he can talk about football endlessly. "I really want to win this game. I'd like to go out of this school with the Small School title this year."

A resident of Roxbury, Floyd came to Cohasset in the fifth grade. Since that time, he has proven himself an able scholar and outstanding athlete on the football, basketball and track teams.

Looking forward to a career in business management, Floyd has begun the process of college selection. Some colleges have approached him, and he will start to evaluate the offers.

"Being a good athlete, people tend to accept you more easily," he said. "That's true for any kid who is an athlete and it has definitely worked to my advantage."

Since his first days in Cohasset, long before he ran for touchdowns, Floyd knew he would be accepted here. "I never felt that the kids here would not be my friends. They made the effort to welcome me, and that was it," he noted.

He has best friends here and back home. Sometimes, his friends in Roxbury resent the time Floyd spends away in Cohasset. "I tell them it's a commitment I've made and it's got to be fulfilled," he stated, adding that his involvement in METCO "has exposed me to more than I would see in the city. I have seen the ways of life in both the city and in the suburbs, and I have been influenced by both."

METCO, Floyd said, has had a positive effect on his life. "I've pushed myself here," he stated, "to do the best I can.

"I'm also more aware of people's attitudes toward one another. If some of my friends talk about white people in a certain way, I correct them. I try to explain it to them. People in Cohasset are not threatened by black people. They are high class people."

Although he has dated Cohasset girls, and girls from his hometown, Floyd said he is not dating anyone steady. His commitment now is to education, and football.

"The comraderie in football is like no other sport," he noted. "I feel very close to the players, because we play as one unit. In order to win, everyone has to come to the point where we are blended together."

Floyd Hardwick

The coaches, he said, have helped him adjust to school and athletic life in Cohasset. "They have taught me to play with intensity, not to slack off," he explained. One coach in particular, Phil Pisano, has helped Floyd put his future into perspective. "He has come to my home to talk to my parents about college. He has written letters for me. He wants me to go to a college where they'll encourage me to play. He's been a real positive influence."

From his involvement in football, Floyd has received "a boost in school. I like going to school, knowing I am going to see the other players on the team. We like to do things together. On Fridays we wear shirts and ties -things like that - just to let everyone know we're not a bunch of thugs."

When asked if he would have received the notoriety if he was a member of a larger urban team, Floyd answers affirmatively. "People here really like sports. But I have played in park leagues in Boston and received the same amount of publicity. I got credit for doing the same things, but the level of attention here is higher. It's a different atmosphere," he said.

Final Mental Health Action Project Report

By Philip Johnston
Secretary, Office of Human Services

Commentary

I wanted to share with you the final report of the Mental Health Action Project (MHAP), which was recently presented to Governor Dukakis.

I believe the report represents a milestone in our efforts to greatly improve the care we provide for the chronically mentally ill. The mental health system has been embattled in a debate over which system of care is the best—hospitalization or community based residences. Now, for the first time in a generation, we have an all-important concensus that a balanced system of care for our mentally ill must be the cornerstone for the future.

This conclusion comes from a broad base of 103 individuals who have worked to make the MHAP report happen over the last eight months. In December, I asked advocates, consumers, family members, legislators, professionals and state officials to join with me in setting the course of mental health care. I believe their findings and recommendations deserve your attention.

The report does not sidestep the serious obstacles that have stymied the mental health system. It addresses the major deficiency in our system of care today—the inability of those most in need to access the system easily and to receive needed care in a time of crisis. It also properly and significantly takes note of families. Families are the major care givers in our mental health system, and the MHAP has made important recommendations so that we can better support families in their desire to care for their sons and daughters, mothers and fathers.

Among the substantial recommendations are:

+ Our mental health system must stand ready to offer 24-hour, 7-days-a-week crisis intervention to everyone in need of care, no matter where they reside.

+ We must develop both transitional and long-term housing. In short, a variety of supervised and independent residential programs for mentally ill individuals.

+ By identifying the deficiencies in the management and financing our system, we can move effectively toward resolving problems that ultimately effect the delivery of quality care.

As Father Frank Irwin, the chair of the steering committee has said, I believe this report gives us "the blueprint for the future of mental health in the Commonwealth." He and other steering committee members will continue to work closely with us as we devise an implementation plan.

The next step is clear. Governor Dukakis has instructed me to work other key members of his Administration to review the report and return with an implementation plan. I have already engaged my staff, as Mental Health Commissioner Edward Murphy has assigned his, to work with Administration and Finance Secretary Frank Keefe, Communities and Development Secretary Amy Anthony, and Commissioner Tunney Lee of the Division of Capital Planning and Operations, to collectively develop the details of a greatly improved network of care.

While the Governor will be making his major announcement on mental health later this fall, I urge you to take the time from your busy schedules to review the final report of the MHAP. I know many of you share my concerns about the consistent delivery of quality care in our mental health system. I believe you will find, as I did, that this report brings us to a critical crossroad in improving all of our services to the chronically mentally ill.

PSO plans year devoted to 'whole child'

While students and teachers are getting acclimated to the new school year, the Parent School Organization (PSO) has been in full swing since summer, planning programs, conducting fundraising, setting up committees, and preparing the official PSO school Calendar for 1985-86.

This year will be devoted to activities, events, and programs geared to the "well-being of the whole child," according to President Nancy Sandell. At last Thursday's executive board meeting committee chairmen and school representatives presented their ideas and plans to help meet that goal.

Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill was invited to speak to the board on current issues and problems facing students and the ways the PSO can be most effective in helping them to cope and grow. Some of his concerns were alcohol and drug use, peer pressure, teen pregnancy, the effects of divorce and working parents (the latchkey child), the "hurried child," and teen suicide.

He stressed that the drug problem is worse than ever in society and health education programs in place now are not proving effective in that they do not reach the home; he feels that parents are best suited to building self-esteem, and combating the negative messages kids are getting from the media on alcohol, sex, and drugs.

In an effort to reinforce the family's teachings, Mike plans to have the high school's peer counselors attend a day-long workshop addressing these issues, to reactivate and computerize the communications survey developed a few years ago and designed to help bridge "the gap," and to encourage parents to support the hiring of an elementary school counselor (Cohasset is one of only a few towns in Massachusetts which does not have an in-house elementary level support person).

He is also leading the panel discussion sponsored by the Social Service League: "Chemically Free," for junior/senior high students and parents on October 2, 9 and 16.

As the PSO's contribution to enhancing student/-parent awareness, Arts Enrichment Chairman Marylou Lawrence presented an idea for a project she is researching which would involve the students in a dramatic play written and directed by Kevin Lariviere, dealing with peer pressure and substance abuse. The board voted to fund this well-received program pending approval of the administration.

The PSO was pleased to welcome two other guests recently "in the news.": Colleen Lucas, the new high school art teacher and Eileen Mills, METCO Coordinator. Mrs. Lucas thanked Sue McNamara and the Arts Boosters for her welcoming reception and promised she would try to find and light that certain spark in each of her students to appreciate art in all its forms.

Mrs. Mills was enthusiastic about beginning her second year as coordinator for the 48 METCO students in Cohasset and plans to improve communications between families. PSO METCO Co-chairman Sue Terry will work closely with Eileen to recruit host families and plan a special dinner this fall for Boston and Cohasset families to get together.

Her Boston counterpart Marilyn Wood told the board she will be calling other Boston parents each month to attend PSO meetings. They were very pleased with the recent articles in the Mariner and hoped the publicity would encourage more families to become involved.

Activities Chairmen Gerri and Paul Kalita also have plans for an exciting evening for all parents at the Fall General Membership/Orientation Meeting scheduled for Thursday, November 7. They would like to see lots of new-to-the-system faces and find out what talents they have to offer.

The eight school representatives have been meeting with principals, faculty, and students, helping to get the year started smoothly. Osgood reps Sue McNamara and Shelley Weier are organizing Room Mothers who will host teas at which teachers will discuss their volunteer needs.

Number one on Principal Jack Creamer's wish list is something the Osgood reps will tackle soon—a renovated Art room. Other ideas in the works include a day care survey, a program on the hurried child, and expanded enrichment activities such as Great Books and problem-solving workshops begun last year.

Jean Reidy and Pat Ellinger are working with Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg recruiting room mothers and volunteers for the library and I.M.S. labs, and arranging help with Open House (October 3) including a raffle to benefit the sixth grade spring whale watch trip.

Adrienne Thompson reported that she and Judy Volungis met with seventh and eighth grade class officers in August. The PSO will assist the eighth grade in sponsoring a dance in November as well as other activities for the junior high.

Senior high reps Linda Starmer and Cynthia Hurley have several events in the planning stages including a Haunted House run by the tenth grade for the whole community, and a college information night for parents. They will co-sponsor with the ninth grade a dance to welcome the seventh graders, set for September 30 at the high school.

Linda also reported she will continue the popular Career Lecture Series she initiated last year. She and Cynthia would like to encourage more extra-curricular activities such as ski trips and perhaps rekindle interest in a school newspaper.

Because all these planned programs and activities sometimes require money as well as time, Fundraising Chairman Rosie Dole has been stepping up efforts to enlist the support and sponsorship of local businesses and merchants.

She wants the business community to know that the Parent School Organization is not "just a bunch of mothers baking cookies," but rather a professionally run group with a serious purpose whose programs benefit all school-age children. Among the many fundraisers she and her committee have planned is the intriguing idea of a children's cookbook, followed up with a kitchen tour in the spring.

The Special Needs Committee headed by Karen Coyne will continue their fine program of handicap awareness beginning in January, with activities planned for Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

In order that parents be made aware of all these events and programs Publicity Chairmen Monica McKenney and Carol Riley will prepare weekly articles for the local newspapers describing in more detail "what's happening." Parents with news to report may call Monica (383-1338) or Carol (383-6215). The School News column in the Mariner will be the place to check for important dates, sports listings, students making news, and information on school policies and programs.

In adjourning the board meeting, Nancy Sandell thanked the members for their hard work over the summer and remarked that with continued cooperation and teamwork between the PSO and the schools, the children of Cohasset are likely to have their best year ever.

PSO Recording Secretary

New school equipment

The High School audio-visual studio has been equipped with a new switcher-fader that makes it possible to do multiple camera shoots and to do a variety of special effects.

This will create a much more "professional studio" experience for the students and faculty this year.

AFS meeting

Tuesday, September 24 at 7:30 p.m. there will be a meeting at the Cohasset High School for all students and their parents who are interested in applying for an A.F.S. experience.

Students are asked to bring at least one of their parents to this meeting.

School pictures time is here

Student photos will be taken at the Osgood School on Tuesday, October 1; at Deer Hill School on Friday, October 11; and at C.H.S. on Thursday, September 26.

Osgood School salutes

Elizabeth Good in Mrs. Clark's room was recently honored for winning at her Grade Level Channel 5's "A World of Difference" poster contest.

Since WCVB-TV received hundreds of entries, the selection of her art work by local artists and community leaders is quite an honor. Her poster will be one of 12 posters included in Channel 5's 1986 "A World of Difference" calendar. In addition, her poster will be displayed along with other posters in Doric Hall at the State House during "Kids Can Make a World of Difference" week. Also, she was honored by Governor Dukakis at a State House ceremony this past Wednesday, September 11.

Magazine drive

Students who wish to participate in the annual magazine subscription drive will begin selling door-to-door, September 18 to 23.

The monies realized goes into the grade 7 and grade 8 class accounts. In the past, each class has earned $1500 to $1700. These funds give them a large step towards their senior year graduation needs.

No student is required to sell magazines. The selling occurs during out-of-school time; it involves accepting money, (although all subscribers should pay by check—payable to Cohasset High School).

Early release day

Deer Hill School will have an early release day Thursday, September 26. Dismissal will be at 12:45 p.m.

Community fundraising

The CCC has officially begun its fundraising campaign to renovate the barn located behind the Center at 3 N. Main Street.

There has been overwhelmingly positive reaction to the planned renovation and many people in the community have already generously contributed to the barn renovation.

The numerous donations received from the community combined with one generous individual donation has already brought the fundraising total to $15,000.

If the Center can obtain another $5,000 in contributions they have been promised a matching grant of $20,000. This will bring the total fundraising received to $40,000.

Alcohol and Drug Issues

Alcohol and Drug Issues will be discussed for junior-senior high school students and their parents during the following days: Wed., Oct. 2-students only; Wed., Oct. 9-parents only; Wed., Oct. 16-students and parents, from 7:30-9:00 p.m. at the Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephen's Church.

Leading the sessions will be professionals from the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, the Alcohol Resource Center and Mike Gill, Health Coordinator for the Cohasset Schools.

Information and informal discussion will focus on mind-altering drugs and alcohol. The goal will be to raise awareness of their effects, peer pressure issues and the parents' role in choices made by their sons and daughters. In the last session, students and parents will join together to increase levels of communication and understanding.

Refreshments will be served at each meeting.

The meetings are sponsored by Social Service League of Cohasset.

Youth Concerts

The BSO Youth Concerts will be held Saturday, Nov. 23, March 8, and May 3. There are still a few seats available. Price is $14 for the three concerts. A bus leaves Joseph Osgood School at 9:30 a.m., and returns at 12:30 p.m. If interested, please contact Carmen Schramm at 383-1076 before November 21.

Scout registration

Would you like to be a scout? You can if you are in second grade and want to be a Tiger Cub.

Cub Scouts are boys eight years old or seven years and passed second grade. You can be a Webelo Scout if you are 10 or have passed fourth grade.

Boy Scouts, Troop 28 is for boys ages 11-18 yrs. Cohasset Pack 38 and Troop 28 registration will take place at Unitarian Parish Hall, North Main Street, Thursday, Sept. 19 at 6:30—7:30 p.m.

Parents must accompany the child. For information call 828-8360 or 383-1625.

Explorer Post 28 is for any person, ages 14-21. Registration and a meeting will take place Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Arthur Lehr's home, 200 No. Main St.

The Explorers are charted for Emergency Preparedness, emergency first aid, search and rescue, and high adventure including camping and rock climbing.

Some old and new striders Sunday

Marty Post of South Weymouth was the first woman to cross the finish line after running the 8.1-mile course in less than an hour.

Kevin McCarthy, the overall winner of Sunday's Striders race, stands proudly after the race with son John, 5.

Bethany Certa has a bird's eye view of the action as she watches the first runners cross the finish line.

Handicapped racer Bill Townsend finished a respectable fourth in Sunday's 8.1 mile course.

with water. "I simply figured this was the only way I was going to discipline myself - if I just go out this morning and run.

"The first time I heard about the race was in Thursday's Mariner. And I finally made up my mind today."

Running to the first half-mile mark was the toughest stretch of the entire course for Ellen. "Once I got there, I thought to myself, I bet I can keep going and finish this. It was most stressful because it's a function of questioning whether I can do it. I wondered if I looked foolish. Then I realized that most of the people running looked pretty foolish," she laughed, looking down at her worn track shirt, once a possession of her son, George.

"You know, you get in your 40's and your lifestyle becomes sedentary. I knew I had to do something drastic like this to get going," Ellen said. She will continue to run, and even accepted a registration form for another road race.

"I vowed I would do this, now I'll keep going. I met another woman who was running her first race and we're both going to stick with this," Ellen said, wondering, "Can the Bonnie Bell be far behind?"

Mother, son and grandmother were going to spend their Sunday evening in some quiet restaurant - a payoff to Ellen for winning a bet that she wouldn't run. "It'll be something low calorie, of course," she said.

The first woman to cross the finish line was Marty Post, 38, of South Weymouth. Marty, like Kevin McCarthy, was pleasantly pleased and surprised with her win. Her time was 58:58, which according to the veteran racer is "good, it's alright, I guess."

Marty had been out of racing for four months this winter with an injury which is now healed. Along with the support and coaching assistance of her husband, David, she runs about 35 to 40 miles a week each morning.

"I enter road races almost every weekend," she explained. "When there's a good race around, I'll be there."

She has never before won a race, "this is a new experience for me," she explained.

The course, according to the competitor, was hilly, "but very scenic. It's always good to come to Cohasset. It's a great place to have a race. I didn't do so well in the Rotary race last spring, not really well at all, but it was after my injury. Today, the weather was great, maybe a bit too hot. But it was a beautiful day," she noted.

Among the other race participants was Sharon Tassini, the first place finisher in the 19-29 years open category. Sharon is from Millis, and this was her first visit to Cohasset.

"I was in the Scituate 10 K race this summer and it was so beautiful, I decided to try this one in Cohasset. The weather was perfect, and this town is gorgeous," she said, just prior to the awards ceremony. "After being here today, I will seriously think about coming back for the 10 K race in the spring."

CHS sports report for the week . . .

By Lisa Shumaker

Varsity Boys' Soccer

The boys had an impressive and busy opening week. Wednesday, Cohasset squeezed by East Bridgewater, 1-0. Coach Jon Anderson was pleased with the victory but felt his team was suffering from a bad case of first game jitters.

Bobby Shultz scored the lone goal off a pass from Mark Crough. John Reidy led the team's defensive attack. Anderson also cited Kurt Weisenfluh and Geoff Christensen as having good games.

Goalie Bill McKenna picked up his first shutout of the season.

Friday, the Skippers travled to Nauset and played the first half of their two-game overnight series on the Cape.

Anderson felt his team had an excellent game which ended up in a 0-0 deadlock. Nauset is by far one of the strongest and most talented teams the boys will face all season, according to Anderson, and Cohasset did an admirable job just keeping the game even.

Once again, John Reidy stood out on the Skipper's defense, shutting down Nauset's top scoring forward. Geoff Christensen also added to the excitement of the contest by hitting the post with a shot with a mere 30 seconds left on the clock.

Saturday, the Skippers bounced back from the tough game to trounce Harwich, 4-1. Anderson called this his team's best game yet as Cohasset totally dominated the field.

Christensen put in the first goal off of Todd Fitzpatrick's corner kick. Chris Kirkendal scored second off a give and go with Bobby Shultz, who then scored and was assisted by Geoff Christensen. Mark Crough headed in Todd Fitzpatrick's corner kick to give Cohasset its fourth and final goal.

Anderson was impressed with his entire team and especially the efforts of Chris Kirkendal and Mark Crough.

This week, the boys faced Abington home Tuesday. Thursday, the Skippers are home again and play defending league champion Norwell. This is the team's biggest game of the season thus far. Both games begin at 3:15 p.m. on Milliken Field.

Varsity Girls' Field Hockey

The girls surprised everyone but themselves as they opened with a victory over long-time rival, Hanover, 1-0. Rumor has it that it has been over 13 years since Cohasset's varsity field hockey team has beaten this powerhouse. The girls played with the poise and confidence of a seasoned team.

Cindy Spooner made a brilliant pass which slipped by Hanover's goalie and set up Maureen Farren's goal.

The whole team played so well it's difficult to single out any outstanding players. However, fullbacks Sarah Dickerman and Jill Shockman foiled all of Hanover's attempts to score while Kara McDonald, Maria Cahill, and Maureen Farren kept the pressure on down on offense. Lisa Shumaker had the shutout in net.

Friday, Cohasset walked over a weak Middleboro, 3-0. The girls did a fantastic job keeping the ball on their offensive end. However, the Skippers did have a little trouble putting the ball in the net.

Lee Sullivan, Ginny Nussdorfer, and Maureen Farren all picked up goals for Cohasset. Both Lee Sullivan and Maria Cahill turned in good efforts for the Skippers.

Goalie Debbie Hartley picked up her first varsity shutout which will undoubtedly be one of many in her career.

Tuesday, the girls faced Abington at 3:15 on the front field. Thursday, the team makes the long trek to East Bridgewater, a game which should prove to be quite a challenge for Cohasset.

Varsity Girls' Soccer

The girls began their season Wednesday with a heartbreaking loss against East Bridgewater, 3-2. The Skippers came out unexpectedly strong and pleased their Coach Kennan Startzell with their play. Cohasset came out quickly and took the lead. The teams swapped goals until a questionable call gave East Bridgewater a goal to make the score 2-2, as well as the momentum to go ahead and win late in the game.

Startzell was proud of the fact that even though Cohasset was down by a goal, they never gave up and were still peppering the Eastie goalie with shots with less than 30 seconds to play. This showed Startzell that where his team may lack in talent, they make up in character.

Liz O'Leary and Karin Anglin picked up their first goals of the season. Fullback Jen Chapman had an excellent game as well.

Friday, the girls lost to Duxbury 4-2.

Once again, Startzell was impressed with the way in which Cohasset handled a much more seasoned team. However, a lapse of a mere 10 minutes cost the team the game, for in this short time Duxbury scored the deciding goals.

Startzel commended the way in which the girls played as a unit but feels they must work on finishing off plays, especially in scoring. Once the players learn to assert themselves on the field and play with a little more intensity, Startzell believes he will have yet another tournament team on his hands.

Against Duxbury, Susan Riley was the backbone of the team at sweeper, while Caitlin Staunton did a commendable job on offense. Overall, Startzell has been pleased with Caitlin's progress and feels that in no time she will be a dominant force up front.

Monday, the girls had a bad day and lost to Hanover 2-0. Unfortunately, it was just one of those days when nothing goes right.

The Skippers will undoubtedly bounce back on Wednesday when they face Norwell on Milliken Field. Friday, Cohasset will be tried again as they match their finesse against Rockland's physique.

Note: Boys' Varsity Coach Jon Anderson wanted to point out that the J.V. team is currently undefeated with a record of 3-0.

The boys beat East Bridgewater 2-0 with both goals coming from Jim Gallagher. Nauset fell to Cohasset on Friday, 2-1. Jim Gallagher and Ian Smart scored the two goals. Finally on Saturday, the boys clobbered Harwich 3-0. Both Jim Reidy and Kostas Roukounakis picked up goals, as well as Jim Gallagher, who continued to keep his scoring streak going.

Kasperowicz wins series

Under clear September skies and a good northwest wind, Ray Kasperowicz, with Bob Davenport and Tad Kasperowicz crewing, won the final Scot race Sept. 14 and with it won the summer-long series.

Pete Chapman, with Harry and Kathy St. Onge crewing in the final race, took a close second in the series. Roger Porter and Chet Ellis claimed third place with their Scot, the Merry Jane.

Fourth place wound up a three-way tie between Steve Bartow, Pete Goedecke, and Bob Jackson. Karl Goedecke (Pete's brother) was awarded the cup for outstanding crewing.

Cohasset's Flying Scot Fleet No. 105, with the return of Jack McCarthy, grew to a dozen boats this summer and welcomes new members.

If interested, contact Pete Goedecke, fleet captain.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

APPLYING ICE

As a therapy for use on inflammations, ice has no equal in terms of safety and effect. The application of cold to an ache, sprain, pain or strain acts to constrict the small blood vessels in the area. As a result, less fluid escapes into the tissue. It also decreases the amount of blood received in the area. Both effects decrease the swelling. With less inflamation, there is less pressure on the nerves and muscles, thereby lessening pain. The application of heat has the opposite effect on blood flow and swelling. This is why a cold pack should be used first. After 72 hours, moist heat can be alternated with cold packs. If either therapy, hot or cold, causes an increase in pain stop the therapy. Visit a chiropractor.

The science of chiropractic addresses the total state of well-being. By approaching and correcting points of interference along the spinal column, Mother Nature's natural healing instructions are allowed to flow from the brain, "headquarters," to every organ and extremity of the body. Thus a natural healing process occurs and well-being should soon follow. For the chiropractic assessment you desire and deserve, we welcome your call at the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. "Chiropractic doesn't cost; it pays." Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Memories of Uncle Fred, 'Pied Piper'

By Dorothy Squier

Back in 1910 my bachelor Uncle Fred had a "tattoo parlor" on Hanover Street in Boston and did a brisk business when ships came into port. He lived alone, as far as we knew, in a cottage in Revere, though none of us had ever visited him there.

I recall hearing Mama saying, "George, I have a hunch that your brother has a lady friend."

And well he might, for he was a vital looking man close to six feet tall with thick brown hair, a soft mustache, ruddy cheeks and the dancing-est blue eyes you ever saw. He was in his early thirties and looked like Papa except he was heavier and had no gray hair.

He used to come to our house quite often and was always sure of a noisy welcome from me and my sisters. We adored him. But one Sunday morning we heard a heavy thump on the front stoop and found Uncle Fred on the floor at the door. His cheeks were ablaze with fever and the blue eyes dull and watery.

We helped carry him in and, with Mama directing, got him into Lizzie's bed. (Being the oldest daughter, she had a room of her own; the rest of us slept in cots up in the attic.)

"Liz, you'll have to bunk in with your sisters. George, call Dr. McGirr. I'm afraid it's pneumonia." The authoritative voice went on. "Chrissie, keep away from him. He's a very sick man. Probably doesn't get enough to eat. Never has regular meals. God, I wish he'd get married."

We gave him round-the-clock care until the fever broke and the crisis was over. Mama nursed him for three long months. We fed him broths and egg nogs or a glass of port with a raw egg dropped in (which made me nauseous but he loved it), until gradually his appetite returned and he began to gain weight and get around without hanging on to one of us. There were six of us so he never wanted for help.

Came the day when he told us he was going back to work, Papa put an arm around his shoulder.

He said, "Fred, you can thank Mame for being alive. You'd better come over here more often and let her cooking put some fat on those bones."

Tears of weakness filled Uncle Fred's eyes and ran down his cheeks , but now the cheeks were a healthy pink and the eyes were clear and merry.

Chrissie and I went into Boston with him that first day. We took the subway to Park Street, the trolley to Haymarket and walked down Hanover Street. Attached to the wall beside a door on the street was a box with a glass front. It framed samples of Uncle Fred's artistry; hearts pierced with arrows, American flags, eagles, pretty ladies with large bosoms, anchors, cupids, crosses, all brightly colored. Hidden somewhere in the box a little hammer kept tapping out a message, brrrrt! brrrrt! brrrrt! a metallic sound to catch the attention of passersby.

We climbed a flight of stairs to the "parlor" and Uncle Fred settled himself into an old worn leather chair. There were two other chairs, a desk and a table littered with trays of procelain cups of colored inks or dyes, needles and—well, I guess you'd call them the "tools of the trade".

Uncle Fred thanked the helper who had taken over for him, gave Chris and me each a dollar, a hug and a kiss and said he'd come for dinner next Sunday.

And so he did! Halfway down our street was the drugstore where he stopped and bought a whole bunch of little ice cream cones—I think they were a penny apiece. The druggist took a big penny-candy box top, punched holes in it and stuck the cones in. Uncle Fred marched out calling,

"Here comes the hokey-pokey man!"

By the time he reached our house all the kids in the neighborhood were clinging to his legs. He was the Pied Piper of Baldwin Street...dear kindhearted Uncle Fred. How we loved him!

After a while his Sunday visits became sporadic and then stopped, but Mama always seemed to know about him. Then Papa died in November 1918, and Uncle Fred came back to us once more.

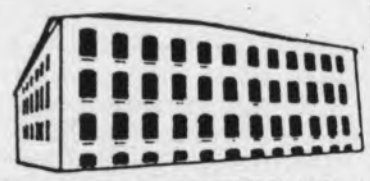
He questioned Mama. "Mame, is there enough coal in the celler? I'd better order a ton. Now make out a list of groceries and I'll pick them up."

He seemed to anticipate our every need and Mama never had to ask for help or admit a lack of money. He just seemed to understand. He stayed with us through that winter. By then I was allowed to go in town alone and I always dropped in to see him on Hanover Street. Honestly, it wasn't just for the dollar I knew I'd get—I really did love him.

In the spring he left us and we didn't see him again. Then Mama heard that he had married.

She said, "Thank God! Now he has someone to care for him. Now don't you ever question him if you see him," she warned us. "If he wanted us to know about her he'd tell us."

When he died some years later we were informed that the services were private. Mama, being the last person in the world to push herself on anyone, didn't go. But she had Masses said for him and made sure we all remembered him in our prayers.



So we were left with only our memories of dear Uncle Fred.

A good man.

Cohasset Worship . . .

St. Stephan's Church

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue, inaugurated its church school with classes for every age Sunday, September 15.

Kindergarten children gathered at 10 a.m. to learn of Jesus' healing of a blind man, the same story their parents heard in church. These children then entered the church with their crafts in hand at communion for a blessing at the altar.

The Primary class, grades one to three, also meeting at 10 a.m., listened to a cassette tape of the Creation story following the account with eyes riveted to the colorful pictures of a story book. They made a bright collage with many colors to show how happy God was with creation. They joined the worship service at the Offertory for the Eucharist.

The Intermediate and Junior High children gathered at 9:15 a.m. to read the Creation story in the Bible and then they wrote a creative story of what God did on the day He rested.

The Senior High students begin their classes and meetings next weekend with a trip to New Hampshire. Sunday afternoons at 4 p.m. they will study topics such as "Baptism and Confirmation", "Our Gospel and the Scriptures", and "Mission and Ministry". They will travel to Boston to see the mission of the church in housing efforts in Roxbury, Dorchester, and the Jamaica Plain communities.

The Intermediate through Senior High youth are present through the entire worship service so that their experience of community is enhanced by the intentional teaching of our common story as the People of God. Young people learn the Bible and about the Church in a systematic way and go at their own pace. Individual attention is a hallmark of every class experience.

The day was one of great joy for the people of St. Stephen's, capped off by a parish picnic by the seaside. For a number of years children learned through the shared experience of worship. Now, in addition to this experience of community and involvement in the church, a full complement of teachers and children of all ages come together to intentionally learn the essentials of the Christian faith.

The Christian Education classes have begun again at St. Stephen's Church. Here teacher Helen Hooper helps student Ian Simons with his craft work.

CCD — Due to the "retirement" of some of our teachers, both teachers and aides are needed at all levels. If you can assist in the program, please call Jean Lennon in the CCD office or at home, 383-1164. CCD Board will meet on Monday, Sept. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Rectory. Members of the board are: Patricia Anstead, Patricia Dockray, Daniel Duffy, Marjorie Murphy and Jeffrey Waal.

Chemically Free — The Social Service League of Cohasset is sponsoring a three part series, especially designed to bring students and parents together to raise awareness of issues regarding alcohol and drugs. Leading the sessions will be professionals from the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, and the Alcohol Resource Center and Mike Gill, health coordinator for the Cohasset Schools. The series will be held on three Wednesday evenings, Oct. 2, 9 and 16 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's, 16 Highland Ave. The first session will be for junior and senior high school students only, the second for parents and the final session for students and parents . We recommend ths program to our CCD students and parents. For further information call 383-0771 or 383-1821.

Chrism — Adult Enrichment Series, a six-week program that will include the following: Healing in Scripture, Stress Kills or Stress Skills, Personal Portraits of Jesus, and Politics, Social Questions and the Catholic Church. Classes will be held on Thursdays, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at St. Bernadette Rectory Chapel in Randolph beginning Oct. 3. The fee is $3 per class or $10 for the six weeks. For more information contact Chrism at 331-5194.

Annual Collection — for the Catholic University and higher education will be taken up on the last wee-end of September. We need today, perhaps more than ever before, a center for education for clerical religious and lay leadership which is faithful to the teachings of the Church and which will also support the highest values of our nation. Catholic University provides this invaluable service to the Church.

St. Thecla's — of Pembroke, Divorced and Separated Meetingss will be held on the first and third Thursdays of the month. Any questions, call Joann at 545-6759 after 7:30 p.m.

First Parish

Family picnic - will take place Sept. 22 in the field between the Martins' and Ellises'. The old fashioned picnic will begin at 2 p.m.

From 2 to 3 p.m., the Purple Doog (for the younger kids) will perform, and from 3 to 4 p.m., the Lenny Kay Trio will play.

Hamburgers, hot dogs, and sausages will be charcoaled to perfection and sold to accompany a Parish smorgasbord of salads and desserts. There will be balloons, cotton candy, popcorn, sno-cones, birch beer, beer, wine, horse shoes, volley ball, corquet, family relays and swimming.

B.U.L.G.E. - For anyone who doesn't know the meaning, it happens in Boston, it is composed of Unitarians and their friends, they have lunch together, they are a group varying in size from four to eight people, and they are elite. The next BULGE meeting is at Remington's, Boylston Street (near the Colonial Theatre), Boston, on Monday, Oct. 7, at 11:45 a.m.

Family Circle - and classes begin Sept. 29. Join and make Sunday mornings special. Be a part of the First Parish family.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

GROUNDS FOR DAMAGES

There are generally two grounds for damages in a personal-injury suit. Special damages are those items which, under law, must be documented before money can be collected. They include income losses and medical expenses caused by the injury. General damages include the pain and suffering from the injury and accompanying mental anquish. General damages cannot be documented in dollar terms. As the law sees it, however, in the event of wrongful injuries, it is the duty of the wrongdoers to make the victims "whole." This means restoring them to the position that they enjoyed, and expected to enjoy, before the injury intervened. How this is done is determined by negotiating lawyers or, at trial, by a judge or jury.

Claims for financial damages very often involve substantial sums of money. Through experience and knowledge of precedent setting cases your position and entitlement may be enhanced. This column is brought to you as a public service in the hopes of increasing your knowledge and awareness of your legal rights. The LAW OFFICE OF RICHARD PRICE; SMITH, SMITH & PRICE, P.C., 202 Mill Wharf Plaza, Scituate, 545-6660 is available to serve your legal needs with the expertise you deserve. I am available daily by appt.

HINT

The purpose of a punitive damage is, in part, to deter others from committing the same vicious act.

Church news

Second Congregational

Food and Clothing Collection — Non-perishable food for Quincy Crisis Center and warm winter clothing for children or adults, may be left at the church this week or next. Our Board of Deacons urges you to help our nearby neighbors in need.

A Note from the Minister — "Every good endowment and perfect gift comes from above . . ." With those words from the Bible, layman Jack Hill last week challenged our church's members and friends to give generously to New Initiatives In Church Devlopment (NICD). Before the end of the decade, 200 communities across the nation will have new or renewed churches because of NICD, Mr. Hill reported. The UCC offers to us and to others a creative, faithful pattern of church life. Our balance of commitment and freedom is obviously appealing to many, including urban ethnic groups as diverse as Koren and Hispanic congregations.

Such groups, along with new congregations meeting the needs of growing sunbelt populations, need financial help to establish healthy churches.

You will receive additional N.I.C.D. information and reply envelopes. Please consider a generous gift for this one-time appeal, so that the UCC can undertake its church development programs with your support. Your gift of $25, $50 or $100 is an investment in the future.

Helping Other Widows and Widowers — HOW is a group of widows, widowers, and supportive friends who help themselves by reaching out to others. We meet twice a month at Old South Union Church (across from the South Shore Hospital). It is a non-sectarian group. We have both educational meetings on topics of concern to widows and widowers and mutual support group meetings. Transportation can be arranged—for more information, please call Evelyn at 335-6631, Norman at 747-0098, Nancy at 383-0987, or Eleanor at 331-3523. Please come if you feel you need help or are willing to reach out and help others.

On railroads, rock and roll, and regulations

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

The history of the American railroad is a rather interesting mirror of the role of government, both for good and for ill, in our economic development. The first railroads were private ventures, but the government was crucially involved, for in most cases rights of way had to be acquired by eminent domain. In the West, where the government held title to the land, railroad entrepreneurs were enticed by an offer of a ribbon of land two miles wide along any railroad that might be constructed.

The American railroad got built all right. Less than half a century after the first, daring use of a rail to a Quincy quarry, the American railroad had transformed travel and economic life ("I've been workin' on the railroad"), and it was already part of American legend and song. It is well to note the government's role, which although of an enabling nature rather than a leading one, was critical to the success of railroading. There are those today who argue that government should do nothing in the economic sphere except get out of the way and out of the market place. This view isn't consistent with American history. Public policy and public works have always been involved in our economic success; before the railroads there were the canals and "turnpikes," and much later there were the interstate highways.

Nevertheless, the running as opposed to the enabling of the American railroad was pure private enterprise, and by the 1880's the evils of the same were apparent. Railroad monopolies by then had a stranglehold on entire towns and entire industries---agriculture being the most notable. These were the days of the "robber barons"---ruthless tycoons in the market place who summered in social climbing splendor in places like Newport.

The Sherman Anti-trust Act of 1890 was the first "counterpunch" by representative democracy to the excesses of these "barons." It isn't my purpose to record the full history here, but 1890 marks the beginning of a 90-year era of ever increasing government regulation of the railroad. By the time representative democracy got around to curtailing regulation in 1979, the government was practically running the railroads. As a consequence, the private passenger railroad was dead, rail freight had lost much of its market to trucking, the eastern railroads were bankrupt, and only half a dozen southern and western lines remained marginally profitable.

The historic paradigm is instructive. In response to the genuine abuses of some railroads, government intruded itself into the railroad industry in such a way that the industry was nearly killed before the excess of interference began to be remedied. Government thus went, as it tends to do, from excess to excess. The excess of non-interference (i.e. of not protecting American citizens from the abuses of railroads) lead to an excess of interference that nearly destroyed railroads.

Unfortunately, government seems to be an unguided missile that never stops until it "hits something." If asked to regulate an industry, it inevitably overregulates. That has been true of railroads, of oil, of housing, and many other industries. Once the government becomes involved in day-to-day operations (by far the most critical being pricing), the industry in question is on the road to catastrophe for itself and for the public interest. Sadly, it usually takes the catastrophe to bring about a countervailing trend.

Understanding how we get started on the road to these catastrophes is a key to preventing them. We need to understand that there is always a "good cause" at hand at the birthing of the process; and there is always a crowd of well intending people on hand to witness the birth.

An obscure example will suffice to further illustrate the paradigm. A few years ago a Marshfield man had a sick dog which in his own mind he destroyed compassionately with a bludgeon. Word got out, the Standish Humane Society got involved, and the man was brought to court charged with cruelty to an animal.

I forget the court's finding, but whatever it was it ought to have ended the matter. It didn't. Soon there appeared in the Legislature a bill regulating the destruction of sickly animals. It would have made criminal the destruction of an animal by a mere citizen, and it would have created a Board of Veterinaricide (or such silliness) with a staff and a budget and a self-perpetuating instinct---to regulate the future disposal of animals.

Happily this all transpired in late fall, the legislature prorogued for the year before acting on the bill, and our great grandchildren were spared the burden of a Board of Veterinaricide. But the paradigm holds. There is an abuse, there is an effort to correct the abuse that itself evolves into a bureaucratic abuse that in a few years' time dwarfs the original abuse. So it is that when we think about the abuses of government---the over-regulation, the cost, and the corruption---we should remember that none of these have come about through intent. All came about through somebody's genuine concern over some genuine abuse.

The paradigm holds and marches forward on issues great and small, bringing with it new threats to liberty and pocketbook alike. My generation, which listened to erudite tunes such as "Stoned Love," "Why Don't We Do It In The Road?" and "Hey There Little Red Riding Hood You're Everything A Big Bad Wolf Could Want," is being asked to regulate the filthy noise our adolescent offspring listen to. (We don't seem to appreciate that we gave these poor kids no mean task in surpassing us in being outrageous.)

Not only in rock and roll does the beat go on. The human condition, being normal, produces abuses, and the human spirit, being noble, seeks to correct those abuses. But when government gets involved, as it sometimes has to get involved, is when peril lies ahead. What is needed in such instances is a doctrine of minimalism. What, we should ask, is the minimal role that government needs to play in order to correct the abuse that has been identified?

Unfortunately, government and government bureaucracy never seem to understand the doctrine of minimalism, they only seem to understand the instinct of self-preservation. That is why our reformers---whether liberals wanting to regulate great industries like railroading, or conservatives wanting to regulate great liberties like listening to bad music---are such a permanent and pernicious threat to the public good.

Yard sale & flea market

Saturday, Sept. 28 is the date of the Cohasset Historical Society's fall yard sale and flea market. Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the location is the Society's headquarters, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street.

Dealer spaces are available for $10. Please call 383-0773 or 383-6930 for reservations.

The Society still is accepting contributions of good, useable second-hand items for this fall's sale. Included in the yard sale are such things as household goods, toys, sporting goods, books, clothing, picture frames and artworks, and collectables.

The Historical Society's flea markets and yard sales are one way in which the Society funds it community programs and its three historical museums. Plan to attend this fall's sale to find things not found elsewhere, and arrive early for the best selection.

Alzheimer's disease support

Dr. Kenneth Kosik, M.D. will be guest speaker for the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. Wednesday, September 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hersey House, 229 North Street, Hingham. Dr. Kosik's topic will be the medical and genetic aspects of Alzheimer's Disease.

Dr. Kosik is a member of the neurology faculty at Harvard Medical School and is a researcher on the biochemical basis of AD at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

An informal coffee hour will be held before the program. Anyone interested in learning more about Alzheimer's Disease is invited to attend.

Please call 749-5417 for more information about this and future meetings.

LWV fall brunch

Thursday, Sept. 26 at 9:15 a.m. the Cohasset League of Women Voters will hold their Fall Brunch at the Unitarian Parish House on Main Street.

Brunch will consist of mimosa, breakfast breads, fruit salad, baked ham, cheeses, coffee and tea. There is no charge for new members; the cost to former members is $4.

Since this is also the League's opening meeting for the year, the morning will commence with some local League information in addition to a session with Selectman Diane Sullivan.

If you would like to attend, please contact either of the following by Sept. 23: Mary Larson at 383-0775, or Ann Whiteley at 383-9310. Babysitting will be provided but an R.S.V.P. is requested.

NYC art trip

Come see Toulouse-Lautrec in New York. Travel with the South Shore Art Center to the Big Apple for one day Saturday, Nov. 16, or for two days, Dec. 7 and 8, and enjoy all the splendor of this city.

Both trips offer a unique opportunity to view the 300 works in the Toulouse-Lautrec exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art. The exhibit includes drawings, lithographs and paintings,many loaned by European collectors and previously not seen by the public. Reservations for either trip are to be made through Cerel's Travel in Natick, 653-2400.

The one-day trip via motor coach goes to New York explicitly to see this exhibit. The two-day trip offers in addition to the exhibit tickets to Neil Simon's play "Biloxi Blues" and time for shopping, browsing and enjoying the Christmas season on Fifth Avenue.

The tour will stay overnight at the Milford Plaza Hotel. Cost for the two-day trip is $169 per person double occupancy with adjustments available for single or triple occupancy; cost for the one-day trip is $49. Both prices include a donation to the South Shore Art Center.

Since the Toulouse-Lautrec exhibit is not a traveling exhibit, persons wishing to see it must travel to see it. Join the South Shore Art Center for this opportunity to view this unique exhibit of works by Toulouse-Lautrec.

Walking tour this Sunday

The Cohasset Historical Society's walking tour to historic Cohasset Harbor will be held this Sunday, Sept. 22.

Meeting at the Society's Maritime Museum on Elm Street, Cohasset Center, the tour will walk along Elm Street (once named "Ship Cove Lane") to the town's historical harbor. Time of the tour is 3 p.m.

Cohasset's Harbor was the center of a thriving shipbuilding and fishing industry from the town's earliest days until the last years of the 19th century. The peak years of mackerel fishing were the decades of the 1840s and 1850s when the town ranked among the four top Massachusetts ports in size of catch landed.

Though the big mackerel schooners are long gone from Cohasset's Harbor, old stone wharves of the fishing fleets remain, and old houses of the sea captains line the streets of the town. Records show that shipbuilding began at the harbor as early as 1700 and continued until the middle years of the 1800s.

The last fishing schooner built at a Cohasset yard was the "Henrietta Frances" in the 1870s, and the largest vessel constructed in Cohasset was the "Greenwich," a ship of nearly a thousand tons. Cohasset-owned fishing schooners voyaged to Canadian maritime waters each summer to seek out the plentiful stocks of mackerel, and for a time three-quarters of the town's population was engaged directly or indirectly with its fishing industry.

From the harbor's "Ship Cove" the walking tour will move to Government Island, site of the stone cutting and first assembly of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. Here, a small historical park commemorates the mid-19th century feat done by Cohasset men in the construction of one of the nation's most famous lighthouses. At the park the story of Minot's Light will be told.

Tour guide for the Historical Society's Harbor walk will be Charles Fink of the town's Harbor Committee, Noel Ripley of its Historical Commission and David Wadsworth, Society Curator. A small donation is asked, and a shuttle van will be available for those wishing to return quickly to Cohasset Center where light refreshments will be available.

Teen chorale

Margo Euler, director of the Kinderchor program at the South Shore Conservatory is announcing a new extension of the program for boys and girls in junior high.

"We have formed the TEEN CHORALE for Kinderchor graduates and friends who love to sing and want to become more skilled in how to read and perform all kinds of good music. We will be learning music in 3 and 4 parts and will give concerts around the South Shore. I plan to make it rewarding and fun," explains Mrs. Euler.

Margo Euler is a well known choral conductor. Her adult groups, the Broad Cove Chorale and the Unicorn Singers are familiar to South Shore audiences. Mrs. Euler has had extensive teaching experience with children and has conducted the Conservatory's Kinderchor for the past five years. They have given concerts all over the South Shore and also in Boston.

Teen Chorale will meet Tuesdays from 4:45 to 5:45 p.m. at the Conservatory, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham. Students may register at the school Monday thru Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 749-7565 for information.

Dance Party class

Mr. and Mrs. John Cornish Nott will again hold Dance Party Classes for nine weeks beginning Oct. 1.

The classes will be held at St. Stephen's Parish House and all sixth and seventh graders from Cohasset are welcome.

To register, please call the following class chairmen:

General Chairman, Mrs. Charles J. Pyle; Sixth Grade Boys, Mrs. John J. Suhrbier; Sixth Grade Girls, Mrs John R. Chase; Seventh Grade Boys, Mrs. Timothy A. Marsac; Seventh Grade Girls, Mrs. Michael A. Russell; Cohasset Derby Academy, Mrs. Zugmunt W. Pozatek.

For questions concerning the above please call Jan Pyle at 383-0005.

WEEKENDS ARE MADE FOR MISHAPS.

For reasons unknown to mere mortals, most minor illnesses and injuries requiring immediate medical attention strike on weekends, holidays and other singularly inconvenient times.

So you find yourself in the hospital emergency room waiting for someone to look after your sprained ankle, lacerated foot, burned hand, sore throat, fever, or other semi-serious condition.

No more.

Because now the HealthFirst Walk-in Medical Care Center in your community is open 7 days a week, from 8:00 a.m. until 10:00 p.m. (Weymouth facility 8:00 a.m. – 8:00 p.m.)

That includes weekends and holidays. Which is when most mishaps choose to occur.

So, the next time your weekend is punctuated with a minor disaster that can't wait until Monday office hours for attention, bring it to HealthFirst right away. Bring this ad with you and get $5.00 off your visit. Offer expires October 31, 1985.

And please. Don't call for an appointment.

We don't believe in them.

SENIOR CENTER UPDATE

The Cohasset Council on Aging voted unanimously on July 25 to proceed with the development of a Senior Center by accepting the Cohasset Community Center's offer of shared space at their North Main Street Facility. The Center will be a source of information on service, programs, activities and all issues pertinent to the senior population. A small front room at the Center will become the Senior Center office and activities will take place in the larger room across the hall on a shared-space basis. The Council on Aging will hire a Director who will, hopefully, be on board by early November and life and activities at the Senior Center will get underway soon after!

DONATIONS NEEDED

The Senior Center will be needing donations of furniture - a small desk, comfortable folding-size chairs, a small filing cabinet and a small bookcase. If you have any such items which you can part with, please call Karin Bartow at the Social Service League office 383-0771.

SENIOR ACTIVITIES

The Community Center is offering a new Gentle Exercise program this fall appropriate for seniors. Joanne Sheppard will conduct the class which is designed for those who haven't exercised in a long time, or never, and wish to get in shape. It will meet Monday, Wednesday and/or Friday from 10:15 to 11:15 a.m. beginning Sept. 16.

The Center also offers a very popular senior Bowling League which mets on Wednesday mornings.

Call the Community Center at 383-0088 for more details.

Watch local papers and the next "Vista" for details about "Men's Morning" which is being planned for Fridays at the Historical Society's Lothrop House and later, an indoor walking clinic.

WALKING CLINIC

The Town Recreation Department sponsors an ongoing walking program for participants at all levels. Lists of walker and the distances they walk are posted at the Library and Town Hall. Call Recreation Director Jack Worley for more information 383-6791.

SIXTY PLUS CLUB

The Cohasset Sixty Plus Club Board of Directors met Tuesday, Sept. 3 to make plans for the coming social calendar. The first luncheon will take place at noon Thursday, Sept. 19. An interesting program will take place at 1:30. Mrs. Edward Rowe Snow will give an informal program on the events in the life of her husband, the well known Mr. Edward Rowe Snow. His tales of famous Boston Harbor, his stay at Boston Bay, and is visits around the many, many lighthouses in New England will be featured. Pictures of these places and curios Mr. Snow collected over the years will be on display.

Thursday, Oct. 17, will be the Annual Fair. Be sure to mark your date book for that day.

Fifty members of the Club had a most enjoyable picnic a the Donovans' in August.

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club members are offered a three day "Green Mountain Get Away" Sept. 20-22 by R & B Tours. The trip will stop at Bromley Sun Lodge in Peru, Vermont.

A deluxe motor coach will afford travelers a view of the New England country side in early autumn along the Connecticut River Valley. The first stop will be Lebonon, New Hampshire for lunch at Lander's Restaurant. The next stop will be Plymouth, Vermont, Calvin Coolidge country.

Accomodations include two nights, two breakfasts and two dinners at the Sun Lodge in southern Vermont.

On the return trip a stop will be made at Green Mountain Getway at Allen Brothers Farm or the Red Barn Gift Shop in Bellows Falls.

Price for the double occupancy is $219, and single person $244.

Make reservations at once! Make checks payable to Sixty Plus Club and send them to Connie Silipo, 29 Wheeler Park, Scituate 02066.

LINE DANCING

Line dancing at the Community Center with Edna Sullivan will meet Mondays from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. begining October 7. Fun dancing without partners, begin with some warm-up exercises and do the Hully-Gully, or the Cab Driver, perhaps even some square dancing, just to mention a few. Call the Community Center to sign up, 383-0088.

Enrollment puts squeeze on VoTech space

By Judy Foley

Enrollment at the South Shore Regional VoTech High School is at an all-time high, Supt. Clifford Easton reported to the regional school committee last week, and may be nearing the maximum capacity for the Hanover campus. But plans for expanding the school have been put on hold until the school's financial situation improves.

Easton called 1985-86 "a banner year," with 550 students currently enrolled in vocational and technical training programs at Hanover and a satellite campus in Abington. Enrollment jumped by 40 students this year, he said, with 100 girls presently attending the school, 20 more than last year.

Easton acknowledged that the increase has caused "some pinching" for space at the Hanover campus, where all academic course are held. But with the addition of one extra teacher, and the use of alternative class space, school officials have been able to keep class size to below 30 in most areas, according to Guidance Counselor Leonard Cody.

"With the increase in ninth and tenth graders from Abington taking their academic classes here, we did have a problem when school opened," Cody said. "We had 38 in one class. But by rescheduling the classes and with the new teacher, things are much better."

The unexpected addition of one teacher came on the heels of the sudden resignation of math/social studies teacher John Lucich. In order to fill that gap, plus improve class sizes and provide better coverage in the cafeteria, Easton polled the committee to approve the hiring of two teachers to replace Lucich. The committee gave final approval last week to the appointments, hiring Russell DeCoste as a social studies/English teacher at $30,718, and Dr. Barbara Powers as a math/science teacher at $27,071.

The addition of mini-courses in English and social studies this year has put another strain on the already-tight space in Hanover, Easton added. "The new mini-courses, which are offered once each trimester, have proved to be very popular," he said. "But they are difficult to schedule and we did run into a problem with space."

Cody explained that some classes are now being held in the library, a resource room and a trailer stationed at the school. "It's not the ideal teaching place," he said, "but we have no academic classes with over 30 students now."

Cody said the ideal solution would be more classroom space. "If I had three more classrooms, there would be no problem."

The school committee has been looking into the possibility of expanding the Hanover campus, but committee chairman Robert Molla of Norwell last week said those plans have been shelved for now.

"There is no money even for the engineering plans we would need before we even get off the ground," Molla said. He suggested the plans be placed "on the back burner" until the financial picture improves.

Cohasset committee member David Chittim asked if the committee could take up the issue again next spring. "The problem is there. We shouldn't put it off too far in the future."

Molla agreed. "We should put it to rest, but not to die."

In the meantime, Easton acknowledged that enrollment should be capped for the present. "I think we'll have to hold enrollment to 550 until we can expand," he told the committee.

VoTech scores high

The South Shore VoTech High School received high marks for its placement record last year. Supt. Clifford Easton reported statistics for 1984 graduates were well above state averages.

For those students employed in their chosen field, the state average from technical schools was 61 percent in 1984, while South Shore's average was 74 percent; the state average for students entering the military was five percent, while nine percent of 1984 VoTech graduates entered the military. In other comparisons, 12 percent of students state-wide found jobs in non-related fields, compared to two percent from VoTech; 12 percent across the state went on to higher education, while 14 percent from South Shore continued their education; state-wide, five percent were unemployed, while none from VoTech were reported out of work; one percent from across the state was not in the labor force, and the same figure held true for South Shore students. Of the 1984 graduates, the current status of four percent of the state-wide population was unknown; all students from South Shore were accounted for.

Newcomers Club greeting

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club and Mary Moberg wish to welcome the present membership and any new residents of Scituate and Cohasset to once again enjoy the rewards of meeting old and new friends who all have the common bond of relocation.

Join the club in choosing and setting up varied social and informative activities. To be continued, the Gourmet Club, the Bridge Club - Beginner and Advanced, Stitch and Chat, Tennis, Golf, Luncheon Adventure, and Explorers Club (a visit to the wonderful sites in the New England area). Back by popular demand is the Baby Sitting Co-op. Join us and give us some of your ideas.

For further information on the club, in Cohasset call Linda at 383-6849, and in Scituate, Jean at 545-6654.

Monday, Sept. 23, there will be an informal coffee get-together for new residents of Scituate and Cohasset. Please plan on joining us, call for time and place. A very warm welcome to you and your families.

Substitute pay raise

The school committee voted Monday night to increase the pay scale for substitute teachers.

Last year, the daily salary of a substitute teacher was $33. That has been raised to $40 per day for the first ten days of instruction within the system (not necessarily consecutive), and $45 per day after the tenth day.

The committee, in an effort to make the substitute salary competitive with neighboring communities, decided the increase was warranted. The focus, according to Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart, is to compensate a teacher for continual service within the system, and to attract substitutes who will actually teach in the classroom.

If a substitute teacher remains in the system longer than 20 days, that instructor will receive per diem compensation equal to the first step of a bachelor's degree salary, or $82.51 per day. That figure will probably change once the teachers' union contract is finalized.

Memories of Paragon Park

well, except for the fun-loving Lamarrs and Sol Solomon.

Solly used to climb to a platform some 30 or 50 feet in the air and dive into a tub of water. At least once during his annual visit, we park help were required to appear at the Chateau to watch home movies of Solly diving into tanks all over the country. I could never figure out what impelled an otherwise normal guy like Solly to dive 50 feet into a tubful of water.

We played hard in those days. And we worked hard, too, 12 hours a day, six or seven days a week, for, like today, money to go to college was hard to come by.

Now Paragon Park and the Palm Garden Grill, the Chateau, Cohen's Diner, the greyhounds, and Solly Solomon are only memories. And in a while the memories will fade.

That's a shame.

Capital improvement plans stalled

Plans for $70,000 worth of improvements at the South Shore VoTech School in Hanover have been stalled by the state Department of Education, Supt. Clifford Easton reported last week.

The school hoped to complete improvements to the roof and septic system, replace an oil burner, and expand the parking space under plans that would provide a 65 percent reimbursement from the state for emergency work. But the Department of Education has ruled that the parking lot expansion is not an emergency, Easton said. The snag could mean that the region could lose about $100,000 in savings, plus interest, which would have to be assessed to member towns. The region serves Hanover, Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset, Rockland, Abington, Hanson and Whitman.

Easton said the decision is a "significant problem" in the entire project, but added that the school plans to appeal the decision at a hearing Sept. 24.

The parking project is estimated to cost $140,000, according to Secretary-Treasurer Robert Kelley.

"I think we have a 50/50 chance to turn (the decision) around," Easton said. "This is the first time we have had to limit parking permits at the school. We could put cars in the back, but it's not safe there." The plans call for 200 additional spaces.

Hanover committee member Dennis Blackwell asked about alternative, less expensive measures, such as adding a gravel area for parking.

"I don't think the state realizes the emergency nature of the situation," Easton said. "It's also a safety problem. There are no sidewalks or handicapped entrances, except for the front entrance." Easton said the entire package has been approved by the state Emergency Finance Board, and the Department of Education has approved everything except the parking lot.

VoTech Nets $116,000

The South Shore VoTech High School has netted over $116,000 in technical grants, plus donations and in-kind contributions through its Technical Institute Program, according to director Paul Babcock.

The school has been granted $116,377 in grants for its auto body repair, heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC), and graphic arts programs. Babcock said the school's auto body repair grant proposal, which earned the school one grant last year, has become a model for all state projects. South Shore VoTech won three grants under the proposal this year.

In all, grants have risen about $15,000 over last year, he said. The school received about $101,000 in 1984/85.

The regional school district received $22,295 for psychological services and assistance, and has received approval on $72,705 for a resource room aide, handicapped guidance, shop and related aides, a community awareness specialist, and equipment leases and purchases for the schools CAD/CAM programs.

Babcock added that the Technical Institute has netted $24,000 in training programs for 12 students in graphic arts, and placed 17 students under a Bay State Skill Corp. program.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

September is the season of plenty. On town greens and along our roadsides, vegetable stands are laden with red cabbages, green peppers, squash of various shapes and sizes.

Temperatures stimulate and hone our appetites for such seasonal bounty as peaches to preserve in brandy for the cold nights ahead. Any day now, the butternut squash will be ready for storing and enjoyment come some wintry day.

Though it does seem that summer has come to a crashing halt with all the northeast winds and rain, there are surely a few hot, sunny days ahead and time yet for September brunch outdoors with a feast of red flannel hash, hot, freshly baked corn muffins and "love apples." We know them as tomatoes, but when Spanish explorers discovered them in South America, the seeds they took home with them were grown merely for ornamental purposes and thought to be poisonous.

"Love apples" were not introduced in this country until the 1800's and now our tomatoes are prepared in countless ways. Yankees, especially, are partial to them when served as a breakfast dish called . . .

FRIED GREEN TOMATOES

Slice tomatoes, dip them in flour seasoned with salt and pepper, coating on both sides. Saute in butter, or in the fat in which you have cooked bacon or sausage. When brown on one side, turn and brown the other. Make a gravy in the pan by adding milk or cream.

Perhaps by now we've all had our fill of potato salad, devilled eggs and hamburgs and franks grilled over the open fire. Moving along with the seasons, our eating habits change as well and now, of course, this is orchard time. We can consider ourselves lucky to have one of the last apple orchards in Marshfield, and where you can go and pick drops to make applesauce, pies and even eat, if you cut out the bruises.

Mounce's farm is a lovely place to be — Off Union St. in North Marshfield; just driving down the long lane leading to the farmhouse, shed and fields that border the North River seem to take you into another world.

Their MacIntosh apples are also sold already picked and are from a strain developed by an uncle about 75 years ago.

Bessie and Hedley Mounce built the farm in 1890 when their 115 acres composed a complete working farm with vegetables taken into Boston by wagon for sale in city markets.

Today's owner, Dick Mounce, believes his orchard to be the only one where apples may be gathered by customers unless you drive to Bridgewater, Concord or the western part of the state. So, some sunny day, pick some apples for a desert such as this . . .

SUGAR-CRUSTED BAKED APPLES

6 large baking apples, peeled, cored
1/3 C. flour
2/3 C. sugar
1/4 tsp. cinnamon
1/3 C. margarine or butter
1/2 C. orange juice
4 T. water

Butter 8x8" baking pan. Arrange apples in pan. Blend with fork the flour, sugar and cinnamon. Work margarine into flour mixture with fingers until blended. Fill apple cavities with mixture, pat the rest over top of apples. Combine juice and water; pour into bottom of pan. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees until apples are tender (approx. one hour), spooning sauce from bottom of pan over apples at least four times. Serve warm with pan sauce and light cream, whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

The gates are locked at the Marshfield Fair grounds for another year and no one gives a second glance at the desolate scene where for ten brief, fleeting days eager crowds jostled to enter one of the few remaining country fairs in the state.

Bringing home a blue ribbon is nothing new for Karen Biagini who gives cooking courses at the Marshfield YWCA. This award-winning cake is a variation on a recipe she saw in Yankee Magazine and is called . .

YANKEE FUDGE CAKE

1 stick butter
1 lb. brown sugar
2 eggs
3 sqs. melted bitter chocolate
1 tsp. baking soda
1 1/2 C. milk
2 C. cake flour, or 1 3/4 C. all purpose
1 tsp. vanilla

Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs and beat well. Stir in melted chocolate. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Pour batter into two greased and floured 9" pans. Bake at 350 for 40 min. Frost with . . .

CABIN CHOCOLATE FROSTING

3 oz. bitter chocolate
3 T. butter
3 C. sifted confectioners sugar
1/8 tsp. salt
7 T. rich milk or cream
1 tsp. vanilla

Melt chocolate and butter over low heat. In large bowl measure 3 C. sugar, salt, milk and vanilla, blend and add chocolate mixture, beating well. Let stand, stirring carefully until of proper consistency to spread. For a little "pizzazz," Karen decorates her cake with almonds dipped in melted chocolate chips.

If you have a recipe you would like to share, send it to Joan Pinkham, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050.

VoTech committee keeps lid on spending

Members of the South Shore VoTech Regional School Committee have made it clear to school administrators that they intend to keep the lid on spending next year.

The committee held a preliminary discussion on the upcoming budget process last week, and the key word was frugality.

"We've made a pledge to lower the budget," Cohasset committee representative David Chittim said. "Growth should be zero for 1987."

But Chittim also warned school officials not to unduly trim the next year's budget request, and then later make adjustments when increased costs are discovered. "Let's not take the most optimistic view, and then have to go back for more."

Whitman committee member Lloyd Patriquin suggested looking at possible program cuts. "I hope the administration will look at our course offerings; if some aren't needed, perhaps we can eliminate or replace them."

Chittim agreed. "There are sometimes hard choices to make between quality and dollars."

Hanover representative Dennis Blackwell questioned if the school was able to keep up with rapid changes in some of the programs, such as electronics. "I think we should take a hard look at this, and realistically decide if we can't increase as rapidly or keep up with the fields."

Blackwell said there was also concern in Hanover that the school's recent expansion into new programs has taken away from the original vocational and technical programs. "We addressed this somewhat last year, but a lot of people don't want to see our original programs suffering."

School Supt. Clifford Eastón agreed that progams should be studied carefully, but he also defended current programs. Guidance counselor Leonard Cody added, "It takes time to build up progams. You can't fill a new program with 20 kids in one year; it has to build up through the years."

The committee also asked the administration to keep an eye on priorities, such as textbooks and equipment maintenance.

Adult Ed Programs at VoTech

Registration for Adult Education and Community Courses at the South Shore VoTech High School in Hanover will be held Wednesday, Sept. 18, and Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 25-26, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Webster Street campus in Hanover.

Classes begin Monday, Sept. 30.

Afternoon classes are scheduled in SAT preparation and introduction to computers and BASIC programming. Evening courses to be offered include auto body repair, chair caning and fibre rushing, emergency auto repair, word processing, welding, flower arrangements, lampshades, drafting and blueprint reading, heating/ventilation/air conditioning, machine shop, basic precision sheet metal, continuing education for hairdressers, and graphic arts (offset printing).

For more information, contact the South Shore VoTech High School at 878-0424.

Budget concerns aired during Studds open meeting

Topics of local interest were nudged aside Sunday in favor of national concerns as Congressman Gerry Studds met with his hometown constituents. Residents here favored discussions of defense spending and budget deficits, listening attentively to the Democrat's familiar and frequent barbs aimed at the Republican administration.

Within the cramped room of Cohasset's Bates Building, Studds proudly announced he is approaching the 800th open 'town meeting' with his constituents. Although Sunday's afternoon session was sparsely attended, the Congressman acknowledged that most people are unwilling to spare such exquisite weather to sit and listen to a politician.

"I'm astonished that anyone is here," he said to the 20 residents who attended the meeting. "This has been one of those quintessential New England weekends."

He noted that this is the 20th round of his open town meetings, a schedule that is hectic, he admits, "but it is also the best part of my job."

Quickly the conversation turned to matters of national importance, as David Chittim of Linden Drive expressed his concern about the future of the economy.

The Massachusetts Democrat concurred, saying it is a "universal grief of extreme seriousness. Something had better be done."

Studds explained that the national budget deficit is so large, "it is of a magnitude far greater than ever before. It reached $1 trillion in 1980 and will double every five years." He compared that astronomical figure to the previous deficit of $66 billion recorded in the 1970's. 'We have no experience with a deficit of this magnitude," he added.

The Congressman attributed the deficit to two parallel factors - the President's campaign promises to cut taxes, and to increase military spending while cutting back on non military budgets.

"I think even an elementary grade student could figure this out. If you decrease your revenues and increase your expenditures, you're not going to have a balanced budget," he quipped.

Studds, who voted against the popular federal tax cut proposal, says it is unfair and unworkable. According to estimates, about $120 billion has been lost in federal revenue from the recently-imposed tax cut. And most people, he noted, especially those under the $100,000 annual income level, never see an appreciable amount of that cut. Whatever is reduced from their taxes is offset by an increase they now pay for Social Security.

"We have got to do something about defense spending in this country. There is no alternative but to increase taxes and decrease defense spending," he added. "The only substantial area that has not been cut is the military."

He explained that, particularly in an election year, Congress is unlikely to propose or support legislation to increase taxes.

As Chittim noted, it would be a courageous act of any politician to favor an increase, but would be more prudent to favor the decrease in military defense spending.

Congressman Studds explained a "battle royale" is exploding now between Congress and the President on that matter. The administration has proposed a 8.9 percent increase in the military budget, the Senate granted it, and the House level-funded the account.

A Conference Report on the matter settled the budget at a figure even greater than the President originally requested. Currently, the defense budget is once again stalled at $292 million, according to Studds.

"It appears we will have a freeze and there will be no cuts. No one is debating a reduction unless we take on a major arms reduction," a proposition, he added, that is highly unlikely during the Republican administration.

The latest estimates for the 'Star Wars' nuclear weapons detection system, is set at about $1 trillion, a price that Studds claims "is madness, in my judgement." He named a few defense programs in the past that the American taxpayers have paid billions of dollars to research, only to have them abolished after they fail to meet operational standards.

"Regarding our national security, our resources are not unlimited and we have to decide what we can do without," he noted. "We have robbed our routine accounts such as maintenance in favor of research and development. We found this out in Iran when a few of our helicoptors wouldn't work."

When the Congressman asked who would be in favor of a tax increase, a majority of the audience, including several senior citizens, indicated their approval.

Chester Smith of Cedar Street, a retired economist, said he supports the increase proposal. "Even though I am on retirement income, I believe a mounting deficit is a greater danger to the welfare of this country than the scare tactics of the Russians," he told the Congressman. "I welcome a tax increase."

Donna Magee of Beechwood Street asked Congressman Studds if the administration is now willing to halt the study of acid rain effects and work toward a solution. Studds answered that according to budget figures, a substantial amount will not be spent during this administration to solve the problem which is known to significantly affect the northeast

THEATRE REVIEW

Chemistry works in 'Private Lives'

By Judith Montminy

The Nickerson Theatre's second season has opened with a credible production of Noel Coward's comedy on matrimony, "Private Lives."

The play was originally written to provide roles for Coward and his long-standing friend, Gertrude Lawrence. Without a special chemistry between the lead characters, Amanda Prynne and Elyot Chase, the play can be reduced to a series of posturings and one-liners about marriage, women and society. The Nickerson's lead actors, Linda Cameron and Bob Riley, interact with appropriate sparks and familiarity.

Most important, their professed attraction to each other is substantiated. The chemistry works.

Amanda and Elyot have been divorced for five years after a stormy and passionate marriage. Coincidence has them honeymooning in the south of France with their respective new spouses in rooms with adjacent terraces. When they discover one another, the sparks begin to fly again and Amanda and Elyot leave their new spouses, Victor Prynne (John Adair) and Sibyl Chase (Paris Klopp.)

With touches of Elizabeth Ashley's style, Cameron accurately captures Amanda's impulsive nature. She clearly dominates the stage and lends an energy to the production that keeps it from becoming a drawing room comedy of manners and posturings. Riley is correctly cool and haughty as Elyot.

Determined not to let their tempers spoil their new relationship, Amanda and Elyot develop a code word to be used whenever one of them thinks they are getting off the track. "Solomon Isaacs" is quickly shortened to "Solacs." Whenever it is spoken, the two have promised to stop their bickering and remain silent for two minutes. The technique seems to work, for a while.

Soon the passion and hot-headedness that has led Amanda and Elyot to run away with each other takes over and they find themselves in the middle of a knock down, dragged out fight. At the Nickerson, though, there is a bit too much knocking down and dragging out. Director David MacKaye could have used a lighter touch, especially since his actors are capable of subtleties.

Linda Cameron (Amanda) and Bob Riley (Elyot) engaged in a clinch in the comedy "Private Lives" now playing at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell through Oct. 12.

The biggest laugh of the evening came when Elyot and Amanda were dining in her Paris flat. "Do you realize we are living in sin?" she asks. "Not according to the Catholics," he retorts. "Yes, but dear, we are not Catholic." His response: "But it's awfully good to know they will back us up." Clearly, the South Shore audience was tickled by the interchange.

Inevitably, the two jilted spouses arrive at the Paris flat. John Adair is suitably stuffy and somewhat naive as dull Victor. Unfortunately, Paris Klopp plays Sybil as a shrill, petulant over-age ingenue. The contrast between her Sybil and Cameron's Amanda is greater than Coward intended.

Natalie Brown as the French maid Louise lends an additional comic touch to the play through her exasperation with the eccentric British couples.

James Hoff's set carries through a floral motif but needs more anchoring and substance so that flats do not shake when doors are slammed shut. Craig Sonnenberg's costumes are attractive and especially flattering for Cameron.

When one considers the dearth of plays available in Boston and the lack of variety of films shown on the South Shore, "Private Lives" is a reasonable choice for an outing.

The performance schedule is Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m., Friday at 8:30 p.m., Saturday at 4 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., and Sunday at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. "Private Lives" plays thorugh October 12. Although over 12,000 subscriptions have been sold, the Nickerson Theatre still has tickets available for individual performances.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

The Midwest isn't for everybody

By Darrell Berger

While my wife was in Nicaragua, I made my annual summer pilgrimmage to Ohio, place of my birth and first eighteen years. That I am a transplanted Midwesterner and grow much better in these parts is the reason this column is named as it is.

My parents live in Walbridge, a small town outside of Toledo whose only industry is the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad. It calls itself "the town on the right side of the tracks."

I recently discovered from the official cookbook of the Walbridge Chamber of Commerce that until about eighty years ago the place was called Owl's Nest. Then it took the name of its most prosperous farmer.

Since there are currently more owls there than Walbridges, I suggested to my father that he begin a campaign to restore the original name, but the cause seemed not to inspire him.

My time there is like a retreat in many ways. I escape from all phone calls seeking a minister or writer. I receive no bills or deadlines. My mother relieves me of all household tasks except those for which I volunteer. I shoot baskets, read the Detroit Free Press and Toledo Blade, wander around the neighborhood and reaquaint myself with that portion of my gene pool which is reproducing itself over several square miles of farmland and post-industrial ruin.

I also retreat to the days of my youth. I see the two or three friends from high school still in the area. They are fine and I'm always glad to be with them and rejoice in their families and share in their tribulations. They remind me that, if I were still living there, I wouldn't be fine at all.

Recently, while washing dishes I happened to look out my parents' kitchen window, staring blankly into middle distance. I didn't focus on the tidy church at the end of the block, nor the bent basketball rims of the school across the field. Instead, I saw a vision of the alternative universe of what my life might be like if I had stayed.

I was a high school teacher, of English or social studies. I was single and living with my parents. I was fifty pounds overweight and my yearnings had become inchoate beyond hope of fulfillment.

The moment passed. I felt like Scrooge after the ghost of Christmas Future. I made a mental note to thank my father again for granting me the opportunity to go away to college.

I don't have anything against the Midwest, but it's not for everybody. I knew it wasn't for me from a very early age. I'm sure part of it was due to my parents' high aspirations for me, and their feelings that I might have to go away to fulfill them.

But a lot has to do with who I happen to be. Maybe I was Emerson's neighbor in Concord in a previous life, or an Indian splashing among the salt marshes.

Even without metaphysical speculation, I know I have always been drawn here. I love the leaves in autumn, Fenway Park, Harvard Square, button down collars, the rock-bound coast and crusty Yankees who try to be cool and unfriendly and fail.

Most of all I like a tradition built on freedom and dissent.

The majority of folks living anywhere are there primarily by circumstance and inertia. Therefore I'm always a bit amused at those who take pride in being a "native" of anywhere.

I believe that those who choose to live in a certain area are the true vehicles of culture. Somehow, through my initiative I have earned the privilege of living in New England, having overcome the accident of birth, while natives often fail to appreciate what they have, or lack the experience to compare.

Remember George Apley in Marquard's novel. Aristocratic and rich, his life was still limited to Beacon Hill, with only occasional ventures to the decaying civilizations of Europe and Manhattan. Ohio was as foreign to him as Latvia.

Now, many South Shore residents barely know the streets of Boston, let alone its heritage and culture.

I'll probably never lose the midwestern flatness of my spoken vowels, not do I wish to lose the connection with my roots. But my branches flourish here like they never could in Owl's Nest. New England continues to receive immigrants in search of freedom and opportunity, from west of Dedham as well as east of Provincetown.

Correction

The group mentioned in my last column should have been called "Witness for Peace."

South Shore Art Center news . . .

Childrens courses

Opportunities for young artists to explore their artistic skills are multifold at the South Shore Art Center. The courses offered on the fall schedule open up many opportunities for students to develop their talents.

Registrations are now being taken for the fall semester which begins Sept. 30 at the Center, 103 Ripley Road. For high school students there are courses both in the young artists department and in the adult division.

Certain adult courses — composition through collage, anatomy, beginning photo, portrait painting, caligraphy, watercolor, introductory painting and drawing and photo darkroom — may be taken by high school students. Except for composition through collage which meets Monday afternoon, all the other classes meet on various evenings.

Instructor Serena Brundige will teach four courses in the young artists department. On Friday afternoons beginning Oct. 16, she will teach a junior high workshop for ages 12-14. This class will explore various techniques three-dimensionally using clay as well as offer students a chance to work in acrylics on canvas.

Her other courses include Painting and Drawing which will meet Thursday beginning Oct. 3 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Mixed Media and Clay for ages six to eight on Tuesdays beginning November 12 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and Moms and Tots on Mondays beginning Oct. 14 from 10 to 11 a.m. The Moms and Tots course is for mothers and their three and four year-olds to explore creative projects which can be duplicated at home. These will include batik dip design, magic color circles and plasatacene.

Another instructor familiar to the children, Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, will teach Painting and Drawing I, for ages six to eight, on Tuesdays, beginning Oct. 1 from 4 to 5:30 p.m., and Experimental Workshop for ages nine to 12, Thursdays, beginning Nov. 14 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. The Experimental Workshop explores a variety of art forms including mixed media, 3-D and collage and offers an opportunity to learn about color, design and structure.

Instructor Gil Coyle will teach "How to Create," a workshop that begins with two short art-films designed to stimulate children for the art activity that follows - clay, collage, monoprint, magic making, or box construction. Designed for ages seven to 11, this course meets Wednesday, beginning Oct. 16 from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Advanced registration is required for all the courses in the adult division and the young artist department. For further information call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Collage demonstration

Using her talents, Szerejko will demonstrate the process of collage beginning 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 22 at the Center, 103 Ripley Road. Following her demonstration, visitors will have a chance to learn of classes on the fall schedule, meet the instructors and enroll in courses. The fall semester begins Sept. 30 and advanced registration is required for all courses.

Szerejko will teach a course, Composition through Collage, on Mondays beginning Sept. 30 from 3:30 to 6 p.m. The aim of the course is to acquaint the non painter with the elements of composition in a manner that is not threatening and to aid the painter in refining the compositional skills. She will use a totally non-objective approach so the power of the compositional elements may be grasped with maximum clarity.

She is also teaching a creative anatomy course designed for the student who wants a better understanding of the human form. The outline of the course begins with the studies of the skeletal system and progresses to the form and function of the muscles and their interdependence. This course meets Mondays, beginning Sept. 30 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Immediately following the fall open house is a formal reception for the opening of the Judith Rossman-Appel two person exhibit in the Invitational Gallery. For additional information on- classes, enrollment or exhibits call the Center at 383-9548.

Photography course

Photography - your own personal history and a record of the past. Taking good pictures is often hit or miss but some of the frustration may be eliminated by enrolling in a photography course.

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, offers its fall schedule photography courses designed for all levels of ability. Advanced registration is required for all levels.

Paul Fortin's Photography for Beginners is a lecture course that covers all the basics including F stops, shutter stops, films, filters, composition, lighting and subjects. Emphasis is on recognizing the elements of good photography and incorporating these elements into the students own work. This course meets Mondays beginning Sept. 30 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

For the intermediate and advacnced student, Fortin teaches Improve Your Photographs on Wednesdays beginning October 2 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Students will explore various subjects including portrait, people and landscape. Emphasis is on how to train the student's eye to learn to evaluate the work.

Instructor Jogn Droege will teach Beginning Darkroom on Thursdays beginning October 3 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. This course offers a step-by-step instruction in basic darkroom skills beginning with how the camera works. Working with black and white film, students will learn developing, enlarging, printing, burning, and mounting techniques.

For two Saturdays, John Goldie will lead a photo field trip and critique workshop. On October 19, students will meet with Goldie for a one-day trip for shooting pictures and return October 26 for a critique session.

The Center's darkroom is also available for individual two-hour sessions for processing black and white film. For further information, call the Center at 383-9548.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

Constituents discuss national matters with Studds

region of the country.

In answer to her question regarding President Ronald Reagan's recent decision to back off from his support of the South African administration, Studds noted how unremarkable an action that had been.

"Here is probably the only clear cut, simple issue in politics today, morally and politically speaking, and the President just now decides (to cut off his support of the South African administration). This is clearly the most inherently abhorrent society since Hitler and it deserves our denouniciation," he stated. "And quite clearly the President was backed into this position by a substantial override of his sanctions bill. Rather than be humiliated by both the Senate and the House, he backed into this position."

Regarding the possible slowdown or shutoff of Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) superfund monies, Studds said that is an issue to be watched during the next three weeks. Currently the superfund budget, used to eliminate the nation's most crucial pollution problems, is the center of battle between the President, the Senate and the House. The current legislative proposal is so watered down, according to Studds, the original proponent can not support it. He promised a colorful battle on the issue.

Gun control and the lack of a national policy, was another topic of discussion Sunday afternoon.- Studds, who would favor gun control legislation similar to that enacted in Massachusetts, admits it would be a difficult issue to propose for the entire nation. "No legislation would be proposed to deprive you of your right to own a weapon," he claimed. "Our proposals would be to strengthen the laws, as has been done in Massachusetts. Uniformity of the system makes sense. But there is great difficulty in uniformity because of the diversity of this country," he added.

Speaking briefly about Cohasset's particular battle with the federal administration, the Congressman noted his South Shore office is working with the local officials on that issue. The town of Cohasset is currently appealing to the federal level, the regional EPA's decision to deny funding for most of the town's proposed sewer project.

Maureen Guarde, manager of the South Shore office, said she is continuing to work with the local officials in that appeal process. She said there may be more definitive word of the appeal during the week.

Town claims not responsible for Glades problem

On the one side, there is a man from Scituate claiming that rampant pollution in his neighborhood is caused by various sources within Cohasset.

And on the other side, Cohasset officials remain unconvinced by his arguments. As Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis said this week, "you could take our sewage to the moon and you'd still have pollution there (in the Glades area of Scituate)."

Robert Thorndike, a lifelong resident of the Scituate Glades, has become a one-man army against the infiltration of pollution along the Scituate coast. And he has repeatedly stated the cause of his distress is the waters of Cohasset and its various points of contamination.

This week, Thorndike took his case to the Cohasset Sewer Commission. The Scituate resident claimed the Cohasset Board of Health has refused to hear his arguments, and has repeatedly rescheduled his meetings. "This isn't a sewer issue, it's a board of health issue. But I'm honored to be able to at last speak to a board in Cohasset," he said to the commissioners Tuesday night.

But his presentation to the board was not without incident as commission members and the Cohasset sewer plant operator refuted his testimony.

Thorndike claimed that the polluted water, caused from unacceptably high fecal coloform counts at various points throughout Cohasset, are being swept in a foam onto the Glades shores of Scituate. As a result, the clambeds in that area have been closed by the state for about a year.

The commissioners disagreed that the foam is polluted, noting the foam is caused from the Mill River. It is not contamination from the sewer plant outfall that causes the foam, they said.

Thorndike refuted that argument, saying the foam is swept northwest across the clambeds. Samplesofthefoamhe had tested by Central Engineering and Testing Co. resulted in an extremely high fecal coloform count, high above the state standard for shellfishing or bathing.

The commissioners remained unconvinced, however, and said the pollution could be caused by untreated sewerage from Nut or Deer Island in Boston Harbor. At least twice in the past several months, millions of gallons of raw sewage were flushed from those treatment facilities, resulting in the shutdown of bathing beaches from Quincy to Hull, Cohasset and Scituate.

Cohasset Sewer Treatment Plant Operator Manuel Salvador agreed there are various points of water pollution throughout the town, but rejected any contention that the treatment plant is one source. Fecal coloform counts there are within state standards, he insisted, and untreated sewerage is

Chemically Free

Drug seminars offered by League

Our kids don't have a bigger problem than most other kids. There aren't more kids from Cohasset into drugs and alcohol than any other suburban community.

But, like every other town throughout the country, we're making the effort to keep our kids "Chemically Free."

That's the reason the Cohasset Social Service League decided to get involved. As Family Services Chairman Helen Hooper explained, "I thought we do so much for the elderly, it was time we do more for the kids."

With the help of a Quincy man who spoke at a Social Service League program last year, the organization began last spring to develop a three-part program called "Chemically Free." It will be presented on three consecutive Wednesday evenings, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the high school beginning Oct. 2.

The first session, according to Hooper, will be strictly for students in grades seven through 12. No parents will attend this session and in an effort to keep all discussions confidential, the sessions are not open to the public or the press.

The second session the following week will be for parents only. Hooper emphasized that the program is open to all parents of school-aged children. The next program will be a combined discussion between parents, their children, and members of the panel who were present for the previous two meetings.

Those panel members will include William Spinks, director of the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, Gregory Gargan, director of Prevention Resources at the Center for Health and Substance, and Michael Gill, coordinator for health education in the Cohasset school system.

"You know," Hooper said this week, "there have been articles in the newspaper lately about the association of professional athletics and the use of drugs and alcohol. We wanted to do something for the kids of Cohasset, and we felt this was the topic we needed to discuss. It is a major problem everywhere, even in the elementary grades."

Hooper emphasized that all parents are welcome to attend the second and third meetings. Students from all communities are invited to participate in the first and third sessions.

Board expects comments on store

The planning board will accept written comments on the latest changes presented last week for the proposed Stop and Shop store on Route 3A.

After a public hearing held three weeks ago, engineers representing developer Donald Staszko made alterations to the plan which are designed to reduce traffic problems in front of the store, and provide more landscaping around the building. The changes were made to alleviate concerns raised during the first hearing, according to Planning Board Chairman Christine Bassett.

The board held a second hearing on the plans last Wednesday night. More than thirty residents, including many members of the Fair Oaks Homeowners Association, packed the small hearing room at the Bates Building.

Traffic engineer Bruce Waite detailed the most recent changes made to te proposal, including moving the main entrance north on Route 3A opposite the entrance to King Street; eliminating parking spaces in favor of more landscaping on the Route 3A side of the building; landscaping the truck exit behind the building and screening the loading dock along Route 3A. The entrance, Waite explained, will include stacking lanes into the parking lot, "with a median strip allowing free flow access into the parking area."

Attorney Charles Humphreys also noted that the developer will have curb cuts made on Route 3A into the parking lot entrance and the highway widened there to accommodate the stacking lanes, if that is agreeable with the state Department of Public Works. Thus far, he noted, the state has looked on the traffic plans "very favorably."

Attorney Michael Puzo, representing abuttor Jane Cook of Sohier Street, objected to the latest revisions to the plan, saying he had no time to review the plan before the hearing. The same objection was voiced by Cook's traffic engineer, Richard Cook, who commented at length on the latest traffic study submitted by the developer's engineers.

Explaining that the board has only until October 22 to rule on this proposal, Planning Board Chairman Bassett said they will accept written comments on the latest changes presented last week.

During a four-hour hearing last week, several residents voiced concern with the possible future development of the adjacent Rosano property, saying that land could be developed later with an access road constructed onto Sohier Street. Atty. Humphreys explained that developer Staszko does not own that land, and objected to discussions regarding "the possibility" of future plans not presented for the board's review.

In response to a lengthy letter written by the Fair Oaks Homeowners Association, and their continued objections to the proposal, Atty. Humphreys noted, "the only abuttors to this plan are Mrs. Cook and the Town of Cohasset." He explained that there are enough parking spaces provided to satisfy the town's requirement and the proposed store's tenant.

Any drainage concerns, he said, will be scrutinized by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), including requirements for retention areas, catch basins, inlets and outlets, and a no-salt provision.

Cohasset's week . . .

Trash haulers fee increase

The Board of Health voted Monday to increase the fee for trash haulers at the Cedar Street Landfill. No one attended the public hearing Monday night when the board voted unanimously to initiate the first fee increase in three years. The hike will take effect the beginning of next month.

The fee will be $5 per cubic yard for compacted trash and $2 per cubic yard of loose trash.

Correction

We made a mistake last week. Through an error too complicated to discuss here, we misspelled South Shore Striders racer Ellen Marlette's name.

We wanted to be sure to correct this error, since it was the first time Ellen ever saw her name associated with the story on road racing. Sorry, Ellen. When you run the Bonnie Bell, we'll make sure it's correct the first time.

Home for retarded

The State Department of Mental Health is continuing it's search for a home in Cohasset for eight retarded adults. Last year, the town was receptive to a proposal to locate a home for eight retarded residents on Crocker Lane off Route 3A.

Hearings were held on the proposal, and residents favored the project. But according to Maria Plante, the town's liason with the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, parents of the perspective residents did not approve of the location. According to Plante, they did not like the traffic hazard along Route 3A or the proximity to the Cohasset Heights landfill.

Plante is continuing the search for an appropriate location within Cohasset. The state has committed $75,000 for the purchase of the land, and $450,000 for construction of the home. Residents of the facility would be from Cohasset and neighboring communities of Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Norwell.

Fishermen's meeting

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Third Plymouth District) has stressed the importance of a hearing to be held by the Division of Marine Fisheries.

"On Oct. l, at 7:30 p.m. at Wampatuck State Park in Hingham, a hearing will be held to have public comment regarding the continued decline of key Massachusetts commercial and recreational fishing resources. I urge all fishermen in my district to attend this hearing." she said.

The hearing concerns the closure of certain state waters from the New Hampshire border to Provincetown regarding the ripe and spawning winter flounder. Another objective is to decrease the small, immature flounder and increase the escapement of small flounder and other ground fish from the nets.

Rep. Murray said, "I have been concerned about night fishing with mobile gear and this issue will also be discussed at the hearing." Rep. Murray's district consists of Hingham, Cohasset and Hull.

Hurricane ? Wait and see !

Residents along the South Shores were taking a wait-and-see attitude Wednesday afternoon about Hurricane Gloria. The storm was centered about 600 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C. at 2 p.m. Wednesday, and was heading northwest at 15 miles per hour. The storm had sustained winds of 150 miles per hour.

A national weather service spokesperson in Miami said New England residents should be very concerned about this major hurricane. There is a 13 percent chance that the storm will pass within 65 miles of Nantucket or Hyannis by 8 a.m. Saturday, said Noel Risnoychok, a weather specialist at the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Residents in the coastal areas of Massachusetts should closely monitor their radios and televisions for current information on the storm, he said. Advisories are updated every six hours.

Residents are urged to take these precautions if the storm moves closer inland:

- Fill gas tanks on cars as soon as possible; when the electricity fails, the gasoline pumps do not work.
- Check batteries in radios and flashlights to be sure they work.
- Find alternate ways to cook since electricity should be out for several days if the hurricane hits here.
- Stock up on non-perishable food items and ice.
- Secure all outdoor furniture and boats.
- Take everything out of boats and check the chafing gear and pendants.
- Be prepared to tape or board windows to prevent flying debris from breaking them.
- Stay tuned to your weather channel and be prepared to evacuate, if ordered.

Bob Francis, Scituate Harbormaster, said Wednesday afternoon that the Scituate Marina has put 17 storm anchors at the Marina and are inspecting as many boats as possible.

Ed Colby of Kehoe's Marine hardware store in Hingham said that some owners began taking their boats out of the water Wednesday morning. He expected many more owners would do the same as the storm moved closer on Thursday.

Tax warrants

John P. Riley, Deputy Collector to the Treasurer-Collector will be serving warrants within the next two weeks on all unpaid Fiscal 1985 Real Estate Taxes.

Our past policy on bringing delinquent tax accounts to tax title has changed. Instead of working on a two and one-half year cycle between due date and tax taking we will be proceeding within a year from the final due date. Demands were sent from our office on the 1985 tax bills on June 26th. These bills were due on May 1, 1985. The next step will be an ad in the local newspaper announcing the 1985 properties to be taken for non-payment.

The Treasurer-Collector's office is located in the Town Hall at 41 Highland Avenue, or you may call the office at 383-0611.

A good look at a 'scary' problem

"Chemically Free is the name of the program, and that's just what we want to emphasize during the meetings. We have a wonderful format designed by Mr. Spinks, and we are anticipating a very interesting look at a very serious matter," she added.

Mike Gill has been involved in the problems associated with students and drugs for several years. As health education coordinator, he has initiated programs to inform children of all grade levels to the dangers of drugs.

"Beginning in kindergarten, we introduce the kids to the good and bad aspects of taking medications. We brought in a puppet show last year-it's all a basic introduction to the prevention of drug abuse. We follow that through each grade. This program, sponsored by the Special Service League is specifically geared toward the older kids in the junior/senior high school." he said.

"When the Special Service League asked me to participate, I agreed, knowing that it doesn't matter if five or fifty kids show up. It's something we all feel should be done. We may not anticipate a large crowd, but it is something we will do for any number of kids willing to particpate," Gill added.

Gill is realistic that Chemically Free, and any similar programs may not be the definitive solution to assuring a drug-free future for our kids. "But this is my job," he stated, "and I will continue to do as many things as I can to help reach out to the community.

"We have to get the parents involved and this is one good way to touch the community," he said. "This is something I really wanted to do as the school's health educator. Maybe through programs such as Chemically Free, we will get more people involved and get them to join the school systems and the programs they are presenting."

Gill, whose office is located at the high school, has a bird's eye view of the daily actions and habits of the students there. It is his perspective that Cohasset is no different, no worse than any other suburb of its size.

"There are drugs out there, no question" he said. "I hate to sound alarming, but it is alarming. I'm sure that 95 percent of the kids here will turn out fine, but in the meantime, it's kind of scary."

"Chemically Free"

The Social Service League of Cohasset is sponsoring a three-part series, especially designed to bring students and parents together to raise awareness of issues regarding alcohol and drugs.

Leading the sessions will be professionals from the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, and the Alcohol Resource Center and Mike Gill, Health Coordinator for the Cohasset schools.

The series will be held on three Wednesday evenings, Oct. 2, 9, and 16, from 7:30 until 9 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephens, 16 Highland Ave.

The first session will be for Junior and Senior High School students only. The second for parents and the final session for students and parents.

On the first and second evenings, films, information and informal discussion will focus on mind altering drugs and alcohol. The concentration will be on their effects, peer pressure issues and the parents' role in their sons' and daughters' choices.

In session three, students and parents will join together to increase levels of communication and understanding. At the conclusion of each evening, refreshments will be served.

For further information call the Social Service League office, 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Committee reviews watershed study; bylaw

By Dave Goodsell

Members of the Cohasset Watershed Commission met with consultants Thursday, Sept. 19 to discuss recommendations for a watershed area by-law proposal slated to be offered at 1986 town meeting.

Phillip Herr and Robert Wiemar of Camp, Dresser and McKee, (CDM) a Boston-based engineering firm hired as consultants on the project, listened to the commissioners' questions and suggestions for the by-law proposal being prepared by the company.

The proposed by-laws include buffer restrictions for development on lands near the watershed protected areas, septic system regulations for the same areas as well as other development-oriented issues.

Lily Pond was discussed extensively as a protected area where the commission would like to begin enforcing buffer restrictions on new development. Herr, a legal expert with CDM told the group Massachusetts typically requires a 200-foot barrier between developments and the shore lines. Peppermint Brook and Brass Kettle Brook will also be included in this area.

According to Wiemar, the area will only be zoned for single family unit housing. "That is not a severe environmental problem," he said. "By the zoning ordinance, I don't see any problems unless you create a dense waste water disposal system."

According to Wiemar, his company performed a nutrient-loading evaluation in the area and found that septic systems for single family units will not cause much harm.

The proposal also includes a ban on cluster septic systems in the areas. A cluster system joins a group of individual homes to one waste water disposal system which is capable of processing as much as 15,000 gallons a day. According to Herr, the average home has a 500-gallon system and systems of that size are permissable within the 200-foot barrier which would be set up.

The commission also expressed concern about the use of road salt and herbicides in the area, especially in the Route 3A area. According to Commissioner Ben Curley, the town currently uses a four to one ratio of sand over salt. Because the state is responsible for the maintenance of Route 3A the proposal requests that the state use a similar ratio in that area. Herr expressed doubt to the state adhering to such a request and said, "Public safety has always prevailed over public health unless there is a severe sodium problem." "You can't legislate against the state."

The commission also proposed to include a ban on herbicides in the watershed area. Herr said the state has preemptive control over herbicides and that many towns making such regulations are making them through their Board of Health. The board of health regulations do not have to be reviewed by the Attorney General's office, but bylaws do.

"I don't think you should get into regulating something if you are going to have problems regulating it," said Weimar. "The safe way to do it is as a board of health regulation. As part of a by-law, the attorney general will reject it."

The Watershed By-law proposal will also include a restriction of hazardous wastes in the area. The consultants' recommendation calls for a restriction of 25 pounds solid waste and 50 gallons liquid as prohibitive limit. Herr said, "I don't think it's a large concern."

The commission and consultants also discussed the role of the commission in enforcing these by-law proposals if enacted. Weimar said, "We're asking you as an entity to be aware of problems in the district. You would be a clearinghouse for the information others gather and oversee the execution of monitoring."

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt said, "We're looking for direct enforcement powers at the level of the water department itself."

The CDM consultants will make additions to the proposals requested by the commission and send a final copy for its approval, and subsequent review by the town counsel before a public hearing some time in January.

Reducing phone costs

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray has distributed to her Third Plymouth District Libraries Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, a pamphlet informing people of "Five Ways to Cut Your Phone Costs." Mary Jeanette stated, "As an avid believer in economizing I will, when possible, inform my constituents of possible savings."

The five points analyzed are:

1. The way to choose the right local service for your specific needs.
2. How to compare different long distance options and save.
3. How possibly it may be less expensive to own your phone.
4. Be aware of when and who to call for phone repairs.
5. How and when to question rate increases.

"For your convenience each town library has a small supply." Representative Murray concluded.

No cause found for brook oil spill

The Coast Guard used absorbent booms to absorb a minor petroleum spill last Thursday night in James Brook. The 'white snake' acts as a sponge to absorb the oil.
(Paula Brackett, photo)

The source of a "very minor" oil spill in James Brook last week will probably never be determined, according to a state official.

A Coast Guard spokesman at the Marine Safety Office said the sample taken from last Thursday's oil spill in James Brook along South Main Street was too small to detect the cause of contamination. The officer explained the Coast Guard, which assisted in the cleanup efforts that night, could not gather a sufficient sample to test.

A likely source, he said, might have been someone changing motor oil and illegally disposing it in a storm drain. He described the spill as a "slight oil sheen," adding that in such limited incidences, "sometimes the source remains a mystery."

Residents of South Main Street alerted sewer plant chief operator Manuel Salvador last Thursday evening that strong fumes were emanating from James Brook. He and Fire Chief Martin Dooley inspected the brook in that vacinity and discovered an oil slick in the brook near the parking lot at St. Anthony's Church.

Firefighters then notified the Coast Guard station in Scituate. Third Petty Officer Jonathan Russell and Fireman Tom O'Brien responded to the call. Oil absorbent booms were placed in three brook locations in an effort to remove the sheen.

The Marine Safety Officer explained the booms quickly reduced the spill to a minor slick. The equipment was then packed and transported to a treatment storage facility where it is either burned or buried at a hazardous waste landfill. If there is enough oil product stored within the booms, the surplus is recovered through a vacuum process. The recovered product from the Cohasset spill was so slight, the entire absorbed material was transported for disposal, he added.

Such a slight spill can be caused by illegal dumping of motor oil into a storm drain, or discharge from a boat's bilge pump. Either situation is unfortunately not uncommon, the officer stated, but is often impossible to prove.

According to Fire Chief Dooley, the last time there was an oil spill detected in James Brook, it was caused by motor oil dumped into the storm drain at the town parking lot.

Cohasset observes state EMS week

As part of its statewide EMS (Emergency Medical Service) public awareness campaign on early warning signs of heart attack, "Killing Time Waiting to Feel Better Could Kill You," the Massachusetts Department of Public Health Office of Emergency Medical Services - (OEMS), has produced a thirty-second television public service announcement.

The year-long statewide campaign is being launched during EMS week, Sept. 29 through October 5.

"We had three important messages to deliver to the public," said OEMS Director Frank Keslof. "First, know the early warning signs of heart attack. Second, know how to call for help and to it immediately. (Cohasset Fire Department/Ambulance service, 383-0260). Third, there is a system to save your life which is made up of dedicated EMS professionals who are waiting to help you 24 hours a day, seven days a week, in addition to vehicles, equipment, facilities and communication. This message is just as important as the first two."

For more information on distribution of the public service announcement or for further information on any other aspect of the campaign, contact Roy Kniveton, Assistant Director, Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Office of Emergency Medical Services, 150 Tremont St., eighth floor, Boston, Mass. 02111, or 727-0564.

Heart attack is the leading cause of death in the United States, with over 550,000 deaths per year. Eight thousand Massachusetts residents will die of heart attack this year.

Two thirds of heart attack deaths occur before the victim reaches the hospital. The average heart attack victim waits three hours before deciding to seek help.

Everyone should know the early warning signs of a heart attack: pain,tightness, pressure or discomfort in your chest, arm, abdomen, neck or jaw; nausea, especially if accompanied by sweating; a feeling of weakness or dizziness; difficulty breathing.

Citizens are the most important link in the EMS system. The system's resources, including personnel equipment, vehicles, communications, and facilities, will not be of any help to a heart attack victim, or the victim of any other serious illness or injury, until the initial phone call is made. Don't wait to call for help. Your emergency ambulance service phone number is listed inside the front cover of your phone book. Look it up, write it down, and carry it with you.

The Cohasset fire Department/Ambulance service number is 383-0260.

CHS sports report for the week . . .

(Editor's note: The following article was written about last weekend's Norwell-Cohasset football game by Norwell High School junior Michelle Collins.)

Finally, on Saturday, NHS football topped the week off with a win over Cohasset by a score of 21-14.

The first half of the game was well played by both teams, but Norwell lead at the half, 14-7.

The key play of the game came in the third quarter when James Murphy was kicking a field goal from the 30 yard line. The kick was blocked, and a penalty was called against Cohasset for a late hit on Murphy. This penalty gave Norwell a first down on the Cohasset 25 yard line, which the Clippers converted into another touchdown.

If that wasn't sweet enough, the game was topped off when Murphy intercepted an overthrown pass with 1 1/2 minutes left in the game.

Norwell may just have another championship season on their hands. They've beaten Cohasset (which the Patriot Ledger predicted to take the league this season) and have only to worry about East Bridgewater (which always has some tricks up its sleeves) and Hull (which defeated them last year).

By Lisa Shumaker

Varsity Football

The boys opened with a heartbreaking loss to Norwell, 21-14. Coach Phil Pisano felt the team played with a lot of heart and showed a lot of pride, especially considering the brutal conditions under which the game was played.

Pisano strongly believed Cohasset outhustled Norwell notably in the second half.

Down 7-0 in the first half, Floyd Hardwick returned to punt 85 yards to tie the game at 7. Two excellent blocks by Philip Mahoney and Jeff Hartwell made this touchdown possible.

Norwell came back and scored once again, however, Hardwick answered with a 30-yard run made possible by the blocking of Philip Mahoney and Jeff Aaron.

Unfortunately, Norwell pulled ahead for good with three minutes remaining in the game after a questionable call.

Offensively, Pisano cited his entire offensive line as having a great game. The line consists of Liam Stanford, Jeff Soltesz, Patrick O'Connor, Jeff Lydon, and Jeff Lloyd.

Quarterback Sean Corkery directed the team well and also threw the ball well. Overall, except for a few penalties, Pisano was proud of the way his offense moved the ball and was optimistic about this good showing.

On defense, John Hall, Greg Ferreira, Pete Sandbloom, and Matt Maloney stood out as having good games. After getting off to a sluggish start, Cohasset's defense came alive in the second half and stopped Norwell's dangerous offense several times.

Pisano believes that although his defense is still susceptible to the "big play or big run" as he puts it, they are coming along very nicely and should be a powerhouse before the end of the season.

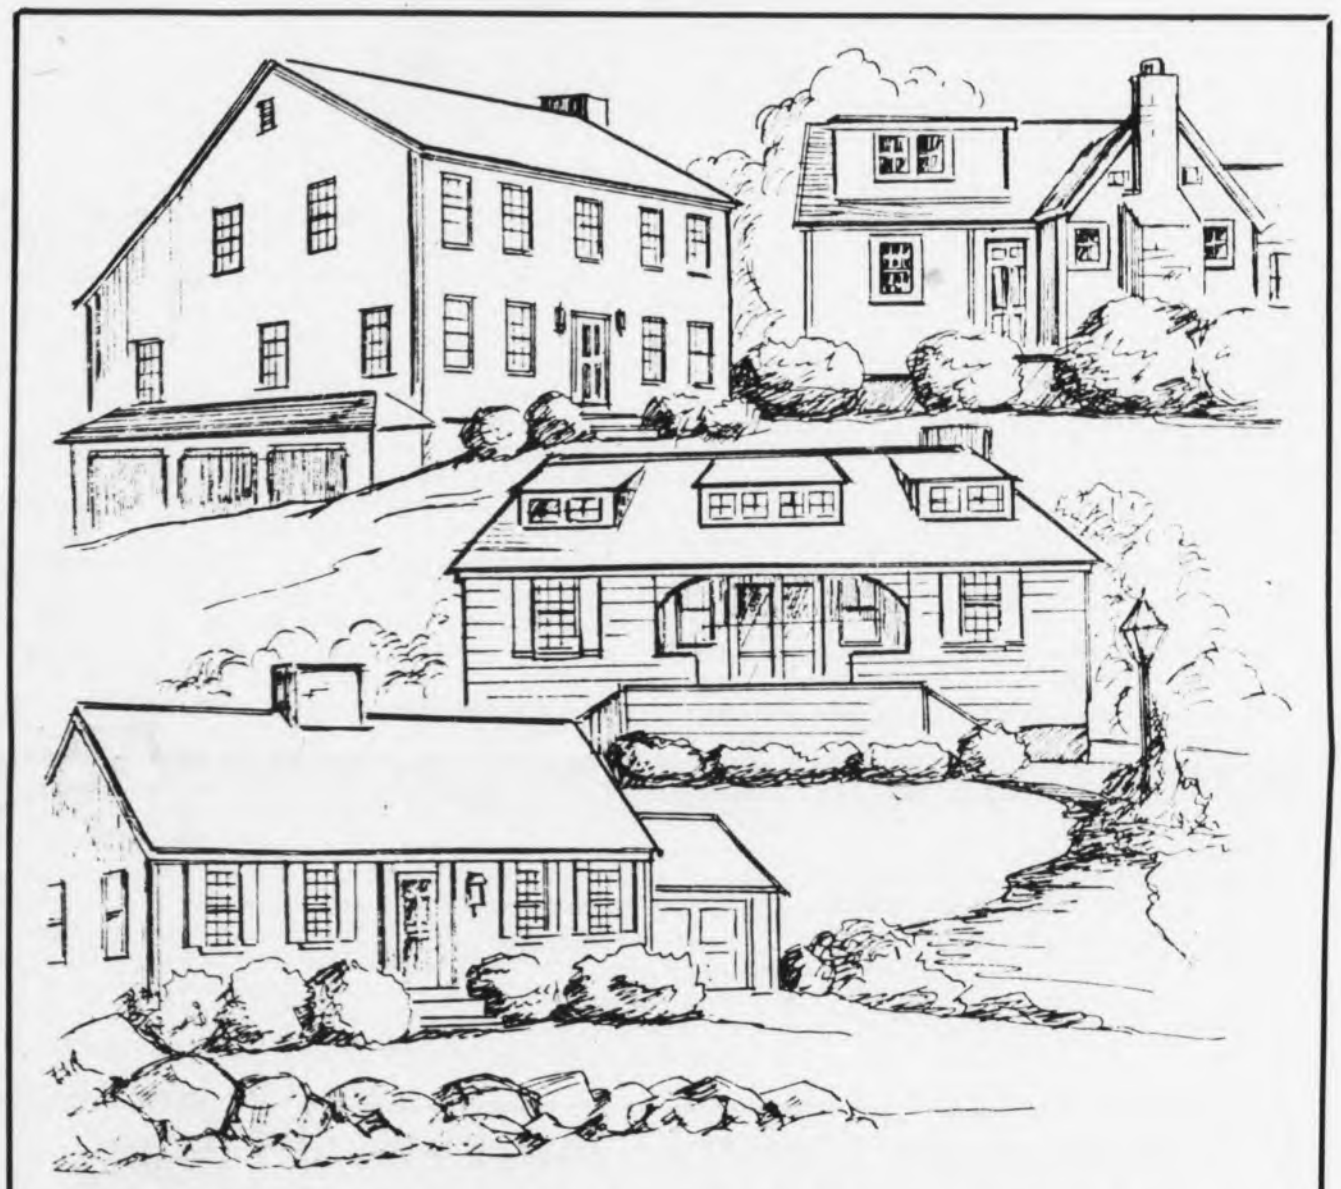
Next Saturday, the boys take on Umana High School at 10:30 a.m. on Milliken Field. Umana is very quick and aggressive according to Pisano, who believes that in order to beat them, Cohasset must be very alert, especially on defense.

Boys' Soccer

Tuesday, Cohasset defeated Abington 2-0. Coach Jon Anderson was pleased with his team's performance and felt the score could have easily been higher. Cohasset controlled the entire game and outshot Abington by a margin of 34-9.

David Shultz popped in the first goal off a pass from Todd Fitzpatrick. Bob Shultz picked up a goal with an assist from Mark Crough.

Anderson said that although Cohasset's offense was strong, the defense was the real key to the victory. Defensively, we had great games from Kurt Weisenfluh, John Reidy, Kevin Dunn and Kevin Henry.



Thursday, the boys upset Norwell 3-0. Last year, Norwell was the League champion and beat Cohasset twice. However, the Skippers were not intimidated by Norwell's previous record, and dominated almost the entire contest.

Bob Shultz scored the first two goals assisted by David Shultz on both. Chris Kirkendall kicked in Cohasset's third and final goal with Mark Crough assisting.

Wednesday the boys face Duxbury which is undoubtedly Cohasset's biggest game of the season. Last week, Rockland broke Duxbury's 47-game winning streak, and Cohasset is going to make sure they don't start another one Wednesday.

Saturday, the Skippers face an undefeated Sandwich team at 1:30 p.m. at Milliken Field.

☐ The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce commenced their fall business season with a cocktail party hosted by Mary Lou and John Roy at their Jerusalem Rd. home. The splended setting enhanced the social spirit of the event. It was a wonderful opportunity for old members to renew friendships after the summer and greet new members.

☐Mark Wilkin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brian R. Wilkin of Cohasset, has successfully completed the requirements for a bachelor of arts degree from St. Michael's College, Winooski, VT. A business administration major, his degree was awarded in August, 1985.

St. Michael's College, founded in 1903 and headed by President Paul J. Reiss, is Vermont's largest Catholic, liberal arts and sciences institution.

☐ Former Cohasset High School star Lee Reid has continued his excellent play at Massasoit Community College scoring his first goal of the season in the Warriors 10-1 opening round victory in the Monroe Community College Invitational in Rochester, New York.

Massasoit captured the soccer kick-off tournament with a 2-0 victory over the host team—Monroe Community College.

"Lee is one of the hardest workers on the team. A reserve last year, he will start this year and should score more than the five goals he netted last year. He has improved his shooting and control over the summer," said Coach Nick Palantzas.

Lee was a 1984 South Shore League All-Star prior to joining the Warriors. He scored two goals against Post Junior College in which Massasoit won 13-0.

☐ Mark S. Lahive, son of Mr. and Mrs. David K. Lahive, has begun his freshman year at Middlebury College in Vermont. He joins 485 other freshmen, drawn from 3890 applicants, to form the Class of '89 at the Vermont liberal arts college.

Upon arrival at Middlebury, incoming freshmen spent almost a week taking placement examinations, attending orientation lectures in each of the college's 39 major departments of study, and getting to know other freshman at Middlebury's Bread Loaf campus.

Cohasset residents Mrs. Terrence H. White (l) and Mrs. Charles Ford (middle), members of the Museum of Fine Arts Ladies Committee admire a Renior during preparations for the Members' Evening Previews.

☐ First you must picture the setting . . . surrounded by water in Newport aboard a millionaire's yacht, with servants on hand to answer your every request. Then the occasion, which was to be a cocktail party held before a card fest held by and for a group of men. Finally, the scene you have been waiting for. The butler asks for orders for cocktails, and makes his way around the table hearing "one martini," "scotch and water," etc. When he gets to a certain gentleman, he takes two Sanka packets out of his shirt pocket and requests a cup of hot water . . . would anyone but Joe Laugelle be able to pull that off?

☐ Love Jeff Brown's shirt with his business logo on it . . . Jeff does mooring work, underwater work, etc., and his business is entitled "Bottoms Up Divers." Next time that you see him, be sure to check out his shirt, and think of him if your boat needs repairing, or anything else in his line of work.

☐ Saturday is the day of the Historical Society's yard sale and flea market, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Lothrop House. Don't miss it.

☐ Kirk Sweeney was the winner in the Boosters Club 50-50 raffle held at the football game last Saturday. Good going Kirk.

☐ Sure was fun to watch our little town on big screen TV in the new series "Spenser: For Hire." Was fun to try to locate different scenes and homes!

☐ Congratulations to Kevin McCarthy, who was the first to finish the South Shore Striders Late Summer Classic.

☐ A reminder that the Senior Center will be needing any donations of furniture that they have listed, and boy would they ever appreciate your "white elephants." A small desk, folding chairs (comfortable ones please), a small filing cabinet and a small bookcase are a few of the items that are needed. If you are looking for a place to "dispose" of your treasures, call Karin Bartow at the Social Service League office (383-0771).

☐ The man that was picketing in front of Autohaus (Mr. Boyd) really managed to get a few people in his corner last week. He asked that everyone going by toot their horn at him, and a lot did! He even had one man feeling so sorry for him in the heat that he went to get him a cold drink so that he wouldn't be sick!

☐ Saw a cute couple walking through the Village, she was holding a huge stuffed animal purchased locally . . . nifty sight.

☐ Saw Nick Anderson carrying his very precious bundle at the football game Saturday. Before you know it, that same bundle will probably be playing football on that same field!

☐ The tent is down but JJ's still is open, so the summer (Indian style) isn't over yet! If you don't believe that, ask all of the beach bums still soaking up the rays at Sandy Beach.

☐ Wasn't it nice to read about Ellen Marlette last week? The fact that she has decided to keep running is wonderful, she is an inspiration . . .

☐ Sure was a lucky thing the Gridiron Club was at the field to sell drinks at last week's game . . . had to be the hottest day for football that can be remembered. To all of those that supported our team, you are to be congratulated. To those who missed a super game, hard-fought to the end, don't miss the next one.

☐ Sounds exciting to think that Tony Mich wants to do a movie on the little town of Cohasset! Having worked here for a while, and doing his "homework" by talking to many "townies," wonder what the selectmen will decide. Whatever, it will be worth watching for and wondering about . . .

☐ Keep your news coming . . .

Sewer board acts to reverse non funding

The sewer commission has formally communicated to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) its displeasure that the supplemental wastewater management plan was rejected for funding.

The Massachusetts Division of Water Pollution Control indicated to the town this summer that the major portion of Cohasset's alternative wastewater plan will not receive funding.

In response to that, the local sewer commission has forwarded its opinion of the decision to the DEQE.

In addition, Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis emphasized the town's displeasure that the interconnection with the Hull treatment plant, the only portion of the plan approved for funding, is being delayed by the state agency.

"First, insofar as the decision rests on the availability of a study of the capacity of the town of Hull's publically-owned treatment works, the decision raises a false issue and leads to a delay which is both unwarranted and damaging," DeSantis wrote, adding, "Timely approval of the Hull interconnection is important to Cohasset so that it can terminate its current plant's discharge to the environment," the letter continued.

"DWPC has placed the Hull segment of Cohasset's project," the commission letter stated, "on the fundable portion of its FY 1986 priority list, so Cohasset urges you to approve it so that design and construction might begin as soon as possible."

The commission chairman stated that the DWPC's decision to reject the majority of the wastewater plan "would seem to rest on a double standard and a legal question not finally resolved. . . DWPC has demanded information not necessary to the pertinent planning decisions and not required of the same engineer in facilities plans for two other towns previously approved by DWPC. Moreover, DWPC is apparently continuing to insist on information it did not require of Cohasset's previous engineer when it approved Cohasset's previous facilities plan (the Metcalf and Eddy plan) contrary to Cohasset's wishes and federal law."

DeSantis said the town will spend no further money in its attempts to respond to the state's demands for continual explanations. Any questions raised by the state agency will be resolved by the local sewer commission, prepared without extensive and costly help from attorneys.

"We are troubled by DWPC's continued intransigence and inconsistent positions," DeSantis stated in the letter. "Cohasset has developed a facilities plan, at its own expense, which EPA found it was legally required to develop and which, in contrast to the plan previously approved by DWPC contrary to federal law, will cost the taxpayers over $20 million less, can be completed in two years instead of twenty, will serve 100 percent of the town instead of 60 percent, will require no new outfall and will provide a welcome infusion of capital and flow into Hull's existing (sewer treatment plant). Yet DWPC continues to frustrate instead of encouraging this result. I urge you to reverse DWPC's decision and to approve Cohasset's Supplemental Facilities Plan," he concluded.

According to DeSantis, "we're obviously very displeased with the DWPC's decision, yet we are pleased that we will not be building a $30 million plant that will not bankrupt the town, with no outfall into Sandy Beach. For that, we're extremely pleased. We're also pleased that the discharge permit question will be resolved by the pipe to Hull, although there is a question of when this will be constructed. We are most troubled by the on-site corrections in town. The state has begrudingly said they are approving that portion, but at a low priority for funding. It effectively makes municipalities devise sewer plans they can not afford, particularly small communities. It has sad implications on the finances of these towns and the water quality of the Commonwealth."

Arts lottery funding

This fall there will be another funding period for Cohasset artists, groups and association.

The Lottery Arts Council will probably have $1000 to disperse. The last funding period included the Cohasset Historical Society, Cohasset Dramatic Club, South Shore Arts Center. No individual artists applied.

Since we receive so few dollars in Cohasset, and the funding is based on population, the money awarded is more than carefully considered by the committee. The Arts Lottery Council includes Linda Stearns Halloran, Helen Ketchum, Ellen Morrissey, Sigrid Carey, Tom Lucas, Christine Conley and Larry Fone.

It is time to get applications for funding at the Town Hall, or call Larry Fone at 383-0898.

Individual artists often don't know about this program, but are the people who need this funding most! Let's use this money effectively and get Cohasset artists and organizations the funding they deserve.

A good law

The governor is expected to sign the new Seat Belt legislation sometime this week. It has been a long time coming, and we are happy to witness its enactment.

It is a weak law as compared to other states across the country. The basics of this law is that all passengers within a vehicle, children and adult, be restrained via a seat belt.

This does not mean a Gestapo-type officer will search your car at makeshift road barriers. A police officer has the authority to cite you for no restraint only if you have been stopped for another motor vehicle violation. In other states, an officer may stop you for the seat belt violation alone.

There are as many viewpoints regarding the advantages of seat belts as there are makes and models of cars. Even police officers are divided on this issue.

But based on numerous surveys and data compiled from exhaustive research, it is said in Massachusetts alone the seat belt legislation will save about 150 lives next year. In 1986, there will be 150 people alive following a car crash—people who would have died if they were not restrained by a seat belt.

Certainly seat belts are useful for many types of accidents, but not all. We at the Mariner were recently touched by a near-tragedy when one of our editors was involved in a serious accident. Ironically, she was the only one of the Mariner editors who fastidiously fastened her seat belt whether she was journeying into Boston, or traveling to the post office.

The seat belt may or may not have saved her life. It was a head-on crash into a tree, and the advantage of a seat belt in such circumstances are limited.

But we remain in favor of this impeding legislation, and know that Judy Gilman would have expressed her support of the law.

If 150 more people are alive next year because of this rather simplistic gesture, we are grateful. We applaud those who have worked continuously through the years to see some sort of law put into effect.

One of Judy's dearest friends in Hingham, Inta Hall, was a leading proponent of a strong seat belt law.

Please be aware that seat belts do save lives. Buckle up those you love. And buckle up for those awaiting your return home. It takes a few seconds and it may spare you from a lifetime of tragedy.

Creative assertiveness 101

By Claire McDonough

"It seems to me," the Dragon mused, "that the last thing in the world you need is another night out every week. Why have you signed up for a master's program course, especially when you have no intention in the world of going for your master's degree?"

"Because," I told him airily, "we should continue to learn as long as we live. And a course in "Creativity and Creative Problem Solving" should enrich my life and improve my writing, and if my life is richer yours will be, too. And because my friend Shirley is also taking it. And because it's free.

He shook his head slowly. "Sure. I've seen some of your homework. Would you mind explaining how our lives will be enriched because you know how to get a ping pong ball out of a two inch pipe without damaging the floor, the pipe, or the ball?"

"Who knows," I asked mysteriously, "when we may really need a ping pong ball? And anyway, when you figured out how, you were so excited you phoned me at work to tell me, even though the solution was certainly not anything I would even consider doing."

"Okay," he admitted, "there may be some practical application for the ping pong ball problem, but moving matches around to make an equation when there really isn't any right answer is just plain dumb."

"That's because you couldn't solve it," I told him. "And furthermore, the object wasn't actually to make an equation. The object was to force us to discard traditional methods of problem solving that stifle us in our search for creative solutions."

"I tried that with my math teacher a few years ago," Skip interjected. "She gave me an 'F' anyway."

"Maybe you weren't creative enough," Breida suggested. "You could have told her about the ping pong ball, and grossed her out. Maybe she would have forgotten to give you an 'F' "

"Wait a minute," the Dragon roared. "We're getting off the subject. It's not as if taking this course was only going to cost you one night a week. I've seen the reading list that goes with it, and if you read all those books you won't have time to do any writing. Does your professor really expect you to read them? It took her three single spaced typewritten pages just to list them."

"Not at all," I told him. "She said that we should read as many as we can, and keep a journal of any thoughts that may occur to us while we're reading. The biggest problem, though, is to find them. So far I haven't found any."

"Wait a minute," the Dragon expostulated. "How can you say you didn't find any of the books on your reading list? There must be twenty books on your bureau."

"I know," I replied. "I've looked everywhere for the books on the list, and so far I haven't located a one. But everywhere I go I find other books that interest me, so I buy them."

"For heaven's sake," the Dragon objected, "this 'free' course of yours must have cost a fortune already, and you haven't even bought any of the books you need. What are you reading about, anyway?"

"They're all about assertiveness," I told him. "You can find books about assertiveness just about everywhere. It's really big right now."

Breida and Skip laughed so hard that tears rolled down their cheeks.

"Ma's going to be assertive," Skip gasped, leaning against his sister. "This women who is intimidated by the Avon lady is going to dazzle us with her assertiveness."

Breida choked. "Maybe it'll help," she suggested between gales of helpless laughter. "Maybe she'll be able to say no to people who ask her to contribute to the Rev. Sun Yung Moon defense fund. But I wouldn't bet on it."

The Dragon struggled manfully to keep a straight face. "My guess," he said, "is that your mother was unable to leave the bookstores without buying anything because she was intimidated by the salesmen."

He turned to me. "Prepare us. What's it going to be? Have you decided whether you're going to be creative or assertive."

I considered my options. "I think I'll be assertive," I told him. "That is, if it's all right with you."

So. American AFS trip was a success

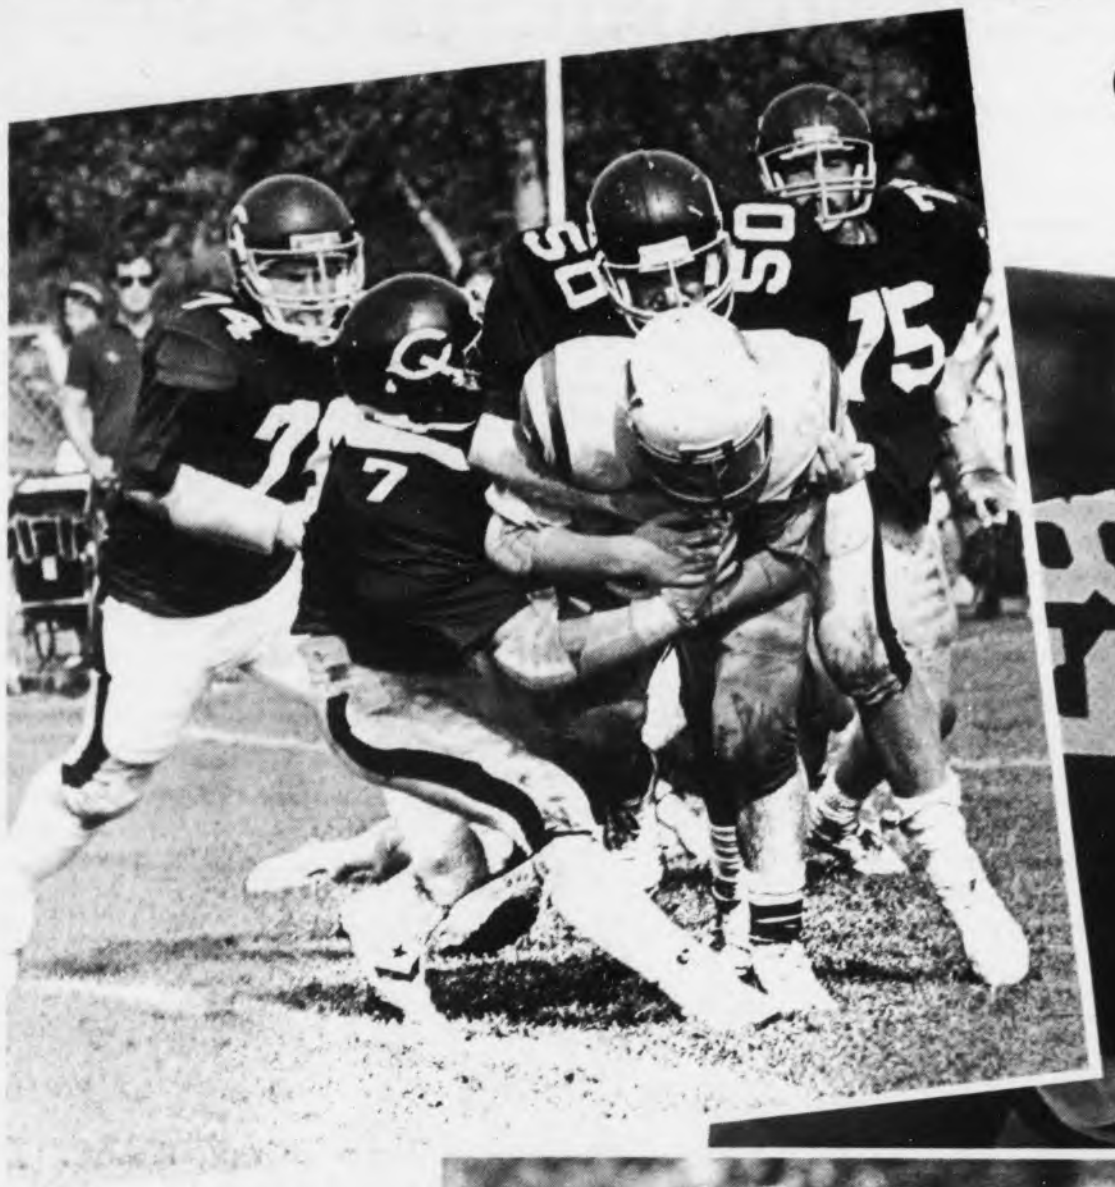
Letter

To the Editor:

This response is with regard to AFS Bus #67 trip recently taken by numerous Cohasset Parents, and AFS International Chaperone Cindi Pike (Cohasset Mariner, Aug. 22).

Hiro and Alfredo (Paraguay and Argentian) couldn't have been more perfect ambassadors for their countries. After a brief four days of packing their lunches and doing their wash they were mine, ours, in all respects.

Love doesn't take long.



By the time Hiro and Alfredo were packing and readying their belongings for the bus to Connecticut, we were in tears over their leave-taking. This feeling was not ours alone. The Langmaids, the Shultzs, the Bartows, the Kornets, the Contis's, the Davenports and many other Cohasset parents were equally affected.

Over the past many years I have been told many evil things about Cohasset parents:

"Cohasset parents are too intensely child-oriented, too competitive, too this and too that."

Planning board to accept comments on store

"We have taken those drains and diverted them to a bird sanctuary rather than the watershed where they currently drain. That is a positive step," he said. "And any discussion of the Rosano property iis entirely out of bounds. Mr. Staszko does not own that property and we have no jurisdiction over that land."

He noted that removing a previously-planned access to Sohier Street, and by providing state-approved traffic controls "we are tying in our entrance with the King Street entrance so there is a cohesive point there," Atty. Humphreys stated. His comment was followed with laughter from several residents at the hearing.

Planning Board member Robert Sturdy commented that the latest traffic report submitted by the developer "is an improvement" from previous plans, but called the plan superficial.

He outlined several objections to the traffic study, saying the conclusions are largely based on assumptions rather than fact. He requested that firm traffic counts from other Stop and Shop stores be provided, especially peak hour counts specifically during the busiest shopping days of the year.

Based on his comments, the board agreed to have traffic counts provided from other Stop and Shop locations, and an evaluation of the summer traffic on Sohier Street as affected by South Shore Music Circus patrons.

Lee Cisneros of King Street objected to the revised plan, saying it will add to the traffic hazards at the entrance to that street. He asked that the hearing be contined so more King Street residents can be apprised of the latest changes affecting those neighbors.

Planning Board Chairman Bassett explained that residents will have an opportunity to write their comments to the board, regarding the recent major changes to the plan.

At the hearing last week, Hingham architect James Shipsky presented a three-dimensional model of the proposed supermarket. It would be located, he explained, with the front of the store facing north. The down grade of the property would allow a view of the top portion of the store and roofline.

The store would be constructed of brick with a red cedar shingle or asphalt roof, he proposed, although Shipsky noted he had only three days to prepare the plans. He explained the building would not look like other super Stop and Shops, and would have an exterior appearance "compatible with the architecture of the town." There would be a dormer atop the ground level of the store, with a columned arcade in the front entrance and landscaping placed within that arcade.

Atty. Humphreys noted that Stop and Shop has signed a lease to occupy the proposed building.

Members of the town's Design Review Board said the proposed store represented an improved design from the standard supermarket. Member Max Pounder expressed concern with the large sign proposed for the front top of the building. "Some details need to be worked on," he stated.

Concern for children

That's probably true. But recently, I've decided that's OK.

What I learned this past summer is that the community of parents is very small, and has similar goals. Whatever our language, we have basic concerns at heart—our children, your children, all children. And this is very good.

Deer Hill raffle

A raffle will be held at the Deer Hill Open House October 3, to benefit the sixth grade field trip transportation fund. Those donating raffle items include: South Shore Music Circus, 2 tickets to a 1986 season performance; Fleming's, a bean pot; Hair Imports, a cut and blow dry; Peridot, a manicure, Aveni Cleaners, 2—$5 gift certificates; Sea'N Cheese, a wine and cheese basket; The Red Balloon, a balloon bouquet; Sharon's Chocolate Factory, life size stuffed animal; Cohasset Hardware, 5 pc. Pirex bowl set; and a friend of the sixth grade, large green plant.

Tickets will be sold for $1 each or six for $5 at the Open House. Drawings will be held in the school cafeteria while refreshments are being served. Winners do not have to be present at the drawing.

Try different things

At the Jr./Sr. High School a new program of "walk-in" classes is beginning. A chance to try different things during a study hall period. Ms. Lucas is offering art during periods two and six and Mrs. Wunchel is offering crafts during period six. It's a great chance for students to explore new areas. Come in and check it out.

Splash/Talent pool

By Katie O'Sullivan

Recently at the Deer Hill School Mrs. Wondolowski held her first fifth grade talent pool class.

The talent pool class is a group of students who have shown, over the years, that they learn concepts quickly.

The Deer Hill uses the Enrichment Triad Model for its enrichment program. Triad means that three different types of services are available.

In the first class, students were asked to list three adults, alive or dead, whom they thought were gifted. Some of the choices were: Ben Franklin, Beethoven, Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell and Helen Keller. We discussed why we thought these people were gifted.

Then the class went to the library and researched the lives of these people. The students concluded that gifted behavior was creative-producing.

Presidential Fitness Test

All students in grades 7—12 are starting off the school year by being tested for physical fitness with the Presidential AAHPERD National Fitness Test.

Components of the test include the number of sit-ups in 60 seconds to test abdominal strength, pull-ups for boys and bent arm hang for girls to test upper body strength, shuttle run to test agility, standing long jump to test explosive power, 50 yard dash to test speed, 600 yard run to test speed and endurance, and the mile run to test cardiovascular fitness and endurance.

Each student's performance will be compared to national norms so that each student will be able to see how they match up nationally in each area. This will allow them to set goals for reaching personal fitness levels. All norms are established by age and sex.

The test will also help the department evaluate overall student strengths and weaknesses. These will be addressed through curriculum offerings.

All students scoring at the 85th percentile or better in each area will receive a fitness patch with the presidential seal as well as a certificate signed by President Reagan.

Students scoring at the 85th percentile in all but one area will receive a merit badge.

Parents should note that any student receiving a Presidential Award is rated in the top 15 percent of the country and has achieved a major accomplishment. He or she should be highly commended.

Release Days

A series of release Thursdays has been established for the current school year resulting in shortened school sessions and the cancellation of afternoon kindergarten on each occasion. The purpose of release days is to provide time for the teachers to participate in staff development programs and conduct parent conferences at the conclusion of the first marking period. The first release day of the series is scheduled for next Thursday, Sept. 26. Dismissal at the Osgood School will be at 12:55. The morning kindergarten will be dismissed at the usual time. The afternoon Kindergarten will not meet. Luncheon will be served.

Release Day at Deer Hill School will be Thursday, Sept. 26. Dismissal will be at 12:45 and lunch will be served.

Brownie registration

Brownies—Any 3rd grade girl interested in joining a Brownie Troop that will be meeting on Tuesday afternoon may call Marsha Silvia at 383-0500 or Katy Quemere at 383-0606. It is not necessary to have been previously enrolled in scouting. A Wednesday group will also be meeting. For information, call Lee Jenkins 383-0024 or Mimi Aronson, 383-9886.

PSO Calendar coming

Hang on. The 1985-1986 School Calendar will be in the mail in mid-October to all families of Cohasset students.

Student Photographs

Student photographs will be taken at the Osgood School Tuesday, Oct 1. Notices will be sent home at a later date.

Students' pictures will be taken at Deer Hill Friday, Oct. 11.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

CHANGING A WILL

Changing a will can be as simple as having a codicil drafted. A codicil is a legal means of modifying an existing will without rewriting the entire document. It is typically used when the will needs only minor modifications. A codicil is often a single page document reaffirming everything that has already been stated in the will except the specific provisions that are to be changed. Like a will, a codicil should be typed, signed and properly witnessed. In some cases, a new will should be drawn even when substantial changes are not to be made. For example, one may make a decision not to leave property to someone named in the original will. If offending the omitted beneficiary is to avoided, destroying the old will after a new will has been properly drawn may be the answer.

A will serves to establish that your wishes will be carried out as you intend. You will not be in a position to offer further comments or explanations when your will is reviewed and estate distributed. Accordingly, it is vital to be sure that such a document is properly prepared and legally acceptable. For assistance in such matters, I welcome your call at the LAW OFFICE OF RICHARD PRICE, SMITH, SMITH & PRICE, P.C., 202 Mill Wharf Plaza, Scituate, 545-6660.

WEEKENDS ARE MADE FOR MISHAPS.

For reasons unknown to mere mortals, most minor illnesses and injuries requiring immediate medical attention strike on weekends, holidays and other singularly inconvenient times.

So you find yourself in the hospital emergency room waiting for someone to look after your sprained ankle, lacerated foot, burned hand, sore throat, fever, or other semi-serious condition.

No more.

Because now the HealthFirst Walk-in Medical Care Center in your community is open 7 days a week, from 8:00 a.m. until 10:00 p.m. (Weymouth facility 8:00 a.m. – 8:00 p.m.)

That includes weekends and holidays. Which is when most mishaps choose to occur.

So, the next time your weekend is punctuated with a minor disaster that can't wait until Monday office hours for attention, bring it to HealthFirst right away. Bring this ad with you and get $5.00 off your visit. Offer expires October 31, 1985.

And please. Don't call for an appointment.

Cohasset Garden Club to tend water trough

This is a watering trough dedicated to the memory of Henry Miles Knowles, with a memorial plaque honoring Perry Johnson. The Garden Club has assumed responsibility for maintaining this landmark.

A landmark along our shoreline, the watering trough once used by thirsty carriage horses traveling the dusty dirt roads of Cohasset, will continue to thrive.

A memorial built in the early years of this century will be tenderly cared for by the members of the Cohasset Garden Club. And the descendants of Henry Miles Knowles couldn't be more pleased.

The water within the granite trough has long been replaced by flowering blossoms. The Robert Knowles family of Border Street, Scituate, has attended to the memorial and its decorative plantings for many years. The garden club just recently agreed to take over that task, according to a grateful Virginia Knowles.

The memorial was constructed shortly after the death of Henry Knowles in 1903. For many years, Knowles was a summer resident of Cohasset, traveling to his property at the corner of Beach Street and Atlantic Avenue from his winter residence in Boston.

The structure was donated in his memory by his wife, the former Alice Appleton.

Later, the trough served as a dual memorial. A plaque was attached to the edifice, remembering Perry Higginson Johnson. According to Mrs. Knowles, Perry enlisted in the U.S. Navy on Pearl Harbor Day and was killed in action in February, 1943. He had been serving as a lieutenant aboard the USS Haven at the Solomon Islands.

The plaque which was placed on the trough, was given in memory of the former Lothrop Lane resident by his mother, Mrs. Howard A. Johnson (Katherine Higginson). She had been an early member of the Cohasset Garden Club, Mrs. Knowles added.

Once the watering trough was a busy site. "I think people here were slow to give up their horse-drawn carriages for the motor car," Mrs. Knowles explained.

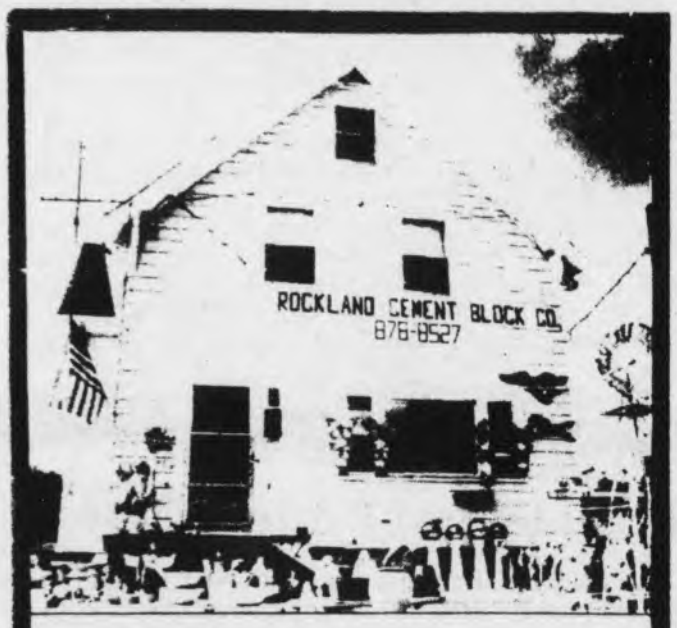
Once that change was complete, the trough was no longer in use. There was more esthetic than practical reason to maintain the memorial.

Portulaca, petunias and white alyssum have been planted within the basin of the trough. Mrs. Knowles and her husband tended to the flowers for many years.

"Henry Miles Knowles summered in Cohasset for many years," she explained. "His family owned that property until it was recently sold. The trough is located right near that property.

"It is a landmark in town," Mrs. Knowles added. "People in that area of town always give directions from it. You know, they say to turn right or left at the 'fountain.' That's what we call it now."

The Memorial Day parade travels to the trough each spring and marchers traditionally place a wreath at the plaque in memory of Lt. Johnson.



"The garden club members will probably try some different arrangements," Mrs. Knowles said. "That will be fine with us, we are so happy they decided to care for the memorial. We are very grateful to the members."

St. Stephen's

Confirmation class - begins Sunday, Sept. 29 at 4 p.m. The class will cover the sacraments, Scripture, ministry, and faith leading to confirmation for those who desire on Sunday, Jan. 5, 1986.

Bishop to be consecrated - The Rev. David Johnson, formerly rector of St. Boniface Episcopal Church in Sarasota, Fla., will be consecrated Bishop Coadjutor at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston, Oct. 5, at 11 a.m. If you would like to attend, speak to the Rector.

Inside look at Boston neighborhoods - A bus will leave St. Stephen's at 1 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 6 taking us to the communities of Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and Dorchester to learn more about these Boston neighborhoods and the fine work of the Episcopal City Mission in the area of housing. Don't miss this informative tour and inside look. Sign-up sheets will be at the back of the church and in Walton Rodgers Hall to reserve a place for this afternoon trip.

Wellspring - the "little Episcopal thrift shop" in Hull, directed and guided by the Rev. Diane Edson of St. John's in Hingham is alive and well. However, with the school rush over and the holidays approaching, the stock needs replenishing with the following items: clothing (large sizes for men and women, size 12 and under for children); toys, games, jewelry, knicknacks, household items (small lamps, etc.). If you would please consider Wellspring when doing the fall housecleaning, it would be gratefully received. A large box labeled Wellspring will be available for your gifts.

First Parish

South Shore Cluster - Thursday, Sept. 26 at the United First Parish, 1306 Hancock Street, Quincy. The program will include: 6 to 7 p.m., Social Hour (wine and cheese); 7 to 8 p.m., Dinner ($4 per person); 8 to 9 p.m., Speaker and Discussion - The Rev. Norman V. Naylor.

It is sponsored by the Unitarian-Universalist Mass-Bay District Women and Religion Committee. Focus by Ruth Jacobs, sociologist, author. $4 pre-registration. Information, 875-6634, $5 at the door. Reserve child care. Bring a lunch to share. Beverages provided.

Ballou Channing District - Annual Fall Conference, Saturday, Oct. 5 at the Westminster Unitarian Church, 119 Kenyon Avenue, East Greenwich, R.I. "A New Partnership in Sharing." Call the church office 383-1100 for additional information.

Chemically Free - a program on alcohol and drug issues for junior and senior high school students and parents sponsored by the Social Service League, will be held Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Oct. 2, 9, and 16 at the Walton Rodger's Hall, St. Stephen's. For additional information, call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Parish notes - The Parish Committee has accepted with regret the resignation of Vivian Mulligan from the committee. Ira Bloomfield has been appointed to fill the remaining months of Vivian's term of office. Our parish secretary, Gladys Wicklund, has given her notice of intent to resign in October. The committee accepted her resignation with regret. Newspaper ads have been placed in search of someone to fill this position.

The parsonage is now ready for immediate rental. Please call Gail Bell who is coordinating this project at 383-9837 or her business phone at 749-8833 with any questions or interested perspective tenants.

Village Fair - The Village Fair looks to be a great success thanks to the efforts of the Committee Chairmen. They would greatly welcome your support. Your time, materials, or financial contributions are always welcome. Please contact a chairperson or Gail Bell at 383-9837 or Shelley Weier, 383-1590.

Second Congregational

Coffee volunteers - Please note the sign-up chart near the coffee table in Bates Hall. Coffee volunteers need to start the coffee before church, serve it at 11 a.m. and clean-up afterward. All supplies and information are available in the kitchen.

N.I.C.D. - Over a hundred new churches - each with a commitment to devote ten percent of their income to the mission of our denomination. The real bottom line of church development is not dollars but people - people aided to start a church where none existed, or to renew an existing church. Your gift to N.I.C.D. will enable more people to fulfill the mission of the church in their communities. Contributions, made payable to "Second Congregational church - N.I.C.D." may be sent to the church office or brought to church. Thank you!

Scituate resident Robert Thorndike claims pollution from Cohasset Harbor sources is damaging clam flats in the Scituate Glades.

Resident puts blame on Cohasset never allowed out of the plant.

"Bob (Thorndike) is right about pollution in Cohasset," he said. "There is pollution along Peppermint Brook, near Howard Gleason Road, White Head Beach and the Bellarmine house. But this has zero to do with the treatment plant. It is from people's homes. It is not the sewer treatment plant, but pollution from other places."

Commission Chairman DeSantis, a leading proponent of the town's attempt for an alternative wastewater plan, agreed that various points of contamination are periodically caused by failing septic systems. "And if the state in its infinite wisdom had granted us money to fund on-site repairs, these areas would be cleaned up," he explained.

Cohasset Health Agent Joseph Godzik said he is unsure of the source of the Scituate problem. "It's difficult to understand," he said this week, " that the inner Cohasset Harbor contributes to the Glades pollution. We have White Head Beach on one side with low coloform counts, and on the other side, there are very high counts."

Dr. Godzik samples several points along Cohasset every two weeks. Generally speaking, Godzik said, he finds a fecal colorform count of under 50 per 100 milliliters. If that count becomes higher than 1000, "we become concerned," he added.

At various times, fecal coloform counts have been extremely high in specific areas. Recently, high counts have been found in the Border Street area, he said. That may be caused by a sewer pipe which may have been cracked during last year's blasting and construction there. Also, he noted, an inspection of the homes in that area did not show any infiltration of the system, although two more homes have to be inspected.

A number of failing systems flow into James Brook, he said, which contributes to the pollution standards there. Other failing systems seem to be concentrated around the KoKo Island area, in the parking lots of businesses located adjacent to that property on Route 3A.

About a year ago, a failing system along Howard Gleason Road was detected and fixed, he explained. It's up to the town to detect the source, and then the individual homeowner is required to make the repairs.

The highest fecal coloform count taken by the board of health this summer was in the Border Street culvert. That issue will be reviewed by the health agent and the sewer commission.

Dr. Godzik and the sewer commission disagreed with Thorndike's contention that foam from Mill River carries a high concentration of pollutants to the Glades. "It's difficult to understand how you can get high concentrations of bacteria in foam after it has been aerated and the light has hit it. If there had been bacteria in the foam, by the time it travels to the Glades it would seem like the numbers would be reduced rather than increased," Dr. Godzik stated.

Thorndike brought along a sample test he said he took of the foam at the Glades. The fecal coloform count was extremely high at a level of 8000 per milliliter.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) last sampled Cohasset Harbor water Sept. 11. The data compiled from that test has not yet been evaluated.

According to spokesman Tena Davies, "I don't know how anyone could indentify a specific source of the pollution at the Glades. I'm not sure what evidence has been presented to conclude what is definitely causing the pollution."

As Sewer Commissioner DeSantis said to Thorndike, "if you would have us change the operation of our treatment plant, that has been pre-ordained. We are well beyond that. There may be failing systems, but the DEQE has deprived us of funds to fix the problems that may exist along White Head, Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue. If you would like to expend your energies and have the DEQE reverse this decision - we would send you off with that mission - send them that message."

Thorndike said the issue boils down to "Cohasset is not spending enough money on its environment," noting that Cohasset has a smaller conservation budget than any surrounding town.

Scituate Health Agent Walter Walsh is also quite concerned about the Bassing Beach area.

Aug. 14., certified lab tests determined the fecal coloform count was seven times worse than the acceptable level for swimming at the "Glades on Tides" location.

The acceptable level is 1,000 coloform counts per milliliter and the lab tests found that on Aug. 14, the count was 7,000 coloform count per milimeter.

Walsh said it is perplexing why the state has closed shellfishing on the Scituate side of Bassins Beach but shellfishing is permitted on the Cohasset border.

The lab tests have determined the colo form counts were formed from the intestinal tract of a warm blooded animal.

Walsh said it is not easy to determine the original source but hinted a pollution control study, similiar to the one now underway for the North River, is needed for the area.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SITTING AND STRESS

Sitting is a relatively stressful position. By studying the pressure exerted on lower back discs, we know that sitting is one and a half times more stressful than standing. It is six times more stressful to sit than to lie down. However, correct positioning of the lower back can help eliminate the stress of sitting on the lower back. For instance, one should sit in a straight-backed chair that allows flattening the curve in the lower back. The height of the chair should be such that the knees are at or above hip level. Crossing one leg over the other is helpful in that it tilts the pelvis and helps flatten the lower back. A foot stool that helps elevate the height of bent knees is helpful as well.

Even the most usual and simple of acts can adversely affect one's well-being when it interferes with normal body processes and communication. Alleviation of such points of disruption can lead to the restoration of a total state of well-being and long sought relief from pain. For more information as well as a chiropractic exam for your needs, we welcome your call at the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Our personal concern is your health. Therefore, we accept only those patients we feel we can help. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

Wedding news in Cohasset . . .

O'Toole - Vivian

Lisa Ann O'Toole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin F. O'Toole of Cohasset and James Edmund Vivian, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Vivian, also of Cohasset, were married at a nuptial Mass Sunday, August 5.

The wedding took place at Saint Anthony's Church, Cohasset at 3:30 p.m.

Lisa wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory slipper satin. Antique lace trimmed the sweetheart neckline. Her long sleeves were dotted at the wrist with tiny satin shoe buttons. A long oval train was spotted periodically with ivory satin bows. Her head was adorned with an antique-patterned long delicate lace veil. A bridal bouquet of lavendar flowers and heather coordinated the coloring of the bridesmaids' dresses and their bouquets and touches of lavendar heather in their hair.

Mr. and Mrs. James Vivian

The matron of honor was Lisa's twin sister, Lynn O'Toole Durkin, who also wore her mother's wedding gown just last year. Clover O'Toole, also a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Other bridesmaids were Christine Vivian, the groom's sister; Disa Pratt and Cari Golden, both of Cohasset; Kerry Johnson of Scituate, Sue Paton of Barrington, Rhode Island, and Ellen Hanlon Kearney of Marshfield. The bridesmaids' gowns were of irridescent beige silk shantung bodices, the full length skirts were wide stripes of subtle colors of mauve, beige and deep lavendar.

Elizabeth Jeffrey from Wilmette, Illinois, a second cousin, was the flower girl and wore a handmade ivory gown with a heather halo in her long brown locks.

Mr. Vivian's best man was his brother Stephen. His other brother, David, was head usher. Other ushers were Scott O'Toole, Joseph Durkin, Michael Parziale, Richard Hobson, William Roy, all of Cohasset, and John Kinsley of Lakeville. Black tails with ivory shirts were worn by the men attendants.

Mrs. John Vivian, the groom's mother, wore an appliqued sheer pale pink three-quarter length gown. Her two sons ushered her down the aisle.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Austin O'Toole, wore a coral chiffon mid-calf length gown, and was ushered down the aisle by her son and son-in-law. The two mothers collectively brought the gifts to the altar. Father Richard Bourgeois performed the ceremony and the vows.

The reception was held at Lantana's in Randolph which is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Hart of Cohasset.

Their honeymoon was spent at the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec City, Canada. The Vivians will reside in Wollaston in an antique home.

Mr. Vivian was valedictorian of his class at Gordon College and works at Westwood Lodge in Westwood. He also attends Boston College's Graduate School where he is studying for his doctorate in Psychology.

Mrs. Vivian graduated on the dean's list from Simmons College of Physical Therapy. She is now a licensed Physical Therapist at the Veterans Hospital in Jamaica Plain.

Marsen - Gilman

Beth Ellen Marsden, daughter of Mrs. William Henry Marsen, and the late William Henry Marsen, 454 Jerusalem Road Cohasset, was married to James Henry Gilman III, on August 24 in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Gilman, 7 Old Sudbury Road, Wayland.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Richard J. Bourgeous, O.S.B. Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham, and Rev. Clifford Cutler, St. Stephens Episcopal Church, Cohasset, in a double ring, candle-light nuptial Mass.

The bride was given in marriage by her two brothers, Brian William and William Henry Marsden, Jr.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Maryjane Henry of Gibson, Pennsylvania, and maid of honor was Ms.

Mrs. James Gilman III

Kimberly McCafferty of Orinda, California.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Marianne Connelly of Oswego, N.Y.; Betsey McChesney, Chestnut Hill; Susan Cay, Boston; June Melloni, Bethesda, Maryland; and Elizabeth Gilman, Wayland, sister of the groom.

Miss Kate Fallon, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Ring bearer was Michael Fallon, also a cousin of the bride.

Best man was John Gilman, of Wayland.

Ushers were James Jones, Acton; Anthony Will, Hingham; David Kluger, Boston; Peter Kozlowski, Dover; Stephen France, Warwick, R.I., and Arthur Hartford, of Bridgewater.

A garden reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. William J. Fitzgerald, Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School, Boston College, Babson Graduate School MBA, and is employed by Digital Equipment Corp. as a District Sales Support Manager.

The groom graduated from Wayland High School, and the University of Rhode Island. He is employed at the Bank of Boston in New Product Development.

After a wedding trip to Switzerland and Germany, the couple reside at 10 Cliff Road, Milton, MA.

Museum tours

Art expert Louise Kalish will lead nine half-day tours of the museums and galleries of the Boston area as part of an on-going series offered each year by the South Shore Art Center.

Participants are asked to register in advance for this set of tours at the Center, 103 Ripley Road. Groups will meet every third Thursday at the gallery or museum designated. There will be no December tour. The first tour is scheduled for Sept. 26.

Emphasis this year will be on con temporary art as reflected in Boston and Cambrdige galleries and museums. Kalish has studied at the Massachusetts College of Art, Brandeis University and the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. She exhibits extensively in New England and is a docent at the Rose Museum.

For further information on these tours, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Yard sale & flea market

Saturday, Sept. 28 is the date of the Cohasset Historical Society's fall yard sale and flea market. Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the location is the Society's headquarters, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street.

Dealer spaces are available for $10. Please call 383-0773 or 383-6930 for reservations.

The Society still is accepting contributions of good, useable second-hand items for this fall's sale. Included in the yard sale are such things as household goods, toys, sporting goods, books, clothing, picture frames and artworks, and collectables.

The Historical Society's flea markets and yard sales are one way in which the Society funds it community programs and its three historical museums. Plan to attend this fall's sale to find things not found elsewhere, and arrive early for the best selection.

Chess club meet October 9

Going on its second year of operations, with a growing membership, the Cohasset Chess Club will hold its first meeting of its 1985-86 year Wed., Oct 9 at 8 p.m. The meeting will take place at 172 Main Street, Cohasset.

Cohasset Chess Club President, Tanna Kasperowicz, will preside over the organizational meeting, at which an election of officers will be held for the ensuing year.

Since the Cohasset Chess Club was organized over a year ago, it has attracted over 17 chess players of all ages and abilities (14-60). Exceptional members include but are not limited to: Chris Bernstein, Mariner Newspaper Group Chess Columnist and New York Tournament Player, David Cutler-Publisher of the Mariner Newspaper Group, and 15-year old Peter Kasperowicz, who is teaching a beginning chess class at the Cohasset Community Center.

During the past year, members have been meeting at private homes in Cohasset; however, should the chess club expand any further, the membership may vote to meet in a more public place.

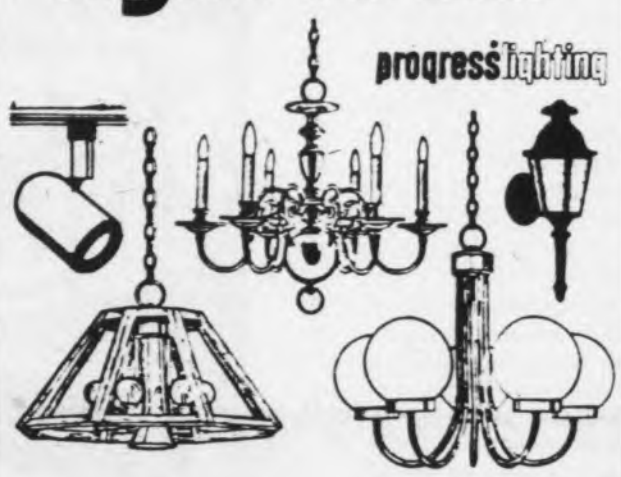
If you are interested in attending the first organizational/playing meeting (our business is usually accomplished in five minutes) please call Tanna Kasperowicz (383-9115) or Dee DeSantis (383-6464) with that information. If you'd like to be on our mailing/calling list for future meetings (we usually meet twice a month) call either Tanna or Dee with that information.

If you'd like to join us, but Wednesday is a bad night, please call with that information, also.

Recruiting awards night

The U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corps is hosting a recruiting meeting Friday, Sept. 27, from 7 to 8 p.m. at the St. Frances Cabrini Church on Hood Road, in North Scituate.

The Annual Awards Night will follow from 8 to 9 p.m. Both events are open to the public—all are welcome.



Young people (both girls and boys) are eligible for membership. The League Cadets range in age from 11½ to 13½ years, and the Senior Sea Cadets from ages 14 to 18 years.

The U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corps is a non-profit youth organization sponsored by the U.S. Navy League. Cadets learn a variety of maritime skills, serve aboard Coast Guard vessels, and they take many special trips.

For further information, come to the Friday meeting and chat with our local Sea Cadets, see their pictures and hear about their adventures. Those unable to attend, please call 545-1120.

Museums to complete season

The Cohasset Historical Society's popular Maritime Museum and Capt. John Wilson Historical House will close for the winter season Sunday, September 29.

The 1985 summer museum season has been the 49th consecutive year for the Society's Capt. Wilson House and the 28th for the Maritime Museum. The two buildings will reopen for public admission next June.

Cohasset's history as a New England seafaring village is portrayed in the Maritime Museum. Frequently judged as "one of the finest small maritime museums" to be found, the Historical Society's museum contains artifacts, models, paintings, prints and documents dating from the town's great "Age of Sail." Subjects represented in the museum's collections include relics of the many shipwrecks which occurred locally, artifacts from Cohasset's 19th century mackerel schooner fishing fleets, examples of equipment belonging to some of the "Deep Sea Captains" whose journeys took them to many areas of the world, models of sailing vessels made by Cohasset's seafarers, and finely executed wood carvings made by the town's shipcarvers. The story of the first and second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is told in pictures and artifacts.

On the Maritime Museum's second floor there is an extensive exhibit of general historical collections, ranging from early Indian stone tools to early housewright's equipment, 19th century cordwainer's tools to old Cohasset school desks, antique hunting decoys to spinning wheels.

The Capt. John Wilson Historical House contains the Society's collection of early household furnishings ranging from kitchenware and furniture to childrens' toys, in the setting of an 1810 Sea Captain's home. Both historical buildings are open each afternoon excluding Mondays, from 1:30 to 4:30 through Sunday, Sept. 29. Admission to each building is 75 cents for adults, 25 cents for children 6 to 12.

Post-season tours of the two buildings may be arranged by calling the Cohasset Historical Society at 383-0773 or 383-6930.

A magical tour

The amazing group of magic-makers from Beverly, "Le Grand David and His Spectacular Magic Company," has created an all-new stage show, and the Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are organizing a trip to see it, Saturday, Nov. 16.

The show begins at 1:30 p.m. The cost of tickets and the bus is $15 per person.

The magic bus departs from Scituate Town Hall at noon to return by 4:30 p.m. Destination: the newly restored Larcom Theatre in Beverly, the second turn-of-the-century playhouse to be renovated and filled with magic by the spectacular magic company acclaimed in Time, Smithsonian, Yankee, and National Geographic "World" magazines.

Their new production "Le Grand David—In Concert" is headed by the same three magicians and features the same troupe as can still be seen at the nearby Cabot Street Cinema Theatre, but the Larcom production offers all-new illusions, curtains, costume and variety entertainment, blended with a veritable concert of magic.

Marco the Magi, Le Grand David, 13-year-old Seth the Sensational, and company have been making magic at the Cabot Street Cinema Theatre in Beverly since 1977 and are approaching their 1,000th performance there.

Together with their supporting cast, this trio of tricksters now presents wonder-making spectacles in the colorful style of singing, dancing, comedy, beautiful costumes, dazzling settings and dozens of mysteries.

In February, 1984, the troupe bought the Larcom Theatre, built in 1912 and named for 19th century Beverly poetess Lucy Larcom. They spent more than a year renovating the stage and the lobby. This fall they are offering only 12 performances of their new production, "Le Grand David—In Concert," conceived and directed by Margo the Magi.

To make your reservation, please call Cohasset Recreation at 383-6791. Deadline for reservations is Thursday, Oct. 31.

Coastline Council aids needy children

By Valerie Kroon

Coastline Council for Children, a citizen's advocacy group under the State Office for Children (OFC), is a group of concerned individuals wishing to improve the quality of life for service-needy children in seven South Shore communities.

Mandated by state OFC legislation in 1972, the Coastline Council serves the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth. It is one of 42 councils state-wide, representing all communities and all working in behalf of children needing services.

Boards representing different interests or concerns are made up of citizen volunteers, all who must either live or work in the area served by the council. Chairman of the Coastline Council is Bonnie Gorman of Weymouth and Nancy McKenna of Braintree serves as vice chairman.

"Children are our most precious natural resource," Gorman said as she opened the monthly meeting last Thursday.

Gorman was an advocate for children's services back when OFC was developed in 1972. Initiated at a time when social service issues were of concern on Beacon Hill, OFC was an attempt to consolidate services state-wide, while also addressing problems, analyzing policy, and developing standards for licensing out-of-home care.

Two OFC employees, a child advocate and a community representative, staff the office at 49 Hayward St., East Braintree. Marsha Lerner-Holbrook of Hingham is child advocate for the Coastline Council area. Working on individual case advocacy, she provides information and handles referrals for families needing services.

"I do everything from looking for a special program for a multi-handicapped child, to helping a low-income family when their gas has been shut off," Lerner-Holbrook said.

Right now, one of Lerner-Holbrook's concerns is to get a new inpatient unit for emotionally disturbed adolescents in the area. A residential treatment unit opened at the Quincy Mental Health Center in September, 1984, but was forced to close in April 1985 following a state mandate forbidding the institutionalization of adolescents in adult-occupied wards.

Another concern for Lerner-Holbrook is development of a secure treatment program for juvenile sex offenders. She's worked on developing a model treatment program.

"There's no program in the state for these kids," she said. "We have a proposal going to the Governor this fall to see if we can get a program off the ground. There's a real need for it in this area."

Other council concerns are addressed by the special interest sub-committees which meet once a month or every six weeks. Sub-committees address issues of child abuse and neglect, special needs, day care, and teen pregnancy. There's also a legislative sub-committee which keeps track of legislative progress and state budget allocations.

Coordinating and working with the citizen volunteers is Mary Thomas of Hingham. She also serves as liaison with the OFC regional office.

"I'm the committee resource person," reports Thomas who holds the position of community representative at the East Braintree office.

There's also a Help for Children Committee chaired by Tony King of Braintree. King previously served "many years" as regional representative for the Coastline Council.

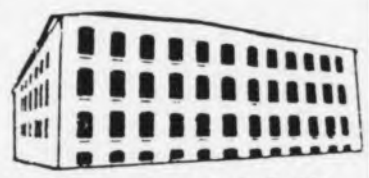
"Our original focus was to try to get more of an overview of services for children," King said of his committee. "We do a yearly needs assessment of the seven towns, to see what services are available and to check current needs. It's enormously time-consuming."

Braintree resident, Nancy McKenna is on the 766 committee. Last year, this committee ran two workshops for parents of special needs chidren. Issues addressed were how to advocate for the special needs child, and what happens after the child reaches age 22 and state funds for services are cut off.

This year, the council developed and printed a "Child Abuse Directory" for distribution in the seven towns, and this past summer a "Resource Guide to State Agencies Serving Children and Adolescents in the Coastline Area" was printed.

Another current council concern is educating the teen mother who has had to drop out of school. The teen pregnancy sub-committee has proposed a new program in conjunction with South Shore Educational Collaborative to assist teenage mothers who want to finish high school. The proposed program calls for in-service child care, training in parenting skills, counseling, and job training to help the young mother become more self-sufficient in the community.

Geri Cooke, committee member and a nurse from Braintree, reports the local OFC office has applied for federal funds to get the program started, and it may take "about a year" for this needed service program to begin.



"We did a community survey and found this to be one area badly in need of services," Cooke said of the proposed educational program.

The day care sub-committee concerns itself with quality daycare. Members visit centers and go over proposals for new ones. They've also compiled guidelines for parents in need of child daycare, and they've organized workshops for family daycare providers.

Last year, the committee worked with the community review committee to review infant-toddler day care programs and this year they'll address area needs for after-school care for school-age children.

Cohasset art teacher Jean O'Malley proudly embraces her two students Elizabeth Good (l) and Shondranette Burke. The pair were winners in a statewide contest sponsored by Channel 5.

Two Cohasset poster winners

Elizabeth Good won first prize in the first grade category of the statewide "A World of Difference" art contest. Shondranette Burke won first prize in the fourth grade category.

The contest was part of a year-long prejudice awareness campaign geared primarily to school age children and adolescents. It was sponsored by Channel 5, the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith, the Greater Boston Civil Rights Coalition, and the Shawmut Bank.

The judging was on three phases. First, a local panel of judges selected and sent three posters from each grade to Channel 5. Then, a separate panel of judges selected 400 posters from over 800 entries. Then, the field was narrowed to 10 from each grade, with a total of 36 finalists.

Phase three of the judging resulted in 12 winners, one from each grade, chosen by Boston artists and community leaders.

The winners were honored at a ceremony in the State House by Gov. Michael Dukakis and representatives of the sponsoring groups. The children and the winning schools received plaques. The 12 posters will illustrate the Channel 5 1986 calendar.

The posters were created and completed in the regular art classes at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

Although poster art is introduced in the fourth grade, expressing ideas visually is an important element in the entire art program, according to art teacher Jean O'Malley, with a different emphasis for each skill, concept and developmental stage of the student.

Because the prejudice awareness campaign seemed relevant to everyone, all elementary grades were involved, with different approaches and lessons for each grade. First grade talked about friendship and illustrated the words "Friends," "Friendship Is Fun" and other slogans the children made up.

Poster art and lettering were emphasized in the middle grades. The fifth and sixth grades, after studing expressionism, design and perspective, created imaginative and visually exciting posters.

It was an enjoyable and worthwhile learning and art project, Mrs. O'Malley said, and the involvement and enthusiasm was strong despite the fact that it took place the last weeks of the school year.

Golden to speak on county government

State Sen. William Golden of Weymouth will be a panelist on a forum on County Government in Massachusetts at the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston Tuesday, Oct. 8.

Senator Golden, the Senate Chairman of the Committee on Counties, will be part of a panel which will include the House Chairman of the Committee on Counties, Representative Michael Morrissey; Plymouth County Commissioner Matthew Striggles; Bristol County Commissioner Patrick Harrington; Theodore Mann, Mayor of Newton; and James Segal of the Massachusetts Municipal Association. The forum will be moderated by Larry Collins of the Boston Globe.

The forum will focus on the role of county government in Massachusetts, and the future of county government. Senator Golden recently directed a statewide tour of county seats, to meet with county officials to discuss the issue of the future of counties.

The forum, which begins at 5 p.m., is being cosponsored by the Bristol County Selectmen's Association to commemorate the 300th anniversary of Bristol and Plymouth Counties.

Academy nominations

Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) announced that he is accepting applications from Tenth District high school students for nominations to United States service academies for the academic year 1986-87. The deadline for applying for nominations to the Air Force, Military, Naval and Merchant Marine Academies is November 15, 1985.

As in the past, all academy applications will be reviewed by Studds' Service Academy Nominee Selection Committee, which is comprised of distinguished southeastern Massachusetts residents. The Selection Committee will recommend the most qualified applicants from the Tenth District to Studds, who will forward these recommendations to the academies as his nominees.

Cohasset Business briefs . . .

John H. Dean

Sales and marketing VP

John H. Dean of Cohasset has been appointed vice president, sales and marketing, of The Stone Company, a planning, engineering, and building firm in Wayland.

Prior to this appointment, Dean served five years as a sales engineer for Stone.

Dean also has three years industrial sales experience and is a member of the Society of Marketing Professional Services (SMPS).

He is a graduate of Colby College in Waterville, Maine, where he earned a B.A. in business administration.

A resident of Cohasset, he lives with his wife, Christina (Cline), and daughter, Emily Ann.

The Stone Company is one of the leading full-service construction firms in New England, serving a variety of clients and handling a wide range of projects, including commercial/institutional, industrial, health care, and specialties.

Ekberg honored

Saul Cohen, President of Hunneman & Co., Inc. Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate, recently presented Alna Ekberg of the Cohasset office with the Hunneman Achievement Award for outstanding and distinguished performance in real estate sales.

Mrs. Ekberg has participated in more than $4 million in transactions between January 1 and September 1 of this year and was honored as the top associate in the Hunneman organization of nearly 300 sales associates.

The announcement was made at the September sales meeting of Hunneman & Co. held at the Holiday Inn in Woburn.

Alna Ekberg

Ekberg credits her success to a combination of factors: her concern for the varied needs of her customers in their search for the right home, often in a new town or state; the confidence her clients feel that they can place in the Hunneman firm to market their homes in the most professional manner; and a thorough knowledge of the real estate market on the South Shore.

Mrs. Ekberg resides in Cohasset with her husband, Kenneth, principal of the Deer Hill School and their daughter, Karen, a junior at Brown University in Providence, R.I.

She is an elected member of the Cohasset Recreation Commission, a member of the Cohasset Cable Council, the Cohasset Tennis Club, the Community Garden Club and the First Parish Unitarian Church.

The Hunneman office is located at 17 South Main Street, Cohasset and is one of 23 branch office from New Hampshire to Cape Cod.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT Norfolk Division
Docket No. 85P1657-E1
Estate of ALFRED W. FRIEL late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that Ramona A. Friel of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on October 9, 1985.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the peitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the ninth day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty-five.

Cable is focusing in on community issues

By Charlotte Carney

Stop. Look. Listen. And focus your attention on Focus - a live one-hour talk show which takes place at the American Cable Television studio in Cohasset every Thursday evening at 7 p.m.

It can be viewed on Channel 3, and again on Channel 12 on Sunday evening at 7 p.m.

Focus is an exciting concept in community programming with unlimited possibilities. The show is produced and directed solely by volunteers, featuring a panel of experts on the subject to be discussed that evening.

The show's producer, Helen Mallers of Cohasset said, "Focus deals with subjects that are not in the limelight down here on the South Shore. Subjects that you would see more in the newspapers in Boston. People think that child abuse, sexual abuse, drug and alcohol abuse don't exist in the South Shore. And it seems to me that we live in some sort of an island down here. We frequently have our heads buried in the sand, and I'd like to talk about some of the issues that are here that may be difficult issues; that people do not necessarily want to talk about; and we want to present them to the public in a way that is acceptable to them and that they will learn from it."

The topic of last Tuesday's program was "Child Sexual Abuse," and it was addressed sensitively and informatively by a well-qualified panel of guests hosted by Susan Etkind, a Licensed Independent Clinical Social Worker with a private practice in Cohasset; Joan Kovach, a psychiatric therapist at Whitman Counseling Center, also with a private practice in Cohasset; Wendy Lobel, a therapist at the South Shore Mental Health Center in Quincy; Ginny O'Connell, L.I.C.S.W., a supervisor at the Mass. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in Braintree; and Al Baptiste, a clinical supervisor at the Dept. of Social Services in Weymouth.

Although child sexual abuse is a sensitive and complicated subject, the panel handled the intricacy of its complexities well and addressed the call from the public with genuine concern and appropriate recommendations.

When one realized that this interesting and informative program is produced for the community on a strictly volunteer basis, one was pleasantly surprised at the quality of subject matter, technical direction and selection of participating guests.

Mallers explained that "most of these volunteers are high school kids, doing this in their spare time."

According to Stephen Farquhar of American Cable Co., "American Cable signed a contract with the community to supply a studio, appropriate equipment, and workshops to train the volunteers who would then run and operate a local access station for the community. The secretarial staff and the program director are the only paid staff at the station."

Farquhar added, "a truly successful situation depends upon the person or persons involved with any given project. It is really up to the individuals who are presenting the program to make it a success."

When looking behind the scene at Focus, one viewed Helen Mallers, producer; Carl Becker, director; Alan Mackey, camera; Ian Knox, technical director; and Maria Diaz, production assistant.

The volunteers who work at the Cohasset studio have on-the-job-training as well as past experience and future dreams.

Their lack of monetary gratification is overshadowed by their desire to learn and grow and continue in their chosen field in television, and to be part of something they feel is truly meaningful.

Mallers' compassion and interest in her community and those around her is not confined to her duties on Focus. Mallers works for the South Shore Collaborative as a teacher's aide, working with multiply handicapped children.

"As far as my experience is concerned," she said, "when I was in teacher's college on an economic opportunity grant, my work study grant job was to work on the audio visual studio, putting out close circuit t.v. for the university. At the end of one year, I was directing and producing three different programs for the university."

Maria Diaz, a graduate of Boston College in broadcast journalism, said she was working at the station "to keep practicing broadcast journalism and the camera work, and also because I think it is important to have community television. With community cable, people have the opportunity to see what is happening in their local community. I think it is really important to help people see that community."

For Carl Becker and Ian Knox, both sophomores at Cohasset High School, it is an opportunity to train for future in television. Mallers said of the boys, "I couldn't do it without them. Their technical expertise is invaluable. Carl does the lion's share of the work. Alan Mackey also devotes a great deal of time to our projects."

Some of the subjects discussed on Focus have been addressed in the newspapers or other local or national media. But, Mallers maintained, there seems to be more of an impact when our local experts tackle these same problems, answering questions brought about by problems in our local community, making them more real, more relevant.

Focus will continue to bring exciting thought-provoking shows 'live" every Thursday evening from 7 to 8 p.m. Programs that are scheduled in the future include: mental health; infertility; domestic violence which will be seen Tuesday, Oct. 15; women's role in the church; drug abuse; and an interesting hour with our local representatives, Mary Jeanette Murray and State Senator William Golden.

Focus is aimed at the community - our neighborhoods. Producer Mallers and her staff want people "to watch and know that we have something to say."

Focus encourages viewer participation and a studio audience is always welcomed.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

In defense of 'Yankees'

Prejudice is a funny thing, a mole that when under frontal attack goes underground sometimes reemerging wearing the battle stripes of those who lately were assaulting it. For instance, once over brie I was asked by one of black Boston pol Mel King's left-leaning supporters if there were any white Boston pols I liked and trusted. I answered, "Joe Timilty, Ray Flynn and Maura Hennigan."

"Oh, they're just dumb Irish politicians," she said unselfconsciously.

"And that's just bigotry," I returned, "every bit as evil as the bigotry against blacks."

As usual I was supremely in the right in ruining a dinner partner's brie. It seems to me that for prejudice such as hers to exist at least two conditions need to be met. The first is a mythology of calumny, in short a lie, about the victim. This is the sort of notion that the dinner partner had that the Boston Irish are dismissible as dumb; or the sort of notion that traditionally held that blacks are slothful about all things save their sexuality.

The second necessary precondition of prejudice is the notion that one's prejudice about a particular group isn't prejudice; rather it is permissible due to extenuating circumstances that absolve the bigot of bigotry. God-fearing Christians, progressive-minded liberals, then, can have the fun of being small-minded without the necessity of owning up to same.

In the case of the dinner partner whom I made choke on her brie, she had concluded that the Irish in general were responsible for the status of Boston's blacks. Therefore, she "reasoned," she could despise the whole crowd and no one would call her on it. In the case of blacks, so ingrained was predudice against them that despising them was taken for granted and thereby condoned. Lynching a black was not considered the taking of a life, it was held the equivalent of shooting a raccoon..."coon" of course being one of the pejoratives blacks were called.

I go into this because I have started to realize that both the above preconditions of prejudice apply to a group that may surprise you—to "W.A.S.P.S." or "Yankees" or whatever you call 'em around the dinner table. From Peter Lucas of the Herald to most of our television stations to Mike Barnicle of the Globe, the first condition—the lie—is ever present in the media's portrayal of what I will call Yankees. Yankees are described as funny-talking, long-nosed, pointy-headed, jet-setting proper Bostonians living behind high fences off inherited wealth in suburbs so distant from Boston that commutation, and therefore work, is inconvenient. It is said they always still vote (when seldom they vote) for Republicans who don't still control the party that doesn't still run the state.

The second precondition of prejudice, the "extenuating circumstance," is the notion that Yankees are all well-off, well-established, and socially irresponsible; therefore it is assumed one may say what one pleases about them without fear of being called on it. One may say about a Yankee what one would never dare to say aloud about a Catholic, a Jew, a black, or a gay without incitation to verbal riot.

There are two things the matter with Yankee-bating, which I have come to believe is quite widespread in our shallow politics and shallower media. The first is that, like the aspersions cast on other groups, the substance of the prejudice is indeed a lie. A few particulars...

Of the English-descended citizens of Massachusetts the great majority are not rich. They may be somewhat better off than average due to having been in the land for several generations; but by and large they are hard-working small business types who sit on boards of selectmen and live modestly.
